ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

My curiosity about the Parākhya was first raised by a quotation of a single half-line from its sixth chapter (6:14ab) by Aghoraśiva in his Nāda-kārikāvṛtti, introducing which Aghoraśiva suggested that Rāmakaṇṭha's doctrine of a subtle nāda (through which all speech is intelligible) was incompatible with Saiddhāntika scripture. I was aware that a text with the name Parākhya was transmitted in the Mysore codex which I had found to transmit the text of the Kiraṇa closest to that presupposed by Rāmakaṇṭha's Kiraṇavṛtti, but I had supposed it to be likely to be a late South Indian composition bearing the early name, as so many of the Siddhāntatantras preserved in manuscripts in the IFP in Pondicherry are, and had not investigated it. Realising that the Parākhya appeared not to be transmitted elsewhere, I first returned to Mysore to do so in July 1996 at the encouragement of Professor SANDERSON and quickly discovered with delight that it was largely doctrinal and demonstrably early because it contained the large number of verses attributed to it by Kṣemarāja in the tenth chapter of his Svacchandatanthroddyota.

My enthusiasm subsided when I first made efforts to read the text after having transcribed it. Not feeling confident of being able satisfactorily to interpret enough of it to attempt an edition, I announced that I was preparing for publication an 'annotated transcription of the surviving chapters' (GOODALL 1998:xli, fn. 94). My ambitions grew as I understood more of the text, and this book is the result. This understanding grew largely because I attempted to teach chapters 1, 2 and 4 of the text in Oxford and because I read parts of it with a number of people privately. Among them I should like first to thank Dr. Harunaga ISAACSON for his constant encouragement, detailed and illuminating comments, and very many invaluable suggestions. Apart from the countless occasions on which he has discussed parts of the text with me, he has written me a veritable book of letters of commentary, touching on everything from punctuation and paragraphing to the constitution and interpretation of the text and of passages adduced in the annotation. That so many blemishes have been removed (many still remain, I am sure) is in large measure because of his patient efforts.¹ I thank Dr. Kei KATAOKA for repeatedly questioning my interpretations of a number of the most awkward passages, for his many improving suggestions and for the extremely stimulating reading sessions of the Parākhya that we enjoyed, together with Dr. Harunaga ISAACSON, in the summer of 1999. I am most grateful too to Dr. Diwakar ACHARYA, the only person with whom I read through and discussed the whole text at a single stretch (in January 2001), which was as illuminating as it was pleasurable, as well as to Dr. Peter BISSCHOP and Dr. Csaba DEZSŐ, who both read large parts of the book and suggested a number of improvements. I am grateful to Dr. Alex WATSON for illuminating for me a number of passages in chapter 1, as well as to Dr. Charlotte SCHMID, Dr. Pascale HAAG-BERNÈDE, Dr. Godabarisha MISHRA, Dr. Judit TÖRZSÖK, Dr. Eva WILDEN, and Mme Usha COLAS-CHAUHAN, all of whom made suggestions (or constructively expressed disagreement) that helped me. I thank also Dr. Somdev VASUDEVA, without whose invaluable thesis and without whose presence in Pondicherry in April 2001, my 'understanding' of the chapter on yoga would have been yet more painfully limited, and whose alphabetic sorting program saved me weeks of labour on the pāda-index. The patient criticism of Dr. Gérard COLAS enabled me to see flaws in the presentation of a number of arguments relating to the placing of the Parākhya in its literary context. I thank Dr. T. GANESAN of the IFP and Dr. S. A. S. SARMA of the EFEO for comments and suggestions and Isabelle RATIÉ for her corrections to the résumé. At what seemed like the eleventh hour, Dr. Arlo GRIFFITHS most kindly rushed me his numerous helpful comments on my introduction. Some of his punctilious and persuasively defended typographical suggestions could not be incorporated, but he may be assured that they will influence my practice hereafter. I should have loved to have had the precious comments of Dr. BRUNNER, had not ill health prevented her from being able to read this book when it was at last ready to be read.

Finally I should like to thank Professor SANDERSON, who first taught and encouraged me in the study of Śaivism, who has been invariably generous with his time and with his knowledge, who has put unpublished work of his at my disposal and who has given me many useful suggestions ¹Where emendations and ideas are attributed to him without reference to a letter, this should be because they were not advanced in a letter, but there may be one or two written communications that I have mislaid.

Many of these peoples' names figure in the apparatus and notes for their conjectures and suggestions. But they also often helped me by removing poor conjectures and showing me how the transmitted text could be interpreted, and so their assistance is in many places invisible.

I am grateful to the various institutions who have allowed me to consult the manuscripts used for this book: the Oriental Research Institute of the University of Mysore; the French Institute of Pondicherry; the Government Oriental Manuscripts Library, Madras; the National Archives of Kathmandu; the Bodleian Library, Oxford; the Akhila Bharatiya Sanskrit Parishad, Lucknow; the Oriental Research Institute and Manuscripts Library, Trivandrum; the Oriental Institute, Baroda; the Hoshiarpur Vishveshvaranand Vedic Research Institute; the Cambridge University Library; the Shri Ranbir Sanskrit Research Institute, Jammu; and the Nepal-German Manuscript Preservation Project.

A final word of thanks is addressed to Wolfson College, Oxford, who welcomed me back as a Junior Research Fellow in Indology to continue my studies after my doctoral thesis, and to the Ecole française d'Extrême-Orient, under whose aegis I have dedicated many months to finishing this book.

PREFACE

Explanatory remarks about the Śaiva Siddhānta and its treatment in modern secondary literature

In my preface to the first volume of the Kiraṇavṛtti (GOODALL 1998), I alluded with approval to the stand taken by ISAACSON in the eighth of his 'Stellingen' submitted with his unpublished thesis (*1995).

Most students of classical India must at some time be made to acknowledge that '[t]he quantity and quality of the secondary literature in many areas of Indian studies is such that bibliographical completeness has become something that is often rather to be avoided than striven for.'

When I came to recast this book to be submitted for a degree to a German university, I realised that such a cavalier dismissal of the secondary literature would be unacceptable. I do not however intend to spend long grazing in these for the most part rather barren pastures; in what follows immediately below, I intend to do no more than show why a certain number of books purportedly about the Śaiva Siddhānta are not amply referenced and discussed in the pages that follow.

Many indologists, if they have heard of the Śaiva Siddhānta at all, are likely to have been encouraged to suppose it to be a uniquely Tamilian, Vedānta-influenced theological school with its origins in the twelfth century—a school that acknowledged as scripture a body of Sanskrit texts called āgamas that prescribed the mode of worship in South Indian Śaiva temples, as well as a body of Tamil devotional hymns to Śiva, but that was really based on a group of fourteen Tamil theological works, the Meykaṇṭa-cāttiraṇkal, almost all of which are supposed to have been written in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. This is, on the whole, the picture we find given in a number of widely disseminated general surveys of 'Hinduism', such as, for example, BROCKINGTON (1992:140–5) and KLOSTERMAIER (1989:253).² This is in fact a very distorted image, and what is true in it applies only to a largely post-twelfth-century South Indian development of a much older pan-Indian religious school.³

Even the more specialised survey material presents a rather confused picture of the context of this study, namely the early (i.e. twelfth- and pre-twelfth-century), pan-Indian Śaiva Siddhānta. After finding little help in GONDA's Viṣṇuism and Śivaism: A Comparison (1996; reprint from 1970) and nothing but extremely brief and uninvestigative summaries of what was deemed philosophical in a small handful of randomly selected Saiddhāntika works offered by DASGUPTA 1955,⁴ the bewildered indol-

²It would be unfair to place BROCKINGTON's rather careful compressed account of some essential facts next to KLOSTERMAIER's treatment without at least remarking that the two works are quite different in quality. KLOSTERMAIER will set down almost any manner of thing as fact (particularly, it seems to me, if it is to the detriment of Śaivism), and most pages of his sloppy book contain something to suggest that he is not interested in discovering truth. Thus he tells us (1989:247) that the teachings of the 'even now flourishing Śaiva Siddhānta' are 'largely identical' with those of the Pāsupatas; that '[b]etween 700 and 1000 C.E., Śaivism appears to have been the dominant religion of India, due largely to the influence of the sixty-three Nāyanmārs'; and that the ritual taught in the 'Śaiva Āgamas' (1989:251) 'resembles that followed by the Vaiṣṇavas, except for the fact that Śaivas still observe animal—and occasionally human—sacrifices'. A footnote accompanies the last surprising assertion, but instead of substantiating it, it only gives information about recent editions of Saiddhāntika works published by the IFP. And to give just one more example of this sort of crassness (from hundreds more to be found in this willfully misled and misleading book), from KLOSTERMAIER's table of dates we are informed (1989:421) that the '[b]eginning of the Śaivasiddhānta' is to be dated to ca. 1250.

³It is perhaps worth drawing attention to two books on 'Hinduism' for the 'general reader' that try to correct this distortion: FLOOD 1996:162–4 and GOODALL 1996.

⁴In this fifth volume of A History of Indian Philosophy, misleadingly subtitled Southern Schools of Śaivism, DASGUPTA has briefly summarised works that happened to lay to hand and that might be considered all to belong to the Śaiva Siddhānta—the Śivajñānabodha (1955:24–7), the Mataṅga (1955:28–9), the Paṣkara (1955:29–37), the 'Vātulāgama' and 'Vātulantra' (1955:38–9), the Tamil Tiruvācakam of Māṇikkavācakar (1955:149–59) and the Tattvaparakāśa (1955:159–72)—but there is little in the way of synthesis or useful commentary, and a number of the summaries that are offered, including that of the only early Siddhāntānta (the Mataṅga), are the perfunctory and unenthusiastic products of a man not interested in the subject. As DASGUPTA tells us (1955:39–40),

A more comprehensive account of the Āgamas could easily have been given, but that would have involved only tiresome repetition. Most of the Āgamas deal with the same sort of subjects more or less in the same manner with some incidental variations as regards their emphasis on this ogist reader in search of guidance not unnaturally turns to the Harrasowitz series A History of Indian Literature, in which two books are found that cover material belonging to the early Śaiva Siddhānta, the second of them without intending to do so: Jan GONDA's Medieval Religious Literature in Sanskrit (1977) and GOUDRIAAN's and GUPTA's pioneering Hindu Tantric and Śākta Literature (1981). Any first attempt at taking stock of a large body of largely unpublished literature is likely soon to require revision in the light of new discoveries, and so it is no criticism to say that GOUDRIAAN's work could now be bettered in some areas. At the outset GOUDRIAAN somewhat confounds the unwary by attempting to draw a false distinction between 'Āgamas' on the one hand—which are typically South Indian, or at least preserved only in the South, and which he actually wishes to exclude from his survey—and Tantras on the other, which are typically North Indian and which he sees as his subject (1981:7–9).⁵ It is true of course that the Siddhāntatantras (which correspond to GOUDRIAAN's category 'Āgamas') can to an extent be set apart from other Śaiva tantras in that they form a coherent well-defined group and intend to teach a single coherent body of doctrines. But, as GOUDRIAAN also recognises (1981:9), they actually share a common background with other Tantric Śaiva literature. This GOUDRIAAN later illustrates by treating or mentioning a number of Siddhāntatantras transmitted in the North: the Niśvāsa (1981:33–6),⁶ the Sarvajñānottara and the Kālottara (1981:21 and 38–9), the Dīkṣottara (1981:48–9), and the Pārameśvara (1981:21). But we cannot expect to find here introductory remarks about the early Śaiva Siddhānta, for this was not GOUDRIAAN's subject and he did not recognise these works to belong to it. GONDA's somewhat earlier account of the 'Śivaite Āgama Literature', by contrast, recognises or that subject.

There are some slight disputations with rival systems of thought, as those of the Buddhists, Jains and the Sāṃkhya. But all this is very slight and may be practically ignored. There is no real contribution to any epistemological thought. We have only the same kind of stereotyped metaphysical dogma and the same kind of argument that leads to the admission of a creator from the creation as of the agent from the effects.

⁵I have attempted to show (GOODALL 1998:xxxvi–xxxix) that this distinction is unhelpful and is not used in the primary literature.

that 'the names āgama and tantra sometimes alternate' (1977:202) and that some tantras/āgamas are found transmitted in the South and the North (1977:165–6 and 202); but it presupposes nevertheless an unhelpful opposition between the Northern and Southern traditions, in particular between a Northern school of non-dualist exegesis and a Southern dualist one, and this leads to confusion.⁷ GONDA offers (1977:180–215) a number of résumés of āgamas, but they belong to rather different currents of thought,⁸ and relations between them are not articulated.

Recent, more specialised treatments in secondary literature of the Śaiva Siddhānta tend to be disappointingly weak, by which I mean narrow in the range of sources consulted and poorly argued,⁹ or to be confined to a very particular period and not intended to present historical develop-⁷Thus, for instance, he speaks of the (Kashmirian) Mataṅgavṛtti being an attempt to present the Mataṅga as 'advaitic' (1977:211), and he echoes (1977:212) DASGUPTA's mistaken assertion that in his Tattvaparakāśavṛtti the South Indian Aghoraśiva has tried to read 'some sort of dualism though that is hardly consistent' into Bhoja's (Northern) Tattvaparakāśa. In point of fact, as is evident to anyone who reads them, the Mataṅga, the Mataṅgavṛtti, the Tattvaparakāśa and the Tattvaparakāśavṛtti are all dualist.

Hardly more edifying is Guy L. BECK's Sonic Theology: Hinduism and Sacred Sound (1995), pp. 148–171 of which are devoted to 'Śaivism: Sacred Sound as the Energy of Śiva'. Here BECK recognises that Sadyojyotis through to Aghoraśiva are the 'chief formulators of Śaiva Siddhānta theology in Sanskrit' (p. 157), and yet he quotes instead such later authorities as Mariasusai DHAVAMONY 1971 (p. 160), who relied almost entirely on later Tamil sources, K. SIVARAMAN 1973 (pp. 160–1), who appears to have based much of what he wrote on the late Paṣṭakārabhāṣya, and N. R. BHATT (p. 153), about whom, after quoting a somewhat speculative passage from an interview transcript, in which BHATT characterises 'the original Śaiva Āgama culture', BECK states (ibid.): 'Bhatt presumably drew upon his extraordinary knowledge of a large range of published and unpublished Āgama texts for this characterization.'

ment,¹⁰ or, because of a current trend in Indian publishing, to be entirely unrevised presentations of very old research, often respectable in its own time, but now plainly long surpassed in many respects.¹¹ Two 'new' works of the latter category that have recently appeared are NANDIMATH 2001, a wide-ranging and informative thesis submitted, according to its preface, to the University of London in 1930 and now published, alas without revision, seventy-one years later;¹² and Mary LAW's recent translation (2000) of Hilko Wiardo SCHOMERUS' Der Āiva-Siddhānta. Eine Mystik Indiens. Nach den tamulischen Quellen bearbeitet und dargestellt. Since so much about the Śaiva Siddhānta has been discovered since 1912, every paragraph of the introductory chapter of this latter work, in which SCHOMERUS locates in place and time the tradition he examines, cries out for commentary;¹³ sadly this new translation offers not one editorial

¹¹Of course I do not mean to imply that all aged secondary literature has so dated that it has little to offer us. Moreover, many erudite annotated translations of scholars of the nineteenth century have not been bettered since: we must be grateful to Indian publishers for offering us reprints of works related to the Tamil Śaiva Siddhānta by the likes of HOISINGTON (1853–4; reprinted in MUDALIAR 1979) and POPE (1900; reprinted 1995).

¹³Consider, for example, SCHOMERUS' somewhat naïve dating of 'the Āgamas' (2000:6, 8–9) to before the fifth century on the strength of their being discussed in the Sūtasamhitā, which claims to be part of the Skandapurāṇa, of which BENDALL had found a manuscript in Nepal that he supposed to have been written in the sixth century.

From the work of ADRIAENSEN, BAKKER and ISAACSON (1994 and 1998) we know that early Nepalese witnesses transmit a text that is entirely different from what has hitherto been printed as 'the Skandapurāṇa' and that the Sūtasamhitā formed no part of this Ur-Skandapurāṇa. The Sūtasamhitā has rather the appearance of a South Indian non-dualist work with Vedāntic and Śaiva/Smārta sympathies. The date of its composition is uncertain; HAZRA implies (1940:161), that it must have been written before 1300 AD because it has received a commentary by Mādhavācārya.

Yet other recent publications whose authors and titles might lead one to expect to find in them some treatment of the history and development of the Śaiva Siddhānta—N. R. BHATT's La religion de Śiva d'après les sources sanskrites (2000) and R. NAGASWAMY's Śiva Bhakti (1989)—do not fulfil this expectation. N. R. BHATT has contributed much to the study of the Śaiva Siddhānta through his editions, but in this study, rich as it is in references to primary sources, the sources are predominantly non-tantric, and it is the mythology, iconography and public worship of Śiva that he presents rather than Śaiva theologies and their history. NAGASWAMY's work touches on many aspects of South Indian Śaivism, but it is primarily about the thought-world of the devotee and poet Appar.

But there have in fact been considerable advances made in the study of the early Śaiva Siddhānta over the past century, principally by scholars working in or with the French Institute of Pondicherry, such as N. R. BHATT.¹⁵ This institution has over the last fifty years amassed a manuscript collection that is particularly rich in Saiddhāntika works and has, often in conjunction with the Pondicherry branch of the Ecole française d'Extrême-Orient, edited a large number of previously unpublished Sanskrit works of the Śaiva Siddhānta. And francophone scholars in some way associated with this institution, notable among whom are Dr. Hélène BRUNNER-LACHAUX and Professor Pierre-Sylvain FILLIOZAT, have produced several richly annotated translations (sometimes with editions). The important work of these scholars is no doubt gradually percolating down into other secondary and into tertiary literature; but it still seems necessary to preface this edition with a rehearsal of clarificatory remarks that rebut some fundamental and tenacious misconceptions in secondary literature about the Śaiva Siddhānta.

Long before the twelfth century the Śaiva Siddhānta was the name of a theological school that has only in recent centuries come to be associated exclusively with the Tamil-speaking South. Its corpus of literature was entirely in Sanskrit: a body of scriptural texts (āgama/tantra/siddhānta) as well as a body of exegetical literature, ritual manuals (paddhati) etc. It is striking that this literature is today found transmitted almost exclusively in manuscripts from the far South of India and in the far North, in Kashmir and Nepal.¹⁶ But we know from the inscriptional record that the Śaiva Siddhānta was once (in the second half of the first Christian millennium) spread across much of the rest of India,¹⁷ and two of its scriptures,

¹⁴It is perhaps worth mentioning in passing a book from the following year, 1913, that is also regularly reprinted and has also inevitably dated: BHANDARKAR's Vaiṣṇavism, Śaivism and Minor Religious Systems (1995 reprint). BHANDARKAR's brief treatment of the Śaiva Siddhānta (1995:177–81) is based solely on a chapter of the doxographical Sarvadarśanasamgraha and has been entirely superseded by TORELLA 1979 and BRUNNER 1981.

¹⁷Of course a full survey of the evidence for the spread of the Śaiva Siddhānta (and of other Śaiva cults) furnished by the inscriptions is a desideratum. But that would be beyond the scope of these introductory remarks; instead, I refer below to a handful of inscriptions that testify to a Saiddhāntika presence well before the twelfth century from the East, West, North and South of the sub-continent.

Among the earliest inscriptional references to the Śaiva Siddhānta, an inscription in the Kailāsanātha in Kāñcī (Tamil Nadu) of the Pallava King Narasiṃha II (also called Rājasimha and Atyantakāma), who reigned in the last twenty-seven years of the seventh century, has been fairly frequently discussed (most recently by DAVIS 1991:12, FILLIOZAT 1994:xxii–xxiii, fn. 1, and SANDERSON 2002:9, fn. 6). I should just like to add that I suspect that there is intended to be a rather more explicit punning allusion to the King having received Saiddhāntika initiation than I have seen hitherto mentioned in print. The half-verse in question reads (HULTZSCH 1890:12, verse 5cd): śaktiṣuṇṇāri-vargo viditabahunayaḥ śaivasiddhāntamārge śrīmān atyantakāma[h] kṣatasakalamalo dhurdharaḥ pallavānām. HULTZSCH's natural interpretation of this is (1890:13–14): '... the illustrious Atyantakāma, the chief of the Pallavas, who crushed the multitude of his foes by his power (or spear), whose great statesmanship was well known and who had got rid of all impurity (by walking) on the path of Śaiva doctrine'. The allusion to the Saiddhāntika notion of a material impurity (mala) that is the fundamental fetter that binds souls to worldly existence and that can only be removed by initiation is plain. But I strongly suspect that the expression śaivasiddhāntamārge is intended to be a trigger that invites the reader to reconsider the sense also of the preceding two epithets, the second of which may be taken to refer to the king attaining knowledge of the great (i.e. true) doctrine of the Śaiva Siddhānta (as well as alluding to another biruda, 'Bahunaya', as HULTZSCH suggests (1890:14, fn. 1)), and the first might be rendered 'the group of whose [internal] enemies [i.e. either those of the senses or those of the passions] was suppressed by [a descent of divine] power [in initiation]'. (For the characterisation of initiation as divine power, see, e.g., Mokṣakārikā 96; for the use of the expression arivarga to refer to the senses, cf., e.g. Raghuvamśa 4:60; for the use of the same expression to refer to the passions, cf. Raghuvamśa 17:45 and Arthaśāstra 1.7.1.)

SANDERSON (2002:8–10, fn. 6) has referred to and discussed two further seventh-century inscriptional references to kings being initiated into the Śaiva Siddhānta: that of the Eastern Gaṅga Devendravarman in 682 AD (year 184 of the Gaṅga era, the commencement of which has been established by MIRASHI 1952; the copper-plate grant in question has been edited by GHOSHAL (1952) and that of the Cālukya king the Niśvāsa and the Sarvajñānottara, are mentioned in a Cambodian inscription of the tenth-century.¹⁸ Although I am not aware of inscriptions Vikramāditya I of Bādāmī in 660 AD (see the Amudālapāḍu Plates of Vikramāditya I, ed. SIRCAR (1962).

Still further North, in today's Madhyapradesh, evidence of a ninth-century royal initiation and of a lineage of Saiddhāntika ācāryas is provided by two tenth-century or early eleventh-century inscriptions edited by KIELHORN (1892; EI I, pp. 251–70 and 351–61) and also discussed by NANDIMATH (2001:85–8) and SANDERSON (*1996:31–2), among others. The initiation in question is that of a certain Avantivarman by Purandara, referred to in verse 49 of the Bilhari Chedi inscription (EI I, p. 259; but see the text and interpretation as later corrected by KIELHORN in EI I, p. 353) and from verses 10–13 of the Ranod (Araṇipadra) inscription (EI I, p. 355). (The following two verses record the founding of maṭhas by Purandara at Mattamayūra and Raṇapadra.) Many inscriptions of this area from this period up to the thirteenth century mention later ācāryas with Saiddhāntika initiation names: see BANERJI 1931, esp. pp. 110–15, developed further by HANDIQUI 1949:337–42 and MIRASHI 1950, then MIRASHI 1955, esp. pp. cl–clxi, and PATHAK 1960:28ff.

Further to the North-West, the Rajor inscription of Mathanadeva of 960 AD testifies to the presence of Saiddhāntika initiates in Rajasthan (ed. KIELHORN 1897; EI III, pp. 263–7).

In the far West, the Karhad Plates of the Rāṣṭrakūṭa king Kṛṣṇa III record a gift to a Saiddhāntika ascetic in 959 AD (ed. BHANDARKAR 1897). And the Kharepatan Plates of Raṭṭarāja (ed. KIELHORN 1897; EI III, pp. 292–302) allude to the disciples of a Saiddhāntika guru called Ambhojaśambhu of the Karkaroṇi-santāna of the Mattamayūra lineage in the Konkan in 1008 AD (verso of plate 3). My attention was first drawn to this inscription by NANDIMATH (2001:88–9), who immediately thereafter refers to the composition in 938 AD of a Naimittikakriyānusandhāna by a certain Brahmaśambhu (the surviving Nepalese palm-leaf manuscript is in Calcutta and is described by Haraprasad SHĀSTRĪ 1925:1015–16) who describes himself as belonging to a lineage of Karkaroṇi gurus. The suspicion is not voiced by NANDIMATH, but it seems not impossible that the Ambhojaśambhu of the inscription should have been the same man: it was common practice to vary the elements of ipitiatory names with synonyms (see, e.g., BRUNNER 1998:xlvi), and I think it possible that ambhoja, although we expect it to mean lotus, may have been used as a name of Brahmā, as are two other words that can be analysed to mean 'water-born', namely kañja (see, e.g., Parākhya 6:46) and, I think, kaja (see Mālinīvijayavārttika 252c, in which HANNEDER has, however, emended kajo 'ghora iti to kajy aghora iti: see 1998:211). Also conceivable, as suggested to me by Dr. Somdev VASUDEVA, is that Ambhojaśambhu is an error for Āmbhojaśambhu (cf. Pauskara, derived from Puṣkara, as a name for Brahmā). An examination of the MS may reveal that the work is that of the Brahmaśambhu frequently cited in the paddhati literature that postdates the Somaśambhupaddhati and that has been assumed lost (see BRUNNER 1998:459).

A number of these references I found with the help of DAVIS (1991:168, fn. 24) and VAN TROY 1974.

¹⁸SANDERSON (2002:7–8, fn. 5) has drawn attention to the references to these two texts in an inscription from the reign of the Cambodian king Rājendravarman (944–68), attesting to the existence of the Śaiva Siddhānta in Nepal, some sort of Saiddhāntika presence there from at the latest the beginning of the ninth century can be inferred from the evidence of early Nepalese manuscripts of Saiddhāntika texts.¹⁹ Furthermore it is clear that its most prominent theologians lived in Kashmir in the tenth century,²⁰ at the same time as the most prominent theologians of the group of tantric schools often rather misleadingly labelled 'Kashmir Śaivism', and that these various tantric groups (by which expression I intend to include the Śaiva Siddhānta) exercised influence upon each other. The central fact that characterises these tantric cults is that they are private cults for individuals who take a non-Vedic initiation (dīkṣā) that uses non-Vedic (as well as Veda-derived) mantras and that is the means to liberation, a liberation which consists in being omnipotent and omniscient, in other words in realising the powers of Śiva.

We may now cloud this picture by presenting a few more details and thus also some complications that might seem to conflict with it. The evidence we have for reconstructing the character of this early pan-Indian theological school is its scriptural canon, together with its commentarial literature (into which category we may include here manuals of ritual and independent treatises that rehearse and synthesise what is taught in the scriptures). Now the commentarial works are explicitly the works of historical human authors whom we can place and date, often quite precisely.

where the context is the description of a certain ninth-century Śivācārya (thus FINOT 1925:354–6) who had received a consecratory initiation using the maṇḍala taught by the Niśvāsa and knew 'all the saṃhitās, the Sarvajñānottara etc.' (verses 36 and 38, FINOT 1925:359). BHATTACHARYA too (1961:49 and 72) is aware of these references and of the existence of texts transmitted in India bearing these names, but stops short of identifying the surviving texts as being those to which reference is made. He also records that references in Cambodian inscriptions to a Pārameśvara are to a Saiddhāntika work (1961:47–8), as indeed they may be (one of them belongs to the tenth century: that published by CÉDÈS 1937:147–56, from the first regnal year of Jayavarman V, 968 AD); but in this case BHATTACHARYA rather too confidently assumes them to be references to the Mataṅga (1961:48, fn. 3). Since the name appears unprefixd by a further qualifying name (e.g. Mataṅga-, Pauṣkara-, Haṃsa-, Tilaka- etc.), it is more likely to refer, if it indeed refers to a Siddhāntatantra, to the Pārameśvara partially preserved in a ninth-century Nepalese manuscript in Cambridge (MS Add. 1049) and identified by SANDERSON as the original Pauṣkara (see GOODALL 1998:xlili and SANDERSON 2002:4–5, fn. 2).

²⁰For a discussion of the tenth-century lineage of Bhaṭṭa Rāmakaṇṭha II, see GOODALL 1998:ix–xviii.

The tantras, however, do not present themselves as the compositions of historical human authors, and they do not deliberately leave clues that would allow us to locate their place in human history. Among our earliest Saiddhāntika sources we find a list of the titles of twenty-eight supposedly principal tantras, and works with these names survive today. Thus we have a large corpus of scriptures of uncertain date, but which we might assume all to belong in a group to a period earlier than all the commentarial literature. But when we examine these tantras and all those that claim to be scriptures of the Śaiva Siddhānta, we find them to be a very disparate body indeed. First of all, among those that treat philosophical matters, we find them espousing radically different positions—both dualism, in which Śiva and souls are fundamentally distinct both from each other and from the matter which generates the universe, and non-dualism. Similarly, although there is a shared terminology for the mantras, the syllables of the mantras themselves, even the most fundamental ones, are very various. And apart from these differences, some scriptures speak extensively or exclusively about the worship of Śiva and a Śaiva pantheon in the context of a South Indian public temple, whereas others make no mention whatsoever of temple worship, and are concerned instead primarily with prescribing practices for a community of initiates.

Just on the strength of this information a dispassionate person might suspect that this scriptural canon was formed at different periods and in different places; but without further information it would be difficult to prove beyond doubt what was early and what was late and thereby to determine a relative chronology of the Saiddhāntika canon.

There are however three firm proofs that a given Siddhāntatantra is early:—

1. the existence of early Nepalese manuscripts of the work. Because of the cool climate, MSS from Nepal survive many centuries longer than in almost any other part of South Asia.
2. the existence of early commentaries on the work. Commentaries by Sadyojyotis, a theologian probably of the seventh century, survive on two Siddhāntatantras; but the bulk of the surviving exegetical Saiddhāntika literature of importance appears to have been written in the tenth century in Kashmir.
3. substantial attributed quotations in the works of early commentaries that can still be found in the surviving version of the tantra that bears the name to which the quotations are attributed. This criterion is arguably less strong than the other two, since the quantity of labelled quotations to make the identification compelling is disputable.

Using the above criteria²¹ we arrive at a relatively short list of tantras which we can assume to have been known to Saiddhāntikas in the tenth century.²² Most of the twenty-eight listed Siddhāntatantras that do not meet these criteria are never mentioned by early Saiddhāntikas; a few are quoted but the quotations are not to be found in the surviving works so named.²³

²¹I may add at this point that these sorts of considerations have relevance in other domains of Indian literature too. The one that springs to mind is the corpus of Purāṇas: there too we have what we may suppose to be relatively early lists of eighteen works; there too there is considerable dispute about which name refers to which surviving text, or indeed whether a number of the unambiguously named surviving texts are the same as those in the list; there too there are rival candidates for the same name, the best documented case, as of recently, being that of the Skandapurāṇa (see fn. 13 on p. xvii above).

In this table, which gives the list of twenty-eight 'principal' Saiddhāntika scriptures—the ten Śivabhedas and the eighteen Rudrabhedas—in the version that we find in Kiraṇa 10, the names in bold face are those of which demonstrably pre-twelfth century tantras bearing the names in question still survive. The nine asterisked titles have, to my knowledge, no surviving Saiddhāntika works associated with them.²⁴ The entry 'MS' in the column to the right of the tantras means that an early Nepalese manuscript of the text survives. A capital 'C' means that a commentary survives; a lower-case 'c' indicates evidence of a lost commentary.²⁵ A capital 'Q' indicates the existence of attributed quotations in the works of early authors the text of which is to be found in the surviving tantra; a lower-case 'q' indicates the existence of attributed quotations that are not to be found in the tantra that now bears the name in question (or for which no Saiddhāntika tantra now survives).²⁶ Finally, a small 'p' indicates that some tantra bearing the name in question has been published; a capitalised 'P' indicates that there is evidence that the published work is ancient.

There are, of course, complications that the table does not reflect: ancient works corresponding to the titles Svāyambhuva and the Raurava survive, namely the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha and the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha, but some South Indian manuscripts transmit other large bodies of text with these titles, either separately or variously mixed up with the ancient material.²⁷

The following table presents surviving pre-twelfth-century Siddhānta-tantras that do not figure in versions of the list of twenty-eight but present themselves as derived from one of them. Most present themselves as redactions of the Āgneya/Vāthula;²⁸ but if lost unlisted tantras of which pre-twelfth-century quotations survive were also to be tabulated (and not just surviving ones), then claimed affiliations to the Pārameśvara would also be well represented.²⁹

Now it goes without saying that the paucity of extant early works makes it difficult to build a convincing picture of the early Śaiva Siddhānta, to decide which tantras belonged most closely together, which were marginal and to judge how tight was the unity formed by the whole pre-tenth-century canon. Nevertheless we may attempt a characterisation of the surviving early texts, remaining aware, of course, that what we say is tentative.³⁰

²⁹See GOODALL 1998:xlvi, fn. 98.

First of all we may observe that these demonstrably early tantras, with a single exception,³¹ appear to be dualist. Furthermore all the early writers of the Śaiva Siddhānta of whom works survive—that is to say Sadyojyotis, whom we have mentioned above, Śrīkaṇṭha, Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha, Rāmakaṇṭha, all of whom belonged to tenth-century Kashmir, down to Aghoraśiva and his disciples, a group of exegetes who upheld the doctrines of the tenth-century Kashmirians in twelfth-century South India,³²—are without exception dualists. Early non-dualist works of the school could have gone missing, but it appears likely that the old Śaiva Siddhānta was a broadly dualist school which only after the twelfth century felt the influence of non-dualist Vedānta. The early Siddhāntatantras are not only not influenced by non-dualist Vedānta, they seem in fact to ignore it. It is only among the tantras that cannot be demonstrated to be early that we find works which either teach or appear to presuppose a Vedānta-influenced non-dualism, notably the Ajitāgama,³³ the Supra-

³¹As SANDERSON has pointed out (1992:291), the Sarvajñānottara is an unambiguously non-dualist work that survives in an early Nepalese manuscript. For further details about the transmission of this text see GOODALL 1998:xlvi and lix–lxi. I should add to those remarks that although a small part of that same Sarvajñānottara has been published (the chapters comprising the so-called vidyāpāda have been published with a Tamil translation and commentary by Tūttukkuṭi Po. Muttaiya Piḷḷai, Devakoṭṭai 1923) the doctrine of the early text should not be deduced from this published version, since this has been deliberately and very significantly modified, most distortively by the insertion in its first chapter of twenty verses discussing and refuting the old doctrine that in liberation the soul becomes equal to Śiva (7–26). These verses are certainly a late interpolation since they are not found in the ancient Nepalese MS of the text (National Archives of Kathmandu MS 1-1692, NGMPP Reel No. A 43/12, f. 49^v), nor are they discussed in Aghoraśiva's twelfth-century commentary on the text, nor do they occur in the manuscripts of the text belonging to the collection of the IFP, or indeed in any manuscript that I have been able to consult.

³³Particularly 2:1–27, in which, as SANDERSON has pointed out (1992:291, fn. 42), Śiva is represented as the supreme soul whose form is being, consciousness, and bliss and as the identity of everything, including individual souls. (Many of the same verses occur also in a passage of the Vātulaśuddhākhyā: 9:77–89, quoted in the apparatus to the Ajita.)

bhedāgama,³⁴ the Yogaja and the Cintyaśāstra.³⁵

And another clear pattern emerges: the Siddhāntatantras that are demonstrably early are not concerned with the performance of public worship in temples. Again it is only the tantras that we find transmitted and known only in the Tamil-speaking South that discuss the performance of public temple worship. The tantras that are demonstrably early are primarily concerned with teaching a system of worship for private individuals who have taken liberating initiation and with justifying this system of worship with a theology, the salient points of which have been summarised as follows:³⁶

... (1) Śiva, (2) souls, and (3) the rest of reality, mental and material, are essentially and eternally distinct from each other. According to this view Śiva is only the efficient cause (nimitta-kāraṇam) of the universe. Its material cause (upādāna-kāraṇam), that out of which it is fashioned, of which it consists, and into which it dissolves, is not Śiva but māyā. The latter is the single, eternal, and unconscious source of the ³⁵Dr. T. GANESAN has pointed out signs of Vedāntic influence in these two unpublished works in a lecture entitled ‘Approaching the Āgama’ (2004*). Among the features that he pointed to are the following. The Yogaja’s account of dīkṣā is prefaced by references to types of Śaivas (which, as BRUNNER remarks [1992b:32], appear to be referred to otherwise only in late South Indian works) the highest of which are the Ādiśaivas, of whom the text says (dīkṣālakṣaṇa 19cd, IFP MS T. 24, p. 368): vedavedāntatattvajñā ādiśaivā iti smṛtāḥ. The Cintyaśāstra incorporates meditation upon one of the Vedāntic mahāvākyas (tat tvam asi) into a description of the visualisation of Sadāśiva (18:19ff, IFP MS T. 13, p. 82) and, as further indication of its outspoken Veda-congruence, it includes a specific injunction to follow the Baudhāyana (or Bodhāyana) tradition for sandhyā rites (5:3, p. 27).

³⁴For the lateness of this work, see BRUNNER 1992a:271 and 1992b:32–3. For its non-dualism, see BRUNNER 1967:51ff. It is true that she at one point characterises its non-dualism (p. 54) as ‘un monisme analogue à celui du Trika’, but note that we also find her remark (p. 53):

... La resonance vedāntine de cette déclaration, renforcée par les images du cristal coloré par le voisinage d’un objet, de la corde-serpent, du soleil reflété dans des vases, est assez surprenante. Étonnante aussi la description du jīvan-mukta, digne de la plume d’un disciple de Śaṅkara. Mais si l’on pense à ces passages antérieurs où il est dit que l’ātman vient de Śiva, on est bien obligé de reconnaître une certaine cohérence dans la fidélité de notre texte à un advaita... qu’il faudrait préciser.

worlds and everything in them, including the bodies and faculties of each soul. To initiate a period of cosmic emanation (sṛṣṭiḥ) Śiva relies on a viceregent, the Lord Ananta (Ananta-bhaṭṭāraka, Ananteśa) to irradiate māyā with his powers and so cause it to give birth to these forms. Śiva causes Ananta to activate māyā in this way in order that souls which have not yet been released may have the means of experiencing the fruits of their past actions and the possibility of working toward their eventual salvation.

When Śiva judges a soul to be ready for release he liberates it into a state of omniscience and omnipotence in which it is his equal (śivasamaḥ, śivatulyaḥ). Even in this state of enlightenment and liberation each soul remains distinct from every other and from Śiva himself. There is no question of the soul's surrendering its separate identity by dissolution (layaḥ) into some form of transindividual consciousness.

Liberation cannot be achieved through mere knowledge of reality without recourse to ritual. This is because the state of bondage, in which the soul fails to realize its innate omniscience and omnipotence, is not caused by mere ignorance. The ignorance that characterises the unliberated is the effect of an imperceptible Impurity (malam) that acts on the soul from outside; and this Impurity, though it is imperceptible, is a material substance (dravyam). Because it is a substance, only action (vyāpāraḥ) can remove it; and the only action capable of removing it is that of the rituals of the initiation and their sequel taught by Śiva in his Tantric scriptures.

After reading this characterisation of the pre-twelfth-century Śaiva Siddhānta, the reader might ask: why, if this is really a true portrait, it is not widely accepted in our time? Why do publications of today present the school as Tamil, philosophically non-dualist (or at any rate not strictly dualist) and vedanticizing, largely or entirely post-12th-century, and partly based on a group of liturgical Sanskrit tantras teaching the mode of public worship in temples? I think that there are a number of factors that go some way to explaining how this distorted picture has been reached.

1. Firstly, there has been a relative neglect of Sanskritic sources in favour of Tamil ones among those claiming allegiance to the Śaiva Siddhānta in Tamil Nadu today. If only the Tamil sources are considered, then a most distorted picture of the history of the development of the cult is inevitable. (Ignoring the Tamil sources is, in my view, less distortive, as I shall explain below.) The more so since the parlous state of modern scholarship about pre-modern Tamil literature means that few dates are secure or even pinned down to reliable narrow margins, and, as far as I am aware, no single critical edition has appeared of a pre-modern Tamil text.³⁷ The impossible dating on slender evidence of one particular Tamil author, namely Tirumūlar, the author of the Tirumantiram, to the fifth, sixth or seventh century, gives rise to a highly implausible relative chronology of the Śaiva Siddhānta. I would characterise the Tirumantiram as a syncretic work of philosophical speculation that may have been dated six or seven centuries too early. It is plain that it contains a complex of concepts with Sanskrit labels the development of which one can trace in Sanskrit (not Tamil) literature that must certainly ³⁷It is perhaps not out of place to repeat here some earlier remarks on this subject (GOODALL 2000:214–15, fn. 38):

Since this expression is today so variously understood among indologists, I must state what I understand by it. A critical edition is an editor's reconstruction of a text as he supposes it to have been at a particular time in its transmission (...). Although it is a hypothesis, it is made on the basis of all evidence for the wording of the text that the editor can consult (ideally all surviving evidence) and by an editor who has striven to understand as far as possible the ideas of the author(s) as well as the relationships between the sources that make up that evidence, and it is equipped with an apparatus that reports all of that evidence that is relevant to the constitution of the text (in some cases this means all the evidence). Such editions, as yet all too rare, are invaluable tools for all who are interested—from any perspective—in texts and their transmissions.

To avoid confusion, I should add that I do not mean to say that non-critical editions cannot be useful or learned. An editor may take trouble collating, weighing the merits of readings, making judicious emendations and choices on the basis of discrimination and wide reading, annotating, and so forth, and yet not provide the evidence on the basis of which the text has been reconstructed; indeed editions of some Tamil works are evidently works of very great learning. But it is not possible to find out from them both what all the sources were and which source read what for every line of text. This means that no one can attempt to understand the relationships between the sources without reexamining all the sources.

post-date the fifth century.³⁸ The majority of scholars who claim to study the Śaiva Siddhānta in South India today ignore the Sanskrit sources, and those who do study them tend to study relatively late South Indian ones: it is symptomatic of a widespread trend that, in the recent Madras University anthology of articles Facets of Śaiva Siddhānta, the only one that acknowledges the early non-South-Indian heritage of the South Indian Śaiva Siddhānta appears to be that of GANESAN (2000), who belongs in fact to the French Institute.

2. The second is the circumstance that the Śaiva Siddhānta appears to have disappeared from all parts of India except the Tamil-speaking South after the twelfth-century. That is to say that, as far as I am aware, no evidence has come to light of the composition of texts after the twelfth-century and no evidence of Saiddhāntika initiations having taken place from outside that area after the thirteenth.³⁹ Perhaps it is wrong to characterise this as disappearance; in some areas of India the old Siddhāntas evidently continued being transmitted and plentifully quoted in manuals of ritual, but along with texts of different religious outlook, and the resulting blend ceased to go by the name Śaiva Siddhānta. Thus from the Kashmir valley we find Śaiva tantric ritual manuals that draw largely on Siddhāntas, but also on tantras that are philosophically less determinate, such as the Svacchanda. The two works that are sometimes characterised as serving as the foundations for the syncretic brand of tantric ritual that has flourished in Kerala in recent centuries, namely the Prayogamañjarī and the Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati, both are rooted in the Śaiva Siddhānta,⁴⁰ but, as far as I am aware, the ritual system based upon them is never referred to as Saiddhāntika.

³⁸I have drawn attention to this in GOODALL 1998:xxxvii–xxxix and GOODALL 2000:213, fn. 27 and 28.

⁴⁰In the case of the Prayogamañjarī, its being rooted in the Siddhāntas is evident, for instance, in chapter 9 (see particularly 9:1 and 9:8, but see also 1:6 and 1:29). For a characterisation of the Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati, see p. cix below.

3. The third factor is that the currents of ritual and philosophical thinking that evolved from the old pan-Indian Śaiva Siddhānta in the Tamil-speaking South did, unlike those in Kerala, continue to present themselves as being Śaiva Siddhānta. As we have seen above, in parallel with the growth of a body of tantras in Sanskrit that, unlike the earlier Siddhāntatantras, laid down the rules of public temple worship, there also flourished a school of increasingly Vedānta-influenced theological speculation whose texts were in Tamil, the first of them allegedly from the twelfth-century.
4. The fourth is that many of the early texts are unpublished, or partially published, or published in a minimally edited state that leaves them barely comprehensible,⁴¹ and much of the worthwhile secondary literature is in French, which is a barrier for some indologists.
5. The fifth factor is disinterest. The pattern of development that I have very crudely sketched seems to me not to be very difficult to discern, and I am not the first to believe it to be discernable (see, for instance, the works BRUNNER, SANDERSON); but there has been no very strong motivation to try to discern it. In the words of HOUSMAN, 'the faintest of all human passions is the passion for truth'.⁴² Indian religious traditions, for obvious reasons, can sometimes neglect aspects of the study of their own historical development. And some indologists seem content to read philosophical texts as expressions of coherent systems of ideas, without any consideration of their development. Assigning dates, in so far as it has any interest at all, can become for them no more than an expression of pride in the texts: the more ancient they are, the more distinguished.

An innocent might here pose the question: Why devote so much energy to questions of the chronology of texts? Is it of interest to know that a certain South Indian exegete composed a particular work in 1157 AD? By itself this fact is of course pretty much devoid of interest; but in the context of the dates of related literature it is invaluable information. Only when we see the chronological relationships between the works of the Śaiva

⁴²From HOUSMAN's preface to his edition M. Manilii Astronomicon Liber Primus (London, 1903) as quoted in HOUSMAN 1981:43.

Siddhānta can we then trace the intellectual history of the school and so its relationship to other philosophies.

Now to return to the bibliographical issue with which I started, the principal reason why a large number of publications purportedly devoted to or treating of the Śaiva Siddhānta are not considered here in detail is that they treat what we may refer to as the Tamil Śaiva Siddhānta, a system that is later than and, to some extent, separable from the Śaiva Siddhānta to which our text belongs. I say 'to some extent' because it is clear that the school known as the Śaiva Siddhānta that developed in the Tamil-speaking South and the earliest of whose theological texts (the Meykaṇṭacāttiraṅkaḷ) purportedly date from the twelfth century,⁴³ is closely related—it is clear, for instance, from the large body of terminology shared by its Tamil texts and by earlier Sanskrit literature. Indeed some South Indians tell me that it is unconscionable to pretend to write about the Śaiva Siddhānta without detailed treatment of the Tamil sources. But although the Tamil school has plainly been influenced by, indeed has grown out of, the once pan-Indian Sanskrit one, it is self-evident that there can have been no influence in the other direction before at least the twelfth-century. This book is devoted to the study of a tantra in Sanskrit written before the tenth century, and so I feel justified in excluding from detailed treatment the Tamil school and secondary literature that discusses that school. I have, however, consulted many Sanskrit texts ⁴³Precise dates are commonly given for each of these fourteen 'foundational' treatises. All are placed in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries except the first two, the Tiruvuntiyār and the Tirukkaḷiṟuppaṭiyār, which are assigned to 1147 and 1177 AD respectively. One work among the fourteen, the Caṅkaṇpanirākaraṇam records the occasion and the date of its composition: 1313 AD. I have not been able to discover on what authority dates have been assigned to the other thirteen works. Nor am I aware of these dates being investigated in recent secondary literature. PRENTISS (1996:237, fn. 20), among others, refers for her dates to DHAVAMONY 1971, a much cited work often given the epithet 'authoritative'. DHAVAMONY in turn (1971:175) refers to IRĀCAMĀNIKKANĀR 1958 for the date of the Tiruvuntiyār (for the other twelve unsubstantiated dates he refers to no authority). But IRĀCAMĀNIKKANĀR (1958:269, n. 31) appears not to give any justification for this date. The dates of the Meykaṇṭacāttiraṅkaḷ appear already (without evidence being adduced) in the preface (pp. 5–7) of the Madras edition of 1897. We should note that S. S. SURYANARAYANA SASTRI (1930:22, fn. 31), who appears to have been rigorous in his attempts to date the various authors he studied relative to each other, describes 1313 AD, the date given by Umāpati in the beginning of his Caṅkaṇpanirākaraṇam, as 'the only date definitely known in the history of Tamil Śaivism'.

written after the twelfth century, many of whose authors had certainly felt the influences of the Tamilian school; but I have consulted them primarily to mine them for quotations of the Parākhyā, in order better to reconstruct its text.

Thus far I think I have nearly justified the exclusion of Tamil sources from the history of the pre-twelfth-century pan-Indian Śaiva Siddhānta. But there is a body of Tamil texts arguably recognised as some sort of 'scripture' by some authors of the largely post-twelfth-century Tamil Śaiva Siddhānta that may date from our early period: some of the devotional Tamil hymns by certain of the Nāyanmārs may be contemporaneous with some of the earliest surviving Sanskrit Saiddhāntika writings.⁴⁴ Whatever the period(s) of their composition, these hymns are not directly relevant to us because they were not in their own time in any sense Saiddhāntika compositions; indeed it is questionable whether any clearly defined theological positions can be inferred from the hymns of any of the poets. It is as literary expressions of devotion that they were cherished by subsequent Tamil thinkers and so canonised;⁴⁵ the theology of the Tamil Śaiva Siddhānta was formulated rather in the Meykaṇṭacāttiraikaḷ and its commentaries.⁴⁶

I may have seemed harshly dismissive of some of the secondary literature in the foregoing pages, and so I acknowledge here that I have of course nevertheless derived much benefit from it. I am well aware that my own work will before long (and perhaps already does) seem tiresomely deficient in one respect or another to some readers. And perhaps it is worth

⁴⁵This appears to be acknowledged even by those who affirm the Tamil character (if not actually Tamil origins) of the Śaiva Siddhānta. See, e.g., DEVASENAPATHI (1966:273): 'Tēvāram and Tiruvācagam, (like the Prabandam of the Ālvārs) constitute, if we may say so, the Tamil upaniṣads.' Cf. also RANGASWAMY's conclusion, after more than a thousand pages devoted to the 'Religion and Philosophy' of Ārūrar, that '[i]t has not been possibly [sic] to label him as belonging to any particular Philosophy' (1991:1265).

stating explicitly that there is, as I have implied, some most admirable secondary literature.⁴⁷

⁴⁷Particularly noteworthy are the voluminous writings of BRUNNER, amongst which the introduction to the third volume of her translation and study of the Somaśambhupaddhati (1977) provides a good introduction to the early Śaiva Siddhānta, and the articles of SANDERSON (1985, 1990, 1992, 1995, *1996), which all go some way towards articulating the relationships between the early Śaiva Siddhānta and its Śaiva tantric context, touching in some articles on particular aspects: its doctrines (1992), the role of ritual within it (1995), and its canon (*1996).

Shortly before completing this book, I have become aware of DVIVEDĪ 2000, pp. 235–427 of which give a useful account of the principal authors and doctrines of the early pan-Indian Śaiva Siddhānta. I have two small reservations about this treatment. The first is that the presentation of doctrines often takes relatively little account of historical development, in other words, does not articulate the relationships between the texts that give slightly conflicting accounts of particular points of doctrine or attempt to explain or comment on those differences (see, e.g., the treatment of the transmigratory body on p. 374), and where it is historically more sensitive, it has elsewhere been improved upon in a number of details (contrast, e.g., the account of malaparipāka and karmasāmya on pp. 357–62 with GOODALL 1998:xxxiii–xxxvi, and 215–220). The second is that the account of the relations between most of the authors he discusses has also, I think, been improved on elsewhere (this is particularly so of Aghoraśiva, Trilocanaśiva, and Sarvātmaśambhu; see GOODALL 2000).

INTRODUCTION

The Parākhyatantra and its place in the Saiddhāntika canon

As will be clear from the numerous testimonia that appear in the apparatus to the text, the Parākhyā- or Saurabheya-tantra was once a valued authority, much quoted both by writers of the period of the early pan-Indian Śaiva Siddhānta, i.e. up to and including Aghoraśiva, and also by thinkers of various of the subsequent South Indian strands of development that go by the name of the Śaiva Siddhānta. It is curious, therefore, that there seems to survive only one incomplete manuscript of the text,⁴⁸ transmitting paṭalas 1–6 and 14–15. The codex in which it is written (hereafter M^Y; I continue to use the siglum to which I assigned it for my edition of the Kiraṇa, GOODALL 1998) is of unique importance to our understanding of the early Śaiva Siddhānta because it is also the codex unicus for much of the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha,⁴⁹ which, as I have argued in my introduction to the Kiraṇavṛtti, is the only part of the printed Raurava early enough to have been known to the lineage of Bhaṭṭa Rāmakaṇṭha II, and it is the only manuscript known to me which transmits the complete text of the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha with the chapters in the correct order (i.e. that preserved in the fragmentary Nepalese palm-leaf manuscript) and unmixed with other (later) chapters, as we find in most South Indian manuscripts.⁵⁰ (Although the Mysore edition does not make clear that it is based on M^y, the errors and gaps therein show that it must be.) Furthermore the codex's text of the Kiraṇa is the closest among those of all the manuscripts known to me to the text that Rāmakaṇṭha had before him—closer even than the text of the manuscripts that also transmit Rāmakaṇṭha's commentary.

⁴⁸I pass over here the other manuscripts listed in Mysore catalogues, MSS B 785 and B 811, transcripts on paper in Kannada script (see p. cii ff below). An examination of their readings reveals them to be apographs of M^Y.

⁵⁰For a fuller discussion of the extent of the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha and of its clumsy incorporation in South India into a larger text called Svāyambhuva see GOODALL 1998:xlvi–li, in particular fn. 111. (Neither of FILLIOZAT's editions of the Svāyambhuvavṛtti discuss the structure or extent of the text of which it is a partial commentary, nor does his just published article on Sadyojyotis of the same period, beyond a sentence to the effect that the commented chapters, 1–5, appear as chapters 33–7 in some manuscripts (2001:24).)

I earlier offered no hypothesis about the relation of these texts to a Sūkṣma-svāyambhuva of which three pādas are cited a few times by early writers (e.g. by Abhinavagupta in Tantrāloka 15:2c–3b and by Rāmakaṇṭha in the Mataṅgavṛtti ad vidyāpāda 3:23c–25b and 26:63):

This verse occurs also in the South Indian Svāyambhuva as 40:2c–3b (IFP MS T. 39, p. 148) and equipped with a final pāda: syād atroktam avistarāt. But, as VASUDEVA suggests (*2000:239, fn. 170),

The whole of the extremely short 40th chapter of the IFI transcript 39 is perhaps no more than a later South Indian fabrication specifically written to include an earlier, authoritative citation from a lost work.

Both VASUDEVA (ibid.) and myself (GOODALL 1998:373, fn. 607) mistakenly assumed that no other verses survived attributed to the Sūkṣmasvāyambhuva. In fact Vaktraśambhu quotes two and a half verses that he attributes to the Sūkṣmasvāyambhuva in the Mṛgendrapaddhatiṭkā (IFP MS T. 1021, p. 127), and he plainly distinguished the work from the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha, for he twice mentions both works together in lists, one of which we have quoted above on p. lix, and the other is to be found on p. 208 of the transcript.

A further half-verse is attributed to the Sūkṣmasvāyambhuva in the appendix to the Sarvamatopanyāsa, quoted between C:52 and 53 in Appendix I, and another is quoted in the Ātmārthapūjāpaddhati, IFP MSS T. 795, p. 78, T. 323, p. 123, T. 321, p. 125, and T. 282, p. 116. Note that BRUNNER's listing (1977:698) of IFP MS T. 192 as a manuscript transmitting the Sūkṣmasvāyambhuvāgama and Sūkṣmasvāyambhuvavṛtti is a slip; the manuscript is a transcript of Madras GOML MS R 16797 transmitting the first four chapters of the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha (including the verses of chapter 4 not commented upon by Sadyojyotis) followed by Sadyojyotis's Svāyambhuvavṛtti, and its readings are reported in FILLIOZAT's editions marked with the siglum ka. There is however other evidence of there having been a Sūkṣmasvāyambhuvavṛtti: Trilocanaśiva quotes from it in his Somaśambhupaddhatiṭkā (see BRUNNER 1977:419, n. 244e).

It is true that quotations from the text are not especially common in the works of Saiddhāntikas up to and including Aghoraśiva—Rāmakaṇṭha quotes it by name only once (ad Mataṅgavidyāpāda 12:25–27b, pp. 347–8), Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha only twice (ad Mṛgendravidyāpāda 2:7, p. 58 and ad Mṛgendravidyāpāda 11:11, p. 231), and thus Aghoraśiva too, who in his works on doctrine rarely quotes an authority that has not previously been quoted by these important forbears, refers to it infrequently (ad Nādakārikā 12, Bhogakārikā 100c–101b (untraced in M^Y), and without attribution ad Tattvatrayanirṇaya 6, Tattvaparakāśa 25, 44–5, Ratnatraya-parīkṣā 30ab and Ratnatrayaparīkṣā 180c–182b).

Is it conceivable that the text's being taught by Prakāśa rather than by a form of Śiva himself diminished the authoritativeness of the Parākhyā in the eyes of some? A passage from Kṣemarāja's Svacchandatanthroddyota (ad 10:516c–517b quoted in fn. 604 on p. 309 below) suggests this, but it seems likely that Kṣemarāja takes such a position there merely because he wishes to find a reason for upholding a teaching of the Svacchanda against assertions of the Mṛgendra and the Parākhyā. Judging from the number and range of its quotations, particularly in South Indian works, the Mṛgendra's importance in the Saiddhāntika exegetical tradition seems to have been huge in spite of its being a redaction by Indra rather than Śiva's words.

Whatever be the reason for their relative paucity, these few early Saiddhāntika attestations, taken together with the very substantial quotations that appear in the tenth chapter of Kṣemarāja's Svacchandatanthroddyota, serve to prove that this Parākhyā is an early work. Thus it may join the tiny list of surviving demonstrably early listed Siddhāntas⁵¹—the Kiraṇa, the Niśvāsa, the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha, the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha, the [Pauṣkara]-Pārameśvara.⁵² For although it does not figure in the standardized South Indian list that Bhatt tabulates in his introduction to the first volume of the Raurava, it appears at the end of a number of early versions of the list of twenty-eight primary scriptures, namely those of the Pārameśvara, the Śrīkaṇṭhīya, the Kiraṇa, ⁵¹For a reasoned account of which Saiddhāntika scriptures we may assume to have predated the Kashmirian thinkers of the lineage of Rāmakaṇṭha II whose works helped to shape the school's theology see GOODALL 1998:xxxix–xlvii.

⁵²Some might include here the non-eclectic recensions of the Kālottara on the grounds that they are redactions of the scripture listed as the Vāthula/Vātula (see GOODALL 1998:xlvi–xlvii, fn. 103, quoting SANDERSON).

and that which prefaces the Jñānapañcāśikā recension of the Kālottara.⁵³

Two early Parākhyatantras?

Our Parākhyā does not, however, appear to be the same as that quoted in the Bṛhatkāḷottara.⁵⁴ Professor SANDERSON has kindly furnished me with his preliminary edition (*1996b) of the śivabhedapaṭala and the *tantropattiviyākhyāpaṭala*⁵⁵ which purport to give the mūla- or ādi-sūtras of the twenty-eight root scriptures. The Parākhyā is last on the list, and its sūtra, and a brief commentary thereon, read as follows (verses 92–5b, f. 55^r, lines 2–5):

athāvyaaktaṃ mahāliṅgaṃ puruṣātītavācakaṃ
jñānaṃ śivātmakaṃ sūkṣmaṃ sarvavijñaptikāraṇaṃ ādisūtram idaṃ jñeyaṃ saurabheya parāhvaye athāvyaaktamahāliṅgaproktyā tattvaṃ guṇātmakaṃ⁵⁶ tathā śivātmakoktyā tu śivam eva padaṃ smṛtaṃ tasya vācyasya ye mantra vācakāḥ śaktirūpiṇaḥ
ata etatpadanenoktaṃ puruṣātītavācakaṃ

This sūtra appears nowhere in what M^y transmits of the Parākhyā and, although it is possible that it occurred in one of the chapters that was not copied, this is unlikely, firstly because ādisūtras, as the name tells us, occur at or towards the beginning of a work and we seem to have what must have been intended to be the beginning of our Parākhyā preserved ⁵³See GOODALL 1998:402–17 for a tabulation of these lists, together with rudimentary editions of the lists that are drawn from unpublished sources. The list which prefaces the Jñānapañcāśikā I treated as belonging to the Jñānapañcāśikā in GOODALL 1998:412, but Dr. ACHARYA has pointed out to me that in other manuscripts than the one I consulted, a division is clearly marked between the account of the canon and the first speech of Kārttikeya, which in fact marks the beginning of the Jñānapañcāśikā. All the verses of this prefatory section from the seventh verse up to and including the one before the true beginning of the tantra are to be found in the Pratiṣṭhālakṣaṇasārasa-muccaya as 2:107–29, which is in fact the list I referred to in GOODALL 1998:417, fn. 149, but had been unable to see.

⁵⁴This section of the Bṛhatkāḷottara has been discussed at greater length in GOODALL (1998:414–17). I repeat here a certain amount of that information since it is relevant to the Parākhyā.

⁵⁶guṇātmakaṃ] em. SANDERSON; guṇātmakaṃ smṛtaṃ MS

in M^Y, and secondly that beginning contains a plausible mūlasūtra (1:4 or 1:5 or both).⁵⁷ It is possible then that the Bṛhatkālottara knew another Parākhya, and this is suggested by another passage in the same tantropattivyākhyāpaṭala in which divisions of the twenty-eight fundamental scriptures are listed (verses 16–30b, f. 51^r, line 6–52^r, line 1). In the last half-verse of this passage the Parākhya is said to be two-fold:

dvidvidham ca parāhvayaṃ

This last half-verse may mean then that the redactor(s) of the Bṛhatkālottara knew of two parts of a Parākhya or of two independent works, one known as the Saurabheya and the other as the Parākhya. The ādisūtra it quotes must then be assumed to belong to the one not preserved in M^Y. As a source of information about the canon the Bṛhatkālottara must, however, be used with caution: very little of the material in these paṭalas can be verified (only the ādisūtras of the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha, the Kiraṇa, and the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha can be found in surviving works) and some of the information does not fit as neatly as might be hoped.⁵⁸ Furthermore the solution is not entirely satisfactory because Saurabheya seems elsewhere to be used as an alternative name for our Parākhya (see p. cviii).

If we are to make sense of what the Bṛhatkālottara tells us, we might assume that what M^Y transmits is the upabheda of the Parākhya that the Bṛhatkālottara calls Saurabheya, since that name Saurabheya can be argued to be appropriate to it, as we shall see below,⁵⁹ and thus both names can be used of it. The lost work from which the untraced ādisūtra is quoted might then be the upabheda of the Parākhya which the Bṛhatkālottara actually calls Parākhya.

As for the appropriateness of the name Saurabheya, I quote SANDERSON's suggestion (GOODALL 1998:lxv, fn. 156):

⁵⁷It is clear that an ādisūtra need not be a unit of thirty-two syllables: Rāmakaṇṭha takes Kiraṇa 1:11c–12d to be the ādisūtra of that work (Kiraṇa 1:13, which is identified as the ādisūtra in the Bṛhatkālottara (f. 54^v, lines 3–4) Rāmakaṇṭha refers to as a prati-jñāsūtrāntaram), and for the Vijaya the Bṛhatkālottara identifies just two pādas as the ādisūtra (f. 52^v, line 2).

⁵⁸See, e.g., the information about the subdivision of the Nisvāsa quoted in GOODALL 1998:416.

⁵⁹We can assume that the reading saurobhedaṃ is a slip, although this too could be appropriate, since the teacher of the tantra is the sun.

The interlocutors of the Parākhya are Prakāśa (the sun) and a certain Pratoda, who can be identified with Vasiṣṭha,⁶⁰ because this information is given when a passage from the Parākhya is quoted in Takṣakavarta's digest (f.40^v, line 15): pratodo bhagavān vasiṣṭha uvāca This connection with Vasiṣṭha may explain the Parākhya's other name: since Vasiṣṭha is closely associated in mythology with Surabhi, the 'cow of plenty' produced at the churning of the ocean, Professor SANDERSON proposes (in a letter of 2.ix.96) that Saurabheya means 'taught to Saurabha', Saurabha denoting Vasiṣṭha.

The same passage of Takṣakavarta's Nityādisaṅgrahābhīdhānapaddhati identifies Prakāśa as the sun, introducing his first speech with prakāśo bhagavān sūrya uvāca, and this identification is confirmed by the speaker indication before 4:40 in M^Y's text. I give below a translation of Takṣakavarta's quotation, which is to be found as A:1-8 in Appendix I.

The venerable Pratoda, [that is to say] Vasiṣṭha spoke:

Earlier [you taught that] the five brahmamantras are arranged as limbs and subsidiary limbs [of Sadāśiva]. What is the point of these supposititious limbs that you call 'heart', etc.? (1)

Prakāśa, the Lord the sun, spoke:

These limbs being said to be limbs belongs to a teaching that is couched in figurative language (upacāra vidhithitam). For even those [mantras] that we call armour and sword [viz. the KAVACA and the ASTRA] are here [spoken of figuratively as] limbs. And those two are not [in fact] limbs; they become [spoken of figuratively as] limbs because they are occasioned by [real] limbs. (2-3b)

The HṚDAYA is put on like a protective cloth for the protection of the heart; the ŚIRAS is something wrapped about the head as a protection for the head; the CŪLIKĀ is a protection for the head; and the KAṆKAṆA is a protection for the body. (3c-4)

⁶⁰ There are precious few instances of verse-filling vocatives in Prakāśa's speeches that could confirm this identification. Pratoda is once addressed with mune 4:166b and in Śataratnasāṅgraha 61, said in the commentary to be from the Parākhya but not traced in M^Y (see Appendix I.L:128), the address munisattama is used. One might also regard the final word of Appendix I.G:93d as a vocative and accept that it once formed part of our text.

Once he has grasped the weapons, the mantra-practitioner is fearsome, like a soldier; he cannot be vanquished by lower creatures; [he is] like [the bird] Tārṅṣya among snakes. (5)
 This fashioning of his 'limbs' [is performed] in the same way as the fashioning of his body [with the brahmamantras]. A making firm [of this body] of the sādhaka, which is produced with(?) pride/conviction, is then to be accomplished. Having become Śiva internally and externally, as Śiva he should worship Śiva. (6)

Pratoda spoke:

Since we see [in worldly interaction] that the relation between one who honours and one who is honoured is like [the relationship] of an inferior and a superior, if he has become Śiva and is then literally Śiva, how can he be a worshipper? (7)

Prakāśa spoke:

The Lord is in a palace atop the pure path; to reach Him is to become equal to Him. Without becoming equal to Him, the [aspirant] cannot worship Him. For we observe [in the world] that amity, which results in the [desired] fruit, [takes place] between those of like qualities. (8)

The passage quoted in Takṣakavarta's digest does not overlap with the parts of the text that M^Y transmits; but its style and subject matter are certainly characteristic of M^Y's Parākhya, and M^Y omits chapters 7–13, so we may suppose that the passage belonged to one of these. The same may apply to the numerous quotations, relating principally to ritual, which cannot be located in M^Y's text. As we know from 6:81, ritual was to be treated in the now missing section of text that once followed the sixth chapter.

Now there is in fact other evidence for the existence of more than one Parākhya: the twelfth-century Jñānaratnāvalī of Jñānaśambhu (see p. cx below) quotes a number of verses on the theme of prāyaścitta which it attributes to a Parāsaṃhitā (Appendix I.D:59–77). This label by itself is of course not enough to show that he was quoting a different text from our Parākhya (Kṣemarāja's quotations regularly use the label parāyām, which could be an ellipsis of either paraśaṃhitāyām or of parāsaṃhitāyām, and Tryambakaśambhu's quotation of 4:167 is prefaced by the latter); but the quotation here follows immediately on from another quotation treating the same theme attributed to the Parākhyā (Appendix I.D:56–8). The first quotation is a brief account that, while not distinctively characteristic of our Parākhyā, would not seem obviously out of place in it; the quotation attributed to the Parāsaṃhitā, however, is a relatively prolix account that is, I think, not typical of our text. It is possible, then, that it is this lost Parāsaṃhitā that is the Bṛhatkāḷottara's second Parākhyā. And it should be borne in mind that some of the untraced quotations in Appendix I may belong to this lost source.

One further work should be mentioned that is confused with M^Y's Parākhyā, and that is the (Mahā-)Karavīramahāyāga, a work belonging to the Kālikulakrama listed under what is supposed to be an alternative title, Parātantrāgama, in the New Catalogus Catalogorum (Vol. XI, p. 201). It is clear that the names alone are the source of the confusion. The two manuscripts listed under this head that are recorded as listed in the Mysore catalogue of 1922 are of our Saiddhāntika Parākhyā (see p. cii below) and the rest⁶¹ do not transmit our text.

Relative chronology

I suggested in the introduction to the Kiraṇavṛtti that the lists of Siddhāntas might reflect their chronology. I thought of withdrawing this afterwards, because there seemed to be no reason why this should have been so (the redactors would surely not have intended to construct lists that reflected the order of composition). But here, once again, the relatively 'modern' flavour of the Parākhyā, which is last in every list in which it appears, supports the idea. (But of course we must not forget the possibility that the Parākhyā that is listed is not the text transmitted in M^Y, but the other work of the same name known to the redactor of the Bṛhatkāḷottara.) If the lists grew as the tantras got written, then they might unintentionally have come to reflect roughly the order of their composition. A relative chronology of these is extremely difficult to establish, since the redactors of scripture try not to leave clues, and there is little external evidence. In my introduction to the Kiraṇavṛtti I grouped possible kinds of internal evidence under the following heads: cross-references; discrepant lists of the principles (tattva) with which the universe is structured; the structure of the tantras; oddities of doctrine; peculiarities of language; positioning within the traditional lists of twenty-eight. We have mentioned the last of these, and the first gives us no help with the Parākhya. The evidence of peculiarities of language has to be used with care: in the case of the Kiraṇa it now seems clear to me that the passages which contain most aiśa forms are those giving injunctions and describing rituals, for it is in these that the redactor reveals his difficulties with constructing correct optatives (forms such as hunet are common) and his failure to distinguish when to use lyap and when ktvā. In the philosophical portion of the Kiraṇa relatively few aiśa usages occur. Of the Parākhya only the doctrinal portions are transmitted and these only in one manuscript. With this caveat stated, it is fair to observe that its Sanskrit seems in some respects 'purer' and is metrically more ambitious (each chapter ends with a verse not in anuṣṭubh), but see the discussion of the Parākhya's language and metre below.

The use of developed terminology of the Śaiva Siddhānta I have also advanced as a criterion for the relative dating of the Parākhya (GOODALL 2001a:331), but this can be extremely treacherous. The term pañcakṛtya, a term common in commentatorial works for the ancient group of Śiva's five cosmic functions (assumed by commentators to be listed in Raurava-sūtrasaṅgraha 1:15ab), but not, I think, attested in other early Siddhāntas with the exception of the (also relatively late) Mrgendravīdyāpāda (3:8d), is to be found in Parākhya 2:123d. Remarking on this in GOODALL 2001a, I alluded also to the mention of *pralayākala*s in Parākhya 4:20f as being perhaps the earliest instance of the use of the term in a Siddhāntatantra (2001a:331). In fact we find it in verse 4 of the fragment of what is probably the Ur-Pauṣkara quoted in the Jñānaratnāvalī and reproduced on p. liii below. Thus it is perhaps that text, rather than the Mālinī-vijayottara (as suggested by SANDERSON, quoted by GOODALL 1998:184-5, fn. 71), that was the source of the Saiddhāntika classification of akala souls into pralayākala and viññānākala.

In its list of the constitutive principles of the universe the Parākhya is the closest of the demonstrably early tantras to the canonical post-scriptural Śaiva Siddhānta of the exegetes, for from the bhuvanapaṭala (chapter 5) it is clear that its tattvakrama is exactly that of the Tat- tvaprakāśa,⁶² but for the omission of śakti. (Since śiva and śakti are ontologically indivisible, it is not clear to me whether this omission need be regarded as a significant deviation from the Tattvaparakāśa's list.) In this and in other matters of doctrine the Parākhya, like the Kiraṇa and the later, still more śāstric Mataṅga and Mrgendra, is evidently trying to present and defend a reasoned, consistent world view. Pratoda's questions, like those of Garuḍa and Mataṅga, insistently probe possible doubts and inconsistencies and are not, as those of other interlocutors sometimes seem, the perfunctory requests for knowledge periodically required by the genre.

We may conclude that the Parākhya is probably the latest or one of the latest of the surviving listed pre-tenth-century tantras of the Saiddhāntika canon.

Excursus upon the Raurava and the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha

One further observation should be added to this discussion. Since my discussion of the Saiddhāntika canon appeared in the introduction to the first volume of the Kiraṇavṛtti, one book has been published in this series that implicitly challenges the stratification I have proposed, and that is the translation of the Raurava by DAGENS and BARAZER-BILLORET (2000). They are not of the view that the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha is the only part of the text sufficiently early to have been known to Kashmirian exegetes of the tenth century, and since this bears on my stratification, but I intend instead to leave a detailed examination of their argumentation to a later publication. Briefly, my own position is that the many quotations attributed to the Raurava in the works of early Saiddhāntika authors (i.e. up to and including the twelfth-century Aghoraśiva and his immediate disciples) that are to be traced to the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha demonstrate that the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha was the early Raurava known to those authors. These same early authors do not quote from the corpus that has been published as the 'kriyāpāda' of the Raurava,⁶³ and this suggests that

⁶³One chapter of the 'kriyāpāda', 58, contains material from Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 8, and that material is cited; but chapter 58 is cooked together out of quotations attributed to the Raurava, and the overlapping material derives, I believe, from the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha. DAGENS and BARAZER-BILLORET imagined that they had found an independent quotation that confirmed the antiquity of the version found in chapter 58

the early authors did not know that corpus. The arguments of DAGENS and BARAZER-BILLORET (2000) for proving the relative lateness of the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha and the relative antiquity of the 'kriyāpāda' of the Raurava seem to me to amount to a collection of conflicting strategies for explaining away the evidence of the many quotations attributed to the Raurava that we find in the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha. They argue, for instance, (2000:xiv) that the quotations must be from an earlier Raurava, since they are labelled Raurava and not Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha (this is in fact an exaggeration), and yet on p.xvi they acknowledge that the many quotations we find from the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha show that, by claiming to be scripture at second or third remove, the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha was not unsuccessful in attaining recognition. Later (2000:xlīi) we find them suggesting that the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha was a 'memento' of the Raurava sufficiently close to its original for subsequent authors to get confused about what they were quoting. Later still we find the claim (p. l) that the honour in which the exegetes of the tradition held the Raurava they quote shows that they could not actually have been quoting from so meagre and disorganised a work as the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha, in which the quoted lines happen to occur but which is not their source. To me DAGENS and BARAZER-BILLORET make the impression of battling against rather than using each piece of textual evidence that might have helped them to build up a coherent account of the genesis of the Raurava 'corpus'. And they have not discussed the earliest and most important evidence: the testimony of Sadyojyotis, the earliest Saiddhāntika exegete of whom works survive. For DAGENS and BARAZER-BILLORET it seems that all that was really great about the Ur-Raurava that has survived are its name and reputation (2000:l):

... quant à sa réputation passée elle est attestée moins par les citations dont on a parlé que par les innombrables signes que ce texte a été (très certainement à plusieurs reprises) adapté, mis au goût du jour et du lieu, pour demeurer une référence incontestable.

Now there may indeed once have been an Ur-Raurava that is now irretrievably lost. But we do not have the evidence to prove whether or not such a thing existed. What the evidence of substantial early attributed quotations from the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha and the absence of such quotations from the 'kriyāpāda' allow us to conclude is that the earliest now surviving Raurava is almost certainly the body of chapters transmitted to us of the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha.

Dates and the Śaiva Tantric canon

... Concerning the chronology of the early scriptural sources of Tantric Śaivism we can do little more than assert for most of the texts known to us that they predate the citations that appear in the works of the earliest datable commentators, that is to say, in works of the tenth to early eleventh centuries from Kashmir or Mālava, and for a few of them, that they go back at least to the early ninth century since they survive in Nepalese manuscripts of that date...

Going back further than this we lose sight of titles and can only establish that Tantric Śaiva texts of certain familiar kinds must have been present and that these or some of these were probably works among those that were current later. Thus I propose that a scriptural corpus of the kind we find later in the Saiddhāntika.scriptures must have been in existence by the beginning of the seventh century. There survive inscriptions recording the Saiddhāntika Śaiva initiation of three major kings during the second half of that century, and during its first half the Buddhist philosopher Dharmakīrti (c. 600–660) goes to the trouble of attacking the Tantric practice of initiation as the means to liberation. These facts reveal that Tantric Śaivism of this relatively public and strongly soteriological variety was not merely present in the seventh century but well established. And this implies the existence of Tantric Śaiva scriptures.⁶⁴

After his magisterial treatment of the earliest diverse pieces of external evidence that pin down the 'limits before which Tantric Śaiva literature can be seen to have existed'⁶⁵ SANDERSON observes (2002:14–15):

For evidence of what it postdates, we must look to the texts themselves. Since they have been composed as scripture, that is to say, as transmissions of a timeless revelation, they are less than generous in this respect. Their redactors seem to have been careful to avoid references to historical persons and events that would undermine faith by implying a terminus post quem; and the device of prophecy, which would have allowed reference to the past without this consequence, is rare in this predominantly prescriptive literature. So one is reduced to trying to get the better of the redactors by identifying elements in their texts which they probably considered timeless facts but whose introduction can nonetheless be dated, if only approximately.

One such element that SANDERSON goes on to mention and that we find in the Parākhya is the use of notions of Greek astrology, in particular the listing of the planets in the order of their lordship of the weekdays (Parākhya 5:115–27), since '[t]exts with these elements can hardly be earlier than the fourth century AD' (SANDERSON 2002:15–16).

VASUDEVA's illuminating discussion of the nāḍiphāntakrama (*2000:xli–lxii) ingeniously makes use of another kind of datable evidence that might once have appeared timeless: the graphemes of a particular script. He here convincingly demonstrates (particularly *2000:lviii–lxii) that the nāḍiphāntakrama is not an arbitrary sequence of characters but one that makes sense if derived from an arrangement of the characters of 'the Kuṣāṇa and early Gupta version of the Brāhmī alphabet' such that they make up the body-parts of the goddess Mālīnī.⁶⁶ VASUDEVA is of course aware that this does not enable us to date any particular Trika text to between the second and fifth centuries (*2000:lx).

Such ingenuity is not required to date the Parākhya, which we can be certain does not belong to such an early phase of Saiddhāntika literature, for we can plainly discern the influence upon it of thinkers of the seventh century. It is worth remarking that the author of the Parākhya seems not to have been particularly careful in suppressing altogether references to historical personages if they seemed ancient enough. In his account of the conventionality of language he alludes to metrical terms in order to make the point that they are conventions rather than eternal givens (6:47). In other words, he implicitly admits that the terms would be incomprehensible to someone not familiar with the work of Piṅgala, and this point is made explicitly in the Śābarabhāṣya, on which, directly or indirectly, he is almost certainly drawing at this point. The same passage refers to the muni who codified grammar (6:48), and this can surely only be Pāṇini. (His position that the Vedas are not authorless, a corollary of the position that language is conventional, means that they too are not beyond time, but they are perhaps beyond historical time.) In short, the author of the Parākhya appears not to have wished to disguise altogether that the Parākhya, at least in this redaction, had a place in human history.

The sources and the date of the Parākhya

Like the Mrgendra and the Mataṅga, and unlike most other surviving early Siddhāntas (Niśvāsa, Pārameśvara, Kiraṇa, Sārdhatriśatikālottara, Sarvajñānottara, etc.), the Parākhya treats theological and philosophical problems in great detail, is thematically tightly structured, and is written (in part) in what aspires to be the style of philosophical kārikās.

Although I have not recognised a very large number of close verbal echoes of śāstric texts outside the Śaiva tradition, the Parākhya very frequently reproduces the arguments of such texts. It is plain that the earliest Siddhāntas (the Niśvāsa, the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha, and the Svāyam-bhuvasūtrasaṅgraha) borrow much of their fundamental ontology from Sāṅkhya thinkers. Now the Parākhya, of course, inherits this ontology and draws on Sāṅkhya sources;⁶⁷ but it evidently belongs to a later (or at least conceptually later) phase, in which Saiddhāntikas were at pains to bring some of their doctrines into line with certain developments in śāstric thought that we can trace to the writings of quite different rivals: Mīmāṃsakas, Vedāntins, Vaiśeṣikas, and Naiyāyikas. I have earlier asserted (GOODALL 2001a:332) that Dharmakīrti's insistence on the sādhya and sādhana in formal argument being necessarily connected (avinābhāva-niyama), i.e. related by kāryakāraṇabhāva or by svabhāva, was probably the ultimate source for the pronouncement in Parākhya 2:6. This now seems to me impossible, as I will later explain (see fn. 103 on p.167 below);⁶⁸ but we do find an echo of Dharmakīrti in Parākhya 6:49cd, which recalls and may be based on Pramāṇavārttika 1:320ab.

The influence of Mīmāṃsaka thought is in evidence in almost all the Parākhya's philosophical discussions. We have referred above to one passage based directly or indirectly on the Śābarabhāṣya. I suspect that there are a number of conscious echoes specifically of Kumārila's discussions, but this is often difficult to prove.

I have earlier argued (GOODALL 2001a:332–3) that such an echo is to be found in the Parākhya's treatment of the proof of the existence of a creator god.

The Kiraṇa's naïve presentation of the argument by which the Lord is inferred from his effect, the universe,⁶⁹ shows no awareness of Kumārila's objection that if the Lord's creativity is to be compared with the potter's, then the Lord should be perishable and have other such undesirable qualities of the potter.⁷⁰ Rāmakaṇṭha, of course, is aware of Kumārila's argument, which he quotes ad loc., and his response is that each craftsman is omniscient and omnipotent within his own sphere of action.⁷¹ Now the same line of response is implicit in the general rule formulated in Parākhya 2:29–30b:

⁶⁸Cf. Mataṅgavidyāpāda 3:9abc, quoted in fn. 103 on p.167 below. SANDERSON (2002:16) has pointed out a couple of other echoes of non-Śaiva śāstric texts in the Mataṅga: Sāṅkhyakārikā 62 is paraphrased in vidyāpāda 6:63c–64b and Dignāga's definition of pratyakṣa (pratyakṣam kalpanāpoḍham) given in the pratyakṣapariccheda of the Pramāṇasamuccaya is alluded to in Mataṅgayogapāda 4:15c–16a (anirdeśyam asandigdham kalpanāpoḍhagocaram/ pratyakṣam).

⁷⁰*Ślokavārttika*, sambandhākṣepaparihāra 79–80.

⁷¹*Kiraṇavṛtti* 3:12.26–7 and 30–1: na ca viruddho hetuḥ ... dṛṣṭānte hi ghaṭādāv ayaṃ hetuḥ svasādhye svakāryasarvajñatvasarvakartṛtvalakṣaṇeśvaratvena vyāptāḥ siddho yatas tasyāṃśenāpi vaikalena ghaṭādarśanād avināśitvenāpi kumbhakārātmano nityatvāt tasyaiva ca kartṛtvāt.

nimittam īśvarākhyam tad yad dṛṣṭam sahakāraṇam
upādānam ca yat sūkṣmam sarvakāryeṣu saṃhitam kāraṇānām trayam tena sarvakāryeṣu saṃhitam⁷²

And the point is reiterated in Parākhya 2:63–4b:

sādhanaṅgaphalaiḥ sārdham vetti sarvam idaṃ tataḥ yathā tantvādikṛt kartā viṣayīkṛtya tāni saḥ tasmin pravartate kārye tadvat tasmin paraḥ śivaḥ.

Some such echoes may be more apparent than real, but one verse contains what I think really must be an allusion to Kumārila. Consider the following objection of Pratoda (Parākhya 3:38):

tathyaṃ yac codanāvākyaṃ agnihotrādivācakam
tasya jñānasamutpattau nāprāmāṇyaṃ tridhā sthitam.

True statements of Vedic injunction (tathyaṃ yac codanāvākyaṃ) that teach such things as the Agnihotra are not non-authoritative in [any of the] three ways [in which something may be non-authoritative] (tasya ... nāprāmāṇyaṃ tridhā sthitam) when understanding [of them] arises (jñānasamutpattau).

Now these three are listed in Śloka-vārttika, codanāsūtra 54ab: aprāmāṇyaṃ tridhā bhinnaṃ mithyātvājñānasamśayaiḥ. It is true that Kumārila is basing himself on a discussion in the Śābarabhāṣya ad Mīmāṃsāsūtra 1.1.4a (FRAUWALLNER 1968:26), but here Pratoda's distinctive formulation echoes that of Kumārila.

Other echoes of Kumārila can, I think, be discerned when Prakāśa refutes vivartavāda (1:44) and when the Parākhya adverts to the problem of the circularity of God and his scripture proclaiming each other (2:71c–72b); and Mīmāṃsā seems even to have influenced the choice of topics: much of chapter 3 (3:23ff) is devoted to an incongruous (for a Śaiva tantra) discussion of whether the apauruṣeyatva of Vedic revelation can be proved by any of the six pramāṇas.

⁷² 'The instigating cause is that which is called the 'lord'; that which is seen [such as the stick, wheel, etc.] is the auxiliary cause; that which is the material cause is matter. This triad of causes is involved in all effects and can therefore be inferred for every effect.' I have followed here the readings and interpretation of the Śataratnollekhinī ad Śataratnasaṅgraha 15 (= Parākhya 2:29); but see annotation ad loc.

We find also echoes of philosophical tags from other disciplines. A catchy half-line of the Brahmabindūpaniṣat is to be found in Parākhya 1:42; a much used Cārvāka half-line intended to question the validity of anumāna occurs as Parākhya 2:10cd (though here it appears to be used inappropriately to reject arthāpatti as a pramāṇa while retaining anumāna); well-known Mīmāṃsaka tags are to be found in Parākhya 2:12 and 6:14.⁷³

In many passages, of course, we find what must already have been philosophical clichés by the time of the composition of the Parākhya, and so we cannot say that the texts in which they first occurred were direct sources for the redaction of the tantra: notable are the stock discussions of sphoṭa in 6:9ff, of the connection between word and meaning (śabdārtha-sambandha) in 6:17ff, of the apauruṣeyatva of Vedic revelation in 3:23ff, of the Cārvākas in 1:17ff, of kṣaṇabhaṅgavāda in 1:28ff. Another difficulty in dating the Parākhya by attempting to identifying its literary sources and thereby to establish its position in the history of philosophy should be at least alluded to here. The Parākhya may treat some philosophical themes but it is not a work of philosophy and we cannot therefore expect it to give a well-rounded and up-to-date reflection of contemporary Indian thought in the course of defending its own theology.

VASUDEVA (*2000:176) has identified a Vaiśeṣika allusion in Parākhya 14:95 whose formulation may be an echo not of the Vaiśeṣikasūtra but of Candrānanda's vṛtti thereon (see fn. 836 on p. 380 below). If this is indeed an allusion to Candrānanda, then this may one day be a piece of evidence that could be used further to pin down the date of composition of the Parākhya. But the period in which Candrānanda wrote is not known. ISAACSON (*1995:140–1) reviews the evidence adduced to date and places him between c. 600 AD (on the strength of his reference to Uddyotakara) and the tenth century (on the strength of what are probably borrowings in Helārāja's commentary on the Vākyapadīya).

Among other tantras, as we have observed, the closest in style and tone appear to be the Mṛgendra, the Matāṅga and the South Indian Pauṣkara. My view that the Pauṣkara postdates Rāmakaṇṭha I have expressed before (GOODALL 1998:xliii–xlv and again GOODALL 2001a:329).

⁷³Other non-tantric clichés include 6:44ab, 6:47ab, 14:63cd, and 14:89a.

Furthermore I have argued (GOODALL 2001a:329–30) that for the portions that the Pauṣkara shares with the Parākhya it is the Pauṣkara that was the borrower; indeed it is not improbable, as I have there suggested, that the eighth chapter of the Pauṣkara (in which all the shared portions are to be found) is entirely an interpolation. One freshly discovered piece of evidence for its date is worth recording here, since it will be useful to us below in another context.

Excursus upon the Pauṣkaras

It may be recalled that the famous twelfth-century commentator Aghoraśiva appears to be the first author to have cited a number of distinctive verses belonging to the South Indian Pauṣkara, but that he never gives a labelled quotation from the text (GOODALL 1998:xliv, fn. 101⁷⁴). Aghoraśiva's not labelling these quotations, I have suggested, might be accounted for if we assumed that he was uncomfortably aware of two Pauṣkaras, and that his predecessors quoted from the other alone. This still seems to me a not implausible hypothesis, and indeed we find that Aghoraśiva's contemporary Jñānaśambhu, a South Indian, but living in Benares (see p. cx below), does not quote from the newer Pauṣkara but only from the older one. One of his quotations is of especial interest in part because, unlike most other fragments of the old Pauṣkara that have come to light, it overlaps with a teaching found in the new Pauṣkara (Jñānaratnāvalī, Madras GOML MS R 14466, p. 254, IFP MS T. 231, p. 281–2):⁷⁵

⁷⁴To the list given there of unlabelled quotations from the Pauṣkara in the works of Aghoraśiva should be added the quotation of Pauṣkara 1:91c–92b in the Ratnatrayollekhinī ad 263–4 (also quoted without attribution by Aghoraśiva's disciple Trilocanaśiva in his Siddhāntasamuccaya, IFP MS T. 284, p. 134).

⁷⁵As BRUNNER has indicated (1981:139–40) the first verse alone of this passage is cited, evidently from the Jñānaratnāvalī (since it is followed there by ityādinā prakāraṇtaraṃ jñānaratnāvalyādaḥ prasiddham), at the end of the Śaiva section of the Sarvadarśanaśaṅgraha (p. 189). It is also cited with attribution to the Pauṣkara by Rāmakaṇṭha in his Sārdhatrīśatikālottaravṛtti ad 1:3.

Now this is recognisably the same list of padārthas that we find in the newer Pauṣkara (1:8–14), but one of the accounts is plainly a reformulation of the other. Indeed BHATT (upodghāta to the first volume of the Mataṅga, p. xlvii) refers to the existence of quotations of the first half-line supposing it to be simply a variant of 1:8cd of the printed Pauṣkara. Its relationship with the list of the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 2:14–21) is also unmistakable, and we may assume that it is to be explained because all three texts (the Mataṅga, the printed Pauṣkara, and the Pauṣkara quoted by Jñānaśambhu) see themselves as redactions of the Pārameśvara division of scripture.⁸⁶

Parallels with other Siddhāntatantras

Other than the verses incorporated from the Parākhya into the eighth chapter of the Pauṣkara, I am not aware of shared verses between the two texts. Nor are there many pādas shared between the Parākhya and what is arguably the next closest (in spirit) of the Siddhāntatantras, the Mataṅga, and such as there are tend to be tantric clichés (Mataṅgavidyāpāda 17:189d ≈ Parākhya 2:21d, Mataṅgavidyāpāda 4:55d = Parākhya 2:122d, Mataṅgavidyāpāda 3:20a = Parākhya 3:56a,⁸⁷ Mataṅgavidyāpāda 23:85b = Parākhya 5:6b, Mataṅgavidyāpāda 7:44a = Parākhya 6:27a). Although similar in their subject matter, the Parākhya and the Mataṅga are not particularly similar in style. The much longer Mataṅga tends to be more prolix, filled out with frequent vocatives and expressions whose only purpose is to pad out the verse. Observe, for instance, that there are more than a dozen half-verses in the vidyāpāda of the Mataṅga that end with na saṁśayaḥ, asaṁśayaḥ or nātra saṁśayaḥ,⁸⁸ and note the very large number of pādas filled out with mune or mahāmune or muniṣṭhava. There is but a single vocative addressing Pratoda in the transmitted chapters of the Parākhya (4:166b)⁸⁹ and there are no lines ending in any of the formulae using the word saṁśaya. Nor are the particles tu, hi and ca used in loose profusion to fill out the verses. Another padding ploy much used in the Mataṅga is that of compounds ending in an otiose -ātman or *-antarātman*⁹⁰ or simply tacking on mahātmanām or mahātmanaḥ as an additional qualifier.⁹¹ In the Parākhya we find comparable otiose uses of ātman only in 3:63d and 15:20d, and one instance of mahātmanā (in 3:60d) which might be held to be otiose or nearly so.

The treatment of one particular topic, the story of the division by Ananta of mantras at creation related in Parākhya 3:57ff, may have been based on the treatment found in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 7; but it is not impossible that both were drawing on the same source or on related sources. And it is possible that Parākhya 4:27–28b (now corrupt) and Mataṅgavidyāpāda 9:28 go back to a common source. The puzzling treatment of perception in Parākhya 4:32–4 contains the term dvāra apparently as a term for the three internal organs, which is an oddity that I have elsewhere observed only in the Mataṅga (see annotation ad loc.)

I have noticed three half-verses that are shared with the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha: 1:80ab = Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 2:13cd, 4:41ab ≈ Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 2:17ab, and Appendix I.G:94cd = Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 10:3ab; and it seems possible to me that 1:52cd is a conscious echo of Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 2:4. A handful of clichés are shared with the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha: 2:92ab ≈ Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 10:32cd; 2:121b = Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 1:15d; 2:123ab ≈ Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 1:14ab and 2:12ab; 5:144d = Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 3:13b (as transmitted in M^y).

The only substantial passage that is almost certainly based on a particular Siddhāntatantra that I have been able to identify is in the concluding portion of Parākhya 4 (4:151ff). Here numerous verses echo in their formulation the treatment of the same ideas in the Kiraṇa. The Kiraṇa's treatment is distinctive and the Parākhya's reformulation would be extremely difficult to interpret without the Kiraṇa's account to lay beside it. Parākhya 2:102–4 may be a reformulation of Kiraṇa 5:3–6b, but a rather distant one. Another echo, of Kiraṇa 6:1–4, is discernible in verses attributed to the Parākhya in the Mṛgendrapaddhatiṭkā Appendix I, C:50–1. But in this case this could equally be an echo of a pair of verses ascribed to the Raurava which Vaktraśambhu quotes in the same context.⁹²

The Mṛgendra (in vidyāpāda 2:12–14) and the Parākhya (in 1:42–50) appear to be the only early Siddhāntas to devote attention to the refu-

śrīmadraurave 'pi

na cotpattivināśābhyāṃ nāpi jāter vidhīyate cetanasyāpi śuddhasya kṣetrajñasya śārīriṇaḥ jñāsvabhāvātmano 'kartus tasya saṃskāra īsyate.

The last line is corrected to the reading in Kiraṇavṛtti 1:23.12–13, where the second of these verses is quoted (with attribution to the Raurava) by Rāmakaṇṭha. In T. 1021 it reads jñūbhātmano kartumsta saṃskāra īsyate.

tation of a philosophical Vedānta.⁹³ I have presented and discussed both passages elsewhere (GOODALL forthcoming A), and suggested tentatively that, since the undated early Saiddhāntika writer Sadyojyotis appears to have been aware only of a Vedāntic pariṇā mavāda,⁹⁴ it is conceivable that ⁹³The Sarvajñānottara, as is well known (see, e.g., SANDERSON 1992:291), is exceptional among the early Siddhāntas for upholding rather than refuting a non-dualist position, but its non-dualism does not seem to me to be distinctively Vedāntic. In his (in almost every other detail inaccurate) preface to the Adyar edition, KUNJUNNI RAJA helpfully points out (p. vi) what is likely to be an instance of borrowing from what is usually accepted to be a Vedāntic source. Sarvajñānottara 111–12 (Tanjore edition [E_T]; 2:51–2 in Devakoṭṭai edition [E_D]; 99–100 in Adyar edition [E_A]; Nepalese MS f. 52^r, lines 4–5 [N₁]; IFP MS 47818, p. 44) read as follows:

- [There are three aiśa usages here: ākāśa is treated as a neuter noun, nabhas as an -a stem, and N₁'s nīyati is a passive with the final vowel changed from an e to give the regular cadence of the pathyā.]

Compare these verses with those of Gauḍapāda's Āgamaśāstra, which might have inspired them (Māṇḍūkya-kārikā 3:3–4):

ātmā hy ākāśavaḥ jīvair ghaṭākāśair ivoditah ghaṭādivac ca samghātair jātāv etan nidarśanam ghaṭādiṣu pralīneṣu ghaṭākāśādayo yathā ākāśe sampralīyante tadvaj jīvā ihātmani.

In BHATTACHARYA's edition (p. 50) he quotes the first of our verses (in the form given by E_T) as being verse 3 of the Tripurātāpanyupaniṣat. It occurs also (with some variation) as 32:62c–63b of the Niśvāsakārikā, IFP MSS T. 17, p. 232 and T. 127, p. 286.

But the source on which the Sarvajñānottara (and the Niśvāsakārikā) drew may not have been a Vedāntic one. LINDTNER (1989:vi[a], referring to QVARNSTRÖM 1989:109) mentions that the ghaṭākāśa adṛṣṭānta can in fact be traced back further, to the Buddhist Āryasatyadvayāvatārasūtra.

both the Parākhya and the Mṛgendra post-date him.⁹⁵ This now seems to me to have been premature, for I was assuming that in both tantras a developed Vedāntic vivartavāda was what was being discussed, and this is not actually clear in the case of the Mṛgendra, which makes essentially three claims about the non-dualism that it attacks that need not entail that that non-dualism is a form of vivartavāda. The claims are:⁹⁶ that non-dualism is devoid of external proof, that, since there is only one soul, experience must be unitary, and that, given this view, true liberation ⁹⁵I did not in that article discuss the evident influence of Vedānta upon the Pauṣkara on the grounds that that text did not belong to the 'early' canon, which is to say the group of tantras known to the Kashmirian tenth-century exegetes. It is worth just remarking in passing that that text's response to Vedāntic ideas is more detailed and more sophisticated than that of either the Mṛgendra or the Parākhya. Particularly noteworthy in this regard is its discussion beginning with 3:11:

prapañco 'yaṃ pramātrādibhedātmā nākṣagocaraḥ
yataḥ pratyakṣam arthānām vi dhātṛ na niśedhakam.

The verse is surely an allusion to Maṇḍanamīśra's Brahmasiddhi, the Tarkakāṇḍa of which famously begins: āhur vi dhātṛ pratyakṣam na niśedhṛ vipaścitaḥ.

This heightened awareness of Vedāntic ideas (which we find addressed elsewhere in the text too, for instance in 4:74ff) is exactly what we would expect to find in the Pauṣkara when we recall that the evidence of quotations (which are to be found in the works of authors from the Tamil-speaking South from the middle of the twelfth century onwards) and of the distribution of manuscripts that transmit the work (all Southern) unequivocally suggests that it post-dated Rāmakaṇṭha and belonged to a South Indian milieu.

vedānteṣv eka evātmā cidacidvyakti lakṣitaḥ prati jñāmātram evedaṃ niścayaḥ kiṃ nibandhanaḥ atha pramāṇaṃ tatratmā prameyatvaṃ prapadyate yatra itad ubhayaṃ tatra catuṣṭayaṃ api sthitam advaitahānir evaṃ syān niṣpramāṇakatānyathā bhogasāmyāvimokṣau ca yau neṣṭāv ātmavā dibhiḥ.

'In the śāstras of the Vedānta there is only one soul, known through its manifestations, which are sentient and insentient. This is no more than mere assertion. What is the basis of this certainty? If you say that there is some valid means of knowing it [viz. scripture], then the soul must be the object of the valid knowledge. If you accept this pair [of means of knowing and object of knowledge], then all four [i.e. pramāṇa, prameya, pramātr, and pramiti] are proven to exist. [And] thus that would be the end of non-dualism; either that, or it must be without valid means of knowledge. And there would also result [the faults] that all must share the same experience and that liberation would be impossible, both which faults are not accepted by any who maintain the existence of the soul.'

must be impossible. In the case of the Parākhya, however, I think it is some form of vivartavāda that is attacked, but the attack itself does not help me to determine more precisely what form of Vedānta might be targeted and it is furthermore reminiscent of a passage in the Ślokavārttika (see 1:44 and annotation ad loc.), which means that this passage may after all not have as much bearing on the dating of the Parākhya as I had supposed.

Nevertheless, it seems to me probable that the Parākhya is among the latest (if not itself the latest) of the demonstrably early (i.e. pre-tenth-century because known to the Kashmirian commentators of the lineage of Rāmakaṇṭha II) listed Siddhāntas to survive.

The earliest quotations from the Parākhya are probably those of Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha, whom we may date (very approximately) to c. 925–975 on the basis of the tentative dating of his son Rāmakaṇṭha II to c. 950–1000 (for which see GOODALL 1998:xiii–xviii, quoting evidence given by BRUNNER, SANDERSON and TORELLA), and thus it must have been written before the tenth century. SANDERSON (2002:5–6, fn. 3) has pointed out that it is conceivable that the Parākhya was alluded to in c. 830 AD in Ratnākara's Haravijaya, in verses 6:79–170 of which the seasons praise Śiva in the terms of Saiddhāntikas. In 6:147 an allusion is made to five padārthas, which the commentator Alaka elucidates by quoting Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 4:48; but, as SANDERSON observes, the other surviving early Siddhānta that has five padārthas is the Parākhya (see 1:5), and the possibility cannot be excluded that it was the Parākhya that Ratnākara had in mind.

We may conclude that the Parākhya may have been composed in the eighth or ninth century AD.

The lost commentary

A handful of references and two quotations inform us that there was an ancient commentary on the Parākhya. About the author of that commentary we know only that he predated Aghoraśiva, who flourished in the middle of the twelfth century (see GOODALL 1998:xiii–xvii, fn. 24). Evidence of first-hand knowledge of the commentary is found only in the works of Aghoraśiva and of Aghoraśiva's immediate disciples Vaktra-śambhu and Trilocanaśiva⁹⁷ (the only later quotations I am aware of are quotations of the same portions to which Aghoraśiva and his disciples refer). The largest fragment quoted is a discussion of the sambandhas, a classification of types of transmission of a scripture in accordance with the rank of its transmitters. The theme is alluded to at the beginning of Parākhyā 3, on which this may therefore be commentary, but it may have belonged to a sequence of opening verses (Kriyākramadyotikā p. 4):⁹⁸

... *tatra pare īśādayaḥ, apare devamuniprabhṛtayaḥ, parāpare
anantādayaḥ. tathā samākhyātāṃ śrīmatparākhyavṛttau* *guravo bahavas tv atra parāparavibhedataḥ codakādivibhedena tathā gurvādibhedataḥ īśaḥ sadāśivaḥ śānto guravaḥ paramā matāḥ ekam eva paraṃ tattvaṃ svecchayā tu tridhā sthitam

anantaḥ śrīgaḷaś comā skando viṣṇur vidhis tu ṣaṭ parāpare 'pare devā munayo nṛgurūttamāḥ.*

The Parākhyā's transmitters fall into the last and lowest group. For the only other quotation known to me attributed to the commentary on the Parākhyā see Appendix I.L:130 and its context.

Vaktraśambhu actually does not quote from the commentary on the Parākhyā, but includes it, as Professor SANDERSON has pointed out to me, in an interesting list of tantras on which there are commentaries, then of uncommented tantras, then of paddhatis (IFP MS T. 1021, p. 111):

khyāteṣu śrīmadraavasvāyambhuvamṛgendrakiraṇaparā-*

⁹⁷For evidence of these both being Aghoraśiva's immediate disciples see GOODALL 2000:208–11. I there referred to Vaktraśambhu with the name Naṭeśaguru, but, as Professor Alexis SANDERSON has pointed out to me (letter of 23.v.2002), because of the fragmentary transmission of the concluding verses it is not certain whether this is a name or part of an epithet. Vaktraśambhu, however, a synonym of Tatpuruṣaśiva, was evidently his initiatory name. We could therefore call him Tatpuruṣaśiva (after all, Aghoraśiva sometimes gives his own name in the less common variant form Bahurūpaśambhu: see GOODALL 1998:xv), but I have chosen to retain the only form in which the name is attested.

As an aside it is perhaps worth spelling out to which commentaries on tantras he alludes. On the Raurava they are presumably Sadyojyotis's Rauravavṛttis, that is to say the Bhogakārikā, Mokṣakārikā, and Paramokṣanirāśakārikā, Sadyojyotis's lost Sarvāgamaprāmāṇya and lost commentary on the Mudrāprakaraṇa,¹⁰³ as well as the anonymous lost Rauravavārttika (if it was still known in twelfth-century South India), which was probably a work of Bṛhaspatipāda.¹⁰⁴ On the Svāyambhuva-sūtrasaṅgraha they are the Svāyambhuvavṛtti and the Tattvatrayanir- ¹⁰⁴This is the plausible suggestion of DVIVEDĪ (1983:70 and 63), for which the principal evidence is the identifications offered by Jayaratha of two allusions in the Tantrāloka. 1.) The label ity etad gurubhir gītaṃ śrīmadrauravaśāsane that appears in Tantrāloka 8:101cd is identified by Jayaratha as referring to a work of Bṛhaspatipāda. 2.) In Tantrāloka 8:345ab we read: uktaṃ ca gurubhir itthaṃ śivatanvādyeṣu śāsaneṣv etat. Jayaratha's Tantrāloka viveka thereon reads ādiśabdād ruruvārttikādi; tad evāha. There then follow a series of verses of the Tantrāloka in āryā (8:345c–355b) which we may assume to be a quotation from the Śivatanuśāstra. Briefly, these outline a notion of mahāpralaya in which the Vidyēśvaras attain liberation one after the other. This is contrasted with the position of the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha, for Jayaratha quotes (in the Tantrāloka viveka ad 8:345c–353b) a verse that the editors of the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha conjecture may have belonged in between Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 4:21 and 4:22, although it is in fact Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 2:13 in the form in which it appears in MS B 776, the apograph of M^y:

¹⁰³For a reasoned account of what lies behind this assumption see GOODALL 1998:xx-xxvi. I there argued (p. xxv and fn. 57) that the lost Mantravārttika of Sadyojyotis might have formed part of this body of exegetical works on the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha on the basis of a quotation of a verse and a half in Vidyākāṇṭha II's Bhāvacūḍāmaṇi prefaced with the attribution uktaṃ ca rurusamhitāmantravārttike. I had failed to notice that the quoted unit is in fact to be found in the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha itself as verses 6–7b of what the edition calls the tenth chapter. Presumably the label is appropriate because that particular chapter of the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha is in part a commentary on the VYOMAVYĀPIN mantra. There is thus in fact no strong evidence that the Mantravārttika was part of a commentary on the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha, but we may recall that Rāmakaṇṭha may be implying it to have been a continuation of the Paramokṣanirāśakārikā in his Paramokṣanirāśakārikāvṛtti ad verse 3 (GOODALL 1998:xxvi).

ṇaya of Sadyojyotis with their subcommentaries, the lost Svāyambhuva-vṛttitippaṇaka of Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha,¹⁰⁵ and the Tattvatrayanirṇayavṛtti of Aghoraśiva, as well as the lost Svāyambhuvoddyota of Rāmakaṇṭha. But it is possible that those particular commentarial works of Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha and Rāmakaṇṭha were not accessible to Vaktraśambhu (I know of no South Indian allusions to them), and Rāmakaṇṭha's Tattvatraya-nirṇayavivṛti I do not include here because I assume that Vaktraśambhu did not know of it, since his guru Aghoraśiva evidently did not.¹⁰⁶ For the Ṙṣendra, aside from the well known Ṙṣendravṛtti and Ṙṣendra-vṛttidīpikā, we may count the Ṙṣendrapaddhati of Aghoraśiva,¹⁰⁷ on which Vaktraśambhu's work is a commentary. On the Kiraṇa we may assume that Vaktraśambhu knew Rāmakaṇṭha's Kiraṇavṛtti, but he quotes also from another vṛtti which he attributes to a certain Bhūtikaṇṭha

vihitaṃ sarvakartṛtvaṃ kāraṇaṃ paramaṃ padam.

This is interpreted to refer to the simultaneous liberation in mahāpralaya of all the Vidyēśvaras. Returning to Tantrāloka 8:345ab and Jayaratha's remark thereon, it seems possible that it is to be interpreted as follows: 'And this has been taught as follows by a venerable teacher in the Śivatanuśāstra and in others [of his works]:...'. Jayaratha's remark then might be identifying the Rauravavārttika as another of Bṛhaspatipāda's works. This hypothesis receives support from two parallel discussions of which DVIVEDĪ was unaware in 1983. The first is in Rāmakaṇṭha's commentary on the Tattvatrayanirṇaya (hitherto unmentioned, as far as I am aware, in the secondary literature), the Tattvatrayanirṇayavivṛti, to the sole surviving MS of which Dr. Kei KATAOKA has kindly drawn my attention. Here (f. 107^r) Rāmakaṇṭha distinguishes the two views as being those of, among others, the author of the Rauravavārttika (kaiś cid rauravavārttikakārādibhiḥ...) and that of Sadyojyotis: tat tv ayuktam, yugapan-muktiśruter iti darśitaṃ rauravavṛttau guruṇā. proktaṃ hi raurave... [there follows a quotation of 2:13, the same verse as Jayaratha quotes]. The passage of the Rauravavṛtti to which Rāmakaṇṭha here refers is probably Mokṣakārikā 93:

amī rudrās tu sūkṣmādyā mantrās ca śivatulyatām sānantāḥ svādhikārānte yānti muktiṃ hareraṇāt.

In the commentary thereon we find the second passage that supports DVIVEDĪ's hypothesis, a quotation of three half-lines from the passage of the Rauravavārttika to which Jayaratha must have been referring in his Tantrāloka viveka ad 8:345ab.

(IFP MS T. 1021, pp. 208–9). This might be the same work as the Br̥hatkīraṇoddyota referred to by Jñānaśambhu, one of the gurus of his contemporary and co-pupil Trilocanaśiva (Jñānaratnāvalī, Madras GOML MS R 14898, pp. 44 and 186) and quoted in the Ātmārthapūjāpaddhati (IFP MSS T. 795, p. 78, T. 323, p. 125, T. 321, p. 127, and T. 282, p. 116). On the Mataṅga Vaktraśambhu may have known only the Mataṅgavṛtti of Rāmakaṇṭha, for I know of no references to the lost commentary of Vyākhyāniguru other than that in Śivadīṣṭi 3:14. We have no evidence for the authorship of the lost commentaries on the Parākhyā and the Sūkṣmasvāyambhuva (see fn. 50 on p. xxxvi above).

Commentaries by Aghoraśiva survive on the Dviśatikālottara and the Sarvajñānottara (the Dviśatikālottaravṛtti and the Sarvajñānottaravṛtti), and we know from Vaktraśambhu's opening verses¹⁰⁸ that Aghoraśiva composed a commentary (now lost) on the Catuṣśatikālottara (referred to by Vaktraśambhu above as the Catuṣśatikā), and from the same verses, as well as from one of Aghoraśiva's concluding verses to his Dviśatikālottaravṛtti,¹⁰⁹ that he composed another now lost commentary on the Mohacūḍottara. Vaktraśambhu may also have been aware of an older, lost commentary on the Sarvajñānottara from which Rāmakaṇṭha quotes in his Sārdhatriśatikālottaravṛtti ad 22:8–9b.

A résumé of the text

Verse 1:5 provides a programme for the treatment of topics in the tantra. Thereafter the first chapter discusses the soul, refuting conceptions of other schools, notably that of Bauddhas and, exceptionally, of Advaita. Chapters 2 and 3 deal with the Lord and with the upper reaches of the universe comprehended within vidyā. Chapters 4 and 5 present the evolution of māyā and the cosmos within it. Chapter 6 discusses nāda at some length. Chapters 7–13 have not been transmitted, and it is clear that these, at least in part, related to ritual prescriptions and the like: as we have observed above (p. xli), we can assume this to have been so on the basis of 6:81.¹¹⁰ Chapter 14 discusses yoga, and finally chapter 15 investigates the rôle of the four 'sādhana's' of jñāna, kriyā, caryā and yoga vis à vis dīkṣā. As I have argued elsewhere (GOODALL 1998:lxiv–lxv), it is not clear whether or not the Parākhya was divided into sections of text named after these pādas. It seems unlikely, for the final colophon does not mention a pāda to which the final chapter belongs, nor does it plainly fit any one of them. But as I have there pointed out, the fragmentary penultimate verse of chapter 6 (6:81) shows that the author of the Parākhya either recognised the word pāda to refer to such divisions of a text (and not just, as in other early sources, to four basic topics with which a tantra deals) or used it unselfconsciously in a way that allowed it to be so interpreted. BRUNNER (1992a) has demonstrated that the division of Saiddhāntika scriptures into four parts bearing the names of these pādas is neither common nor early; but it is clear that the terminology itself—as the Parākhya and the Kiraṇa (e.g. in 1:13), as well as other non-Saiddhāntika works, tell us—is early.¹¹¹

Chapter 1. The soul

Pratoda sees Prakāśa in an āśrama on the Ganges and asks for teaching, which Prakāśa, after venerating Śiva, begins to give (1–2).

The tantra is described. Its five topics (padārthas) of the bound soul (paśu), the Lord (īśvara), scripture/knowledge (vidyā), the womb (yonī), and liberation (mukti) are listed (3–5) and then briefly characterised (6–10).

A (transmissionally corrupt) discussion of techniques of exegesis follows (11–14).

Verse 15 gives a list of attributes of the soul, and this serves as an agenda for the remainder of the first chapter.¹¹²

Pratoda advances the materialist Cārvāka's refutation of the existence of the soul (16–17 and 21), which Prakāśa refutes (18–20 and 22–7).

Pratoda attacks the notion of the self from a Buddhist position that all things are momentary (28 and 30); Prakāśa refutes this on the basis of the evidence of memory (29 and 31–5).

The all-pervasiveness of the soul is attacked and then defended (36–9).

Vedāntic non-dualism is advanced (40, 42, and 45) and rejected (42, 43–4, 46–50).

Pratoda advances the position that the soul should be free of defilements (51), which Prakāśa answers with a demonstration of the logical need for a category of innate impurity (mala), distinct from passion (rāga) or from the retributive force of past actions (karman) (52–60).

Pratoda advances the view that the soul is essentially insentient, but has awareness when linked with a body and senses (61), and this Prakāśa counters with the position that the stimulus provided by the body and instruments of the senses only works because of the power of sentiency that belongs to the soul (62–71).

Pratoda questions the view that karman is the cause of the diversity of the universe (72) and Prakāśa refutes it (74–80).

Pratoda argues that agency belongs to the body rather than to the soul (81 and 85) and Prakāśa responds by defending the position that the soul is responsible for his karman (82–92) and that the Lord ensures that the proper karman is linked to each soul (93–4).

Summary verse (95).

Chapter 2. The Lord

This begins with a list of attributes of the Lord that gives us an agenda for the chapter (1).

That the universe is really an effect, of which the Lord is a cause, is called into question and defended (2–11).

In the course of this defence, circumstantial inference (arthāpatti) appears to be rejected, or rejected as an independent means of knowledge (9–10).

The Mīmāṃsaka position that the universe was never not as it now is is advanced, and it is mooted that karman might be the cause of the universe (12).

Prakāśa responds to both arguments (13–14 and 15–19), insisting that a sentient cause is required and that karman is not sentient.

Pratoda poses the Buddhist dilemma that the activity of creation can neither have taken place all at a single moment nor gradually (20–1).

Prakāśa's reply reiterates the inescapability of the existence of causes for the production of effects, asserts that the Lord's activity of creation is both simultaneous and gradual, and states that all effects are produced by a combination of causes of three types: instigating causes, material causes, auxiliary causes (22–30).

The possibility of producing effects without resort to instruments is questioned (31) and justified by comparison with the sun and moon (32-4).

The Lord's power of action is said to be his 'instrument' and this, although one, is known by many names, in accordance with the functions it performs (35-42).

Nine powers (śaktis) whose names are drawn from the Vedic vāmadeva mantra are enumerated, together with the form of the Lord by whom they are controlled, and affective etymologies (nirvacana) of their names are given (43-61).

The Lord is omniscient because he creates everything (62-65b).

The 'supportlessness' of His power of knowledge does not prevent its operation, just as the supportlessness of wind does not prevent it from shaking branches (65c-67b).

Just so is the soul's condition in liberation, as is taught in the last part of the Veda (vedānta): consciousness characterised by powers of knowledge and action (67c-71b).

There is no fault of circularity in scripture being that which teaches us about the Lord and the Lord being the one who teaches us scripture (71c-73).

What is revealed by one means of knowledge (pramāṇa) does not need to be revealed by another (74-75b).

One cannot argue for the non-existence of something on the grounds that one does not perceive it by direct perception (pratyakṣa) (75c-76).

The Lord's existence is thus proved; conventional usage (rūḍhi) determines that the name Īśvara designates him (77-82).

His body is made up of the five Vedic brahmamantras (83-85b).

Īśvara's being sakala (equipped with powers/divisions) is not to be understood in the same way as the bound soul's being sakala (linked to the evolutes of primal matter); without His form He could not be worshipped and so liberation could not be attained (85c-88).

Affective etymologies (nirvacana) are given of the names of each of the brahmamantras (89-95b).

The supreme Śiva is the same as the Lord who resides in a body; the Lord is both sa-kala and niṣkala (transcendent/devoid of divisions); He is the cause of creation, maintenance, destruction and grace (96-7).

When He is sa-kala, He is called 'engaged in office' (adhikārin); he teaches the Rudras and others their duties; but the categorisation of the Lord as 'engaged in office' (adhikārin), 'engaged in experience/enjoyment' (bhōgin), and 'in resorption' (layin) is not ultimately real (98–99b).

Śiva's bestowing His grace depends on the transmission of His scripture (śāstra) from ācārya to pupil (99c–101b).

A descent of divine power (śaktipāta) comes upon a person, who then seeks a guru; this comes about as a result of the person's suitability and not because of Śiva's being partial (101c–113).

It is for the sake of bestowing grace that Śiva sets creation from primal matter (māyā) in motion; for this He awakens the mantras and the eight officiants known as Vidyēśvaras (114–17).

The Vidyēśvaras' names are given and analysed by nirvacana; themselves free from the stain of primal matter (māyā), they administer the lower universe (118–121).

They are equal in power of action to the Lord, but they are subject to Him and perform their duties according to His bidding, these being the five cosmic functions (pañcakṛtya) of creation, maintenance, destruction, grace and occlusion (122–4).

Pratoda asks what need there is of these functionaries if Śiva is creator and whether it is right to speak of Śiva's power if it is they who perform these duties (125).

Pratoda responds that it would tarnish Śiva's glory if He were to act Himself, hence the others are employed (126–128d).

The discussion of the Lord (īśvaratattva) is thus concluded and reference is made to the subject of the next chapter (128e–129).

Chapter 3. Scripture and the pure universe

The opening verse giving the agenda defines vidyā as scripture, under which head it promises a discussion of the transmission and the authoritativeness of scripture, and mantras (1).

Śiva 'awakens' Ananta and the other Vidyēśvaras at the beginning of creation; these in turn 'awaken' Gauda and others, who in turn 'awaken' Bhava and others, and knowledge then passes to Vīrabhadra, Umeśāna, the gods, sages (2–6).

Pratoda questions how the formless supreme Śiva can create scripture and why it is necessary that he should if Ananta and others are 'awakeners' (7–8).

Prakāśa's response (9–21) mentions the condensed redactions of knowledge that are known in this world (15–16) and gives an affective etymology (nirvacana) of the word vaktra, 'mouth', from which knowledge issues (17–18).

Pratoda takes the position of a Mīmāṃsaka, questioning the authoritativeness of Śaiva scripture on the grounds that it is authored (pauruṣeya) and asserting that the Veda is authoritative on the grounds that it is without author (apauruṣeya) (22).

Prakāśa takes each of the six valid means of knowledge accepted by Mīmāṃsakas and shows that none of them proves the Veda to be authorless (23–37).

Pratoda's question in response appears to allude to Kumārila's three criteria for non-authoritativeness, asserting that none of them applies to the Veda (38–9).

Prakāśa replies that one of them, doubt, is applicable; he then questions the Mīmāṃsaka notion that a means of knowledge is authoritative of itself (svataḥprāmāṇya), and asserts that the use of language, like the use of a lamp, depends upon an agent (40–5).

The passage that follows, which is unfortunately corrupt and badly damaged, treats of the authoritativeness of Śaiva revelation, which in spite of differences within it, all derives ultimately from Śiva (46–56).

The genesis of the seven crores of mantras, their sense of revulsion towards the created universe and their division by Ananta into two equal groups (of officiants and of fully liberated souls) is related (57–72).

Prakāśa gives an account of which of the principal mantras arise out of which parts of Śiva's 'body' (73–7).

A nirvacana of vidyā. in the sense of mantra is given (78) and the final verse sums up the topic of mantras and refers forward to the topic of the following chapter: 'the womb' (yonī) (79).

Chapter 4. The evolutes of primal matter

The opening verse gives a list of epithets of primal matter (māyā) that are justified in the course of the discussion of the chapter: subtle, perduring, formless, all-pervading, the abode of sentient entities, shaken by the Lord, producing the effects that are the constitutive principles (tattva) of the universe of our experience, ranging from that of limited power to act (kalā) to earth,¹¹³ etc. (1-2).

Pratoda questions whether primal matter (māyā) is the material cause of the universe and observes that it is beyond our senses (3).

Prakāśa lists factors that prevent our perceiving entities that exist and concludes that māyā's extreme subtlety prevents us from perceiving it but that it is known from scripture and reasoning (4-7).

He lists the tattvas, starting from the bottom (8-10), and argues for the necessity of there being a perduring material cause that produced them, concluding that scripture teaches us that that cause is primal matter (māyā) (11-16).

It is all-pervading, formless and the cause from which effects proceed and into which they are resorbed (17-20b).

A class of inert souls known as Pralayākalas are trapped in it in phases of resorption of the universe, and for their embodiment the Lord stimulates primal matter (māyā) into action to produce her effects (20c-23).

The first of these is the principle of limited power to act (kalā), which effects a partial revelation of the soul's power of consciousness (24-9).

From this evolves the principle of limited power to know (vidyā), the necessity of which is justified by way of a discussion of the process of perception involving the sense faculties (indriyas) thought sufficient for the process by Sāṅkhya thinkers (30-6).

The tattva of passion (rāga) is added as the third of the three central cuirasses (kañcukas), it is distinguished from the disposition of the intellect (buddhi) known as 'lack of dispassion' (avairāgya), and it is explained to have a positive and a negative form (rāga and virāga), the latter being distinguished from true dispassion, which is the absence of both (37-44).

To these are added the cuirasses (kañcukas) of time (45-50) and binding fate (niyati), which ensure that the results of a particular soul's past actions accrue to that same soul (51).

The existence of binding fate (niyati) is questioned on the grounds that its function could be performed by karman itself (52), and then reasserted (53-4).

Its power acts upon the tattva of the person (puruṣa-tattva), which is located above secondary matter (prakṛti)¹¹⁴ and which is the locus of the ¹¹³That is to say the five-fold cuirass (kañcuka) that equips the bound soul for embodiment in the worlds in māyā, followed by the twenty-five tattvas of the Sāṅkhyas.

¹¹⁴The translation is not ideal: historically it is the material cause of Sāṅkhya thinkers, group of eight worlds called the yogāṣṭaka (55–7).

From the principle of limited power to act (kalā) evolves secondary matter (prakṛti); etymologies are offered of its names (58–60).

Pratoda asks about the need for postulating kalā and the other tattvas above secondary matter (prakṛti), since the effects of prakṛti would be enough to account for bondage (61).

Prakāśa responds with arguments for prakṛti being an effect and therefore depending on a cause (62–6).

The Lord links souls to these effects (67–8).

The tattva of the three constitutive strands of existence (viz. the guṇas of rajas, sattva and tamas) evolves from secondary matter (avyakta: the unmanifest), its existence as a tattva is defended and its functions are touched upon (69–73).

From this evolves the intellect (buddhi), which has the eight properties of rectitude (dharma), knowledge (jñāna), dispassion (vairāgya), control (aiśvarya) and the opposites of these; the predominance of one or other of these is due to the predominance or otherwise of certain of the guṇas (74–5).

The ten moral injunctions and restrictions (yamas and niyamas) are enumerated (without these labels) as proceeding from rectitude (dharma) (76–8).

Knowledge (jñāna), which proceeds from different causes and applies to different domains (adhyātma, adhibhūta and adhidaiva), gives rise to dispassion (vairāgya), which in turn motivates a man to engage in yoga and to win thereby the eight yogic powers of being able to render oneself minute (aṇiman), etc. (79–83).

The results of a preponderance of the guṇa of darkness/occlusion (rajas) and therefore of non-rectitude (adharma) are touched upon (84–6), then of lack of dispassion (anaiśvarya) (87–9).

The last verse of Prakāśa's speech mentions that the intellect (buddhi) is responsible for determinative thought (adhyavasāya) (90).

Pratoda suggests that the soul must be insentient if all these properties reside really in the intellect (buddhi) (91).

Prakāśa explains that they are figuratively described as properties of the buddhi and that the buddhi enables perception in that it takes on the

which is arguably rendered functionless by the Śaiva addition of primal matter (māyā) at a higher level of the universe.

The tattva of self-appropriation (ahankāra) arises from the intellect (buddhi). It is of three kinds: Taijasa, Vaiṣṇava and Bhūtādi. The first gives rise to the five faculties of sense, the second to the five of action and the third to the five subtle elements (94-6b).

The function of each faculty is presented (96c-106b).

The subtle elements (of hearing, touch, sight, taste, and smell) that have arisen from Bhūtādi give rise to the five gross elements (106c-108).

Ether is characterised (109-114b).

Air, including the vital breaths, is characterised (114-117b).

Fire and its places in the body are treated (118-20).

Water and earth and their functions in the body are treated (121-2).

A summary is given of this creation from the principle of self-appropriation (ahankāra), in the course of which it is mentioned that the mind (manas) belongs to both the Taijasa and Vaiṣṇava groups (123-8).

Pratoda suggests that the gross elements might be the fundamental causes rather than the grossest effects and questions the position that the faculties arise from ahankāra (129).

Prakāśa refutes this objection and demonstrates the involvement of ahankāra in the use of each of the faculties (130-3).

Pratoda asserts that the material cause should inhere in its effects like threads in a cloth (134).

Prakāśa responds by asserting that primal matter (māyā) is a subtle, partless cause that does not inhere in its effects. He counters the possible objection that this subtle power that is māyā is unknowable by asserting that it is inferred from its effects much in the way that the atoms postulated by Naiyāyikas are (135-8).

A Buddhist objection is raised and refuted to the effect that the existence of the external object cannot be known independently from the knowledge of the external object and that therefore one need not posit the existence of anything other than that knowledge (139-48).

In the remainder of the chapter the collection of effects of primal matter (māyā) is said to make up the subtle transmigratory body (149-51); the shaking of māyā (to generate creation) is said to be partial, not total, since this would otherwise destroy her (152-3); māyā is the locus of great variety and of deluded souls (154-7).

Pratoda asks whether innate impurity (mala) is primal matter (māyā), or an effect thereof, or a property of the soul (158).

Prakāśa rejects each suggestion, explaining that it enjoys vicariously a place on the ladder of constitutive principles of the universe (tattva) in that it is inseparable from the bound soul (who occupies the position of puruṣatattva: see 55–7 above) (159–165b).

Separation from innate impurity (mala) is impossible, but its power is blocked and thereby the soul realises his Śiva-hood; all this is possible when he has been connected to the evolutes of primal matter (māyā) (165c–170).

Conclusion, at the end of which the worlds, which are the subject of the following chapter, are mentioned (171–2).

Chapter 5. The cosmos

The contents of the chapter are listed (1).

The thickness of the shell of the cosmic egg in the tattva of earth (brahmāṇḍa) is said to be ten thousand yojanas, and the yojana is defined (2–4).

Kālāgnirudra and his world are located a hundred crores of yojanas above the shell at the base (5–10).

Above that are the hells; thirty-two (groups of?) hells are named and aetiologies for their names are given (11–32b).

Altogether they are said to be 140¹¹⁵ and their measurements are given (32c–34b).

Ninety lakh yojanas above them is the world of Kūṣmāṇḍa, who presides over the hells (34c–40b).

Nine lakh yojanas above that are the seven subterranean paradises (pātālas), which are listed, given etymologies (nirvacanas) and assigned each a Daiṭya, a Nāga and a Rākṣasa, presumably to serve as regents for the three parts into which each is divided (40c–52).

Above these is the world of Hāṭaka, who presides over them (53–60).

And above that is our world bhūḥ, whose seven continents and seven oceans are listed (61–63b).

¹¹⁵The number could be interpreted otherwise; though not explicit on the point, the text appears to be following the model according to which the first twenty-nine hells are fourfold and the last three eightfold.

Among these continents, Jambūdvīpa's central mountain Meru, its nine divisions, which are bounded by mountains, are described and their names explained with aetiological myths (63c–93).

The surrounding concentric bands of oceans and continents are described and their names analysed, until we reach the ring-shaped boundary that is the Lokāloka mountain (94–109b).

Beyond that is the ocean called Garbhoda, then darkness, then the shell of the cosmic egg (brahmāṇḍa) (109c–111b).

The overall dimensions of this world are given and it is stated that only here is the accumulation of past action (karman) possible (111c–113).

Above it is the world known as Bhūvarloka, in which are the sun and the planets of the weekdays and the planets Rāhu and Ketu; above these the stars, the seven ṛṣis, and the pole star (114–29).

Above are the worlds of Svarloka, Maharloka, Janaloka, Tapoloka, and Satyaloka, where Brahmā resides (130–138b).

Four crores above him is Viṣṇu and six crores above him is Śaṅkara, and above him the shell of the cosmic egg (brahmāṇḍa) (138c–140).

Ten Rudras who bear the brahmāṇḍa are listed (141–4).

There follows a list of the Rudras who rule over each of the tattvas from that of water up to that of primal matter (māyā) (145–155b).

Above māyā, in the pure universe, Śambara is placed in the principle of pure knowledge (vidyātattva), Ananta in īśvarātattva, Brahmā in sadāśivatattva, and beyond him there is the supreme Śiva (155c–161).

Conclusion (162).

Chapter 6. Mantras

The opening verse lists as the topics of the chapter: the raising of mantras, the origin of the phonemes (akṣara/varṇa), the connection of words and sentences with meaning, the definition and the convention (?) of mantras and their particular fruits (1).

At the time of creation the Lord causes the phonemes to become manifest from 'the drop' (bindu) (2). Once shaken, the subtle material cause bindu produces the syllabary (śabdārāśi) in two groups: vowels and consonants (3–5).

They are the effects, the Lord is the instigating cause, bindu the material cause, human effort is an auxiliary cause; with them language, which is the basis for worldly interaction, is possible (6–8).

Pratoda suggests that the phonemes make manifest a power sphoṭa that is responsible for conveying meaning (9).

Prakāśa responds by asking whether this sphoṭa is the same as or different from the phonemes, and then showing that the two alternatives are to be rejected: meaning is conveyed by the final phoneme in conjunction with a trace left by the utterance of the preceding phonemes, and thus the phonemes themselves enable worldly interaction (10–16).

The nature of the relation between language and meaning is questioned (17); Prakāśa discounts various types of relation, states that the relationship is one of something that causes to understand and that which is to be understood, and asserts that an artificial convention is required to link them (18–24).

The question of whether this creation of convention was gradual or all-at-once is raised (25), and Prakāśa responds that it was created at once by God's will, and that the Lord was similarly the creator of the conventions that link mantras to their meanings (26–8).

Using the terminology of grammar, the principal parts of the fundamental mantra of the cult (ŚIVA) are identified (29–31).

The brahmamantras, aṅgamantras and the mantras of the Vidyēśvaras are raised (32–4).

The mantra-endings (jāti) are enumerated and their functions explained, and OM (praṇava) is mentioned as the jāti that belongs at the beginning of a mantra (35–7).

Thus power is said to reside in the beginning, middle and end of a mantra, in vowels, clusters of consonants, words and sentences (38–9).

Pratoda asks whether mantras, since they are made up of language, can be 'correct' and 'incorrect' (40).

Prakāśa suggests the futility of supposing a grammar of mantras and points out that both go, the 'correct' word for a cow, and gāvi, an 'incorrect' one, convey their meaning (41–3).

How, asks Prakāśa, can words convey meaning unless they are governed by grammar (44)?

Prakāśa illustrates the arbitrary conventionality of language, including examples of metrical termini used by metricians, in order to show that human sages have contributed conventions, and he concludes that mantras are similarly governed by conventions forged by Śiva (45–50).

Pratoda observes that mantras are just words articulated by the parts of the mouth, just like other words (51).

Prakāśa replies that stones and gems both share the common property of being stones, but only the latter category has special powers, and so too it is with ordinary words and mantras, whose power we can observe in the world when they are used to introduce or quell fever, destroy snakes (nāga) or spirits (bhūta), etc. (52–6).

An affective etymology (nirvacana) of mantra is offered, and the discussion is concluded with an assertion that the relation of them with their meaning is forged by Śiva (57–8).

Pratoda introduces the Mīmāṃsaka notion that deities are no more than words, and this is rejected by Prakāśa (59–64).

Pratoda wonders whether the deity is formless or corporeal: if formless, he cannot be what makes a sacrifice produce results; if corporeal, he could not simultaneously be present at many sacrifices (65–6).

Prakāśa resolves this dilemma by asserting that the deity may take on embodiments at will and that it is he who is the factor who produces the fruit of the sacrifice and not the ritual act itself (67–75).

As to the objection that the deity cannot be known since he is unseen, Prakāśa replies that the Mīmāṃsaka's heaven is also invisible, and he concludes that the ritual act is 'of the Lord' (aiśvarī kriyā), and that mantras are to be used in various rites (76–9).

In the last three verses, it is asserted that the vidyāpāda, with its four topics (padārtha)—that is to say the first four of the list given in 1:5—has been taught as it was taught by Śiva to Prakāśa, and the treatment of the last padārtha, that of liberation, is announced: Prakāśa states that he will now teach rituals (80–2).

Chapter 14. Yoga

The contents of the chapter are listed (1).

Suitable places for the practice of yoga are described (2) and the ideal state of mind (3).

A small number of postures are listed and described (4–7), one of which the yogin should adopt, folding his hands in his lap with their palms upwards, spreading out his chest, half-closing his eyes, and focussing them on the tip of his nose (8–9).

Six necessary auxiliaries of yoga (yogāṅga) are listed (pratyāhāra, dhyāna, prāṇāyāma, dhāraṇā, tarka, saṁādhi) (10) and briefly described (11–17). Stretching the breath (prāṇāyāma) is to be practised to conquer the five breaths (prāṇa, apāna, saṁāna, udāna, and vyāna), which are given etymologies (nirvacana) (18–25).

Breath-exercising techniques of 'filling' (pūraka), 'retaining' (kumbhaka), and 'expulsion' (recaka) are described (26–31).

Having thus conquered the breaths, the yogin should practise the five fixations (dhāraṇā) of the five elements (32–3).

That of earth is described (34–5), as well as the results of practising it (36ab), then that of water (36c–40b), that of fire (40c–43b), that of wind (43c–46), and that of ether (47–49b).

With a hundred udghātas conquest of the fixations (dhāraṇā) is achieved (49cd).

An udghāta (a timed retention of the breath such that, in the early stages of self-asphyxiation, the sensation is produced of a spontaneous upward surge of vital energy) is defined (50).

Having achieved conquest of the fixations (dhāraṇās), the yogin should practise yoga, for which his body is his base (51–2).

The variety of vessels in the body is mentioned and their function of transporting chyle about the body is adverted to (53–57b).

Eight principal vessels named after the directions and intermediate directions and reaching to the extremities of the petals of the heart's lotus are listed, and it is stated that the soul, by moving into one of these, takes on the nature of its presiding deity (57c–61).

Pratoda asks how the all-pervading soul can move (62), and Prakāśa explains that 'movement' is used in a figurative sense: what is meant is 'revelation of knowledge' (62–8).

Prāṇa and jīva appear to be given here as terms for (respectively in-going and out-going?) breath, without which a body is declared dead (69).

The left and right channels (mentioned without their usual labels idā and piṅgalā) are given as two principal channels above the heart and associated with the moon and the sun respectively; the central channel is in some way associated with both (70–1).

An account of the utterance of a mantra (mantroccāra) is given, passing from the heart (homologised with Brahmā), through the throat (Viṣṇu), the palate (Rudra), between the brows (Īśvara), to the tip of the nose (Sadāśiva), and these are further homologised with the five kalās that correspond to five tranches of the ladder of tattvas (72-7).

Each of these deities is said to be a name of the supreme deity, and their names are etymologised by nirvacana (78-80).

The HAṂSA-mantra (81-2).

'Movement' upwards, urged by the necessary auxiliary of yoga 'discrimination' (tarka), and the attainment of the meditative state of awareness (samādhi) (83-5).

The nature of the supreme tattva is discussed (86-90), on attaining which the soul enjoys mastery over the eight yogic powers (91-4).

The meaning of the term yoga is discussed (95-7).

Yogins possess supernatural powers which they should use to inspire faith in others (98-104).

Yogic suicide (105-7).

Conclusion (108).

Chapter 15. Liberation and the means to its attainment

Contents verse (1).

Knowledge (jñāna), rites (kriyā), religious observances (caryā) and yoga have been taught as a group of means necessarily preceded by initiation (dīkṣā) (2).

Pratoda asks which of these is really a means to liberation (3), to which Prakāśa replies that each of them is a necessary auxiliary (aṅga) to initiation (dīkṣā), since they depend on dīkṣā as their basis (4).

He gives a brief description of each and restates this position, concluding with an etymology (nirvacana) of dīkṣā (5-10).

Pratoda asks again which of jñāna, kriyā, caryā and yoga brings about liberation after initiation (dīkṣā) has first bestowed entitlement to follow them (11).

Prakāśa explains that samayadīkṣā, a preliminary initiation for neophytes, confers the entitlement to follow them, but that that preliminary initiation does not purge the soul of the fruits of past actions (karman) that it is to experience in other worlds (in the way that salvific initiation (dīkṣā) does), and therefore it is full dīkṣā that is salvific (12-14b).

None of the other means is sufficient by itself, for they are all dependent on each other; the initiating ācārya knows them all (14c-19).

Jñāna and kriyā are for ensuring continued memory, and therefore practice, of the Śaiva cult (20-1).

Pratoda asks why this 'memory' is not enough to accomplish liberation (22).

Prakāśa explains that it is the assemblage of all the factors (sāmagrī) that brings about the goal, and that this can be of two types: 'independent' (nirapekṣā), i.e. salvific initiation alone, without dependence on subsequent religious practice, and 'dependent' (sāpekṣā), i.e. salvific initiation dependent for its effect on the subsequent observance of the four means (24-6).

If there is 'independent' initiation (nirapekṣā dīkṣā), then are observances of celibacy (brahmacarya) and the like pointless, asks Pratoda (27).

Prakāśa reveals that the observance of social religion is to ensure that Śaivas are not looked down upon; it has no other particular benefit, but is honoured rather as the caste-hierarchy must be respected (28-30).

The removal of the obligation to perform post-initiatory observances (i.e. 'independent' initiation) only confers liberation on those incapable of the subsequent observances, such as children (31).

How can it be determined that children have received Śiva's grace (śaktipāta)? And how then can they receive initiation (dīkṣā) (32)?

Their grace they gain indirectly, which is to say they are brought by others to be initiated (33-5).

Pratoda asks whether someone is likely to be reborn if they once had adhikāra (he does not make explicit whether he means adhikāra in the sense of eligibility for dīkṣā or eligibility, through dīkṣā, for the post-initiatory means) (36).

Prakāśa replies that when dīkṣā has been correctly performed liberation will come about (37-38b).

If dīkṣā were not performed then the soul in question would become a Rudra and attain full liberation subsequently (38c-39b).

Following any one of the subsequent means after initiation leads to liberation (39c-41).

Pratoda asks how any one can by itself produce initiation (42), and Prakāśa responds that using all together is effortless, but that using only one, though requiring effort, is possible; in time blissful liberation will result (42-5).

Pratoda observes that others hold liberation to be an absence (46), a position which Prakāśa rejects; in liberation one should attain the qualities of the Lord (47–50).

Pratoda advances a Pāśupata position that the qualities of the Lord are transferred into the soul (51), and Pratoda rejects this on the grounds that the qualities of the Lord could not then be entirely in the soul or in the Lord (52–6).

Pratoda suggests that the absence of karman is held by some to bring about liberation (57), and Pratoda rejects this on the grounds that this does not account for the supreme bliss that should characterise liberation (58–60).

Pratoda advances another Pāśupata position: that the qualities of the Lord arise in the adept (61), and this too Pratoda rejects, concluding that liberation is the revelation (abhivyakti) of the qualities of the Lord which were innately present in the soul, these qualities being characterised as true rectitude (saddharma), true knowledge (sajjñāna), true dispassion (sadvairāgya) and true control/sovereignty (sadaiśvarya), in other words, as transcendent ektypes of the first four of the eight properties of the intellect (buddhidharmas) (62–7).

The liberated soul is further qualified (68–71).

Conclusion, in which Prakāśa recounts that he received this scripture (śāstra) from Pārvatīpati, who received it from Dīpteśa (72–3).

The language of the Parākhyatantra

In my brief account of aiśa language in the introduction to the first volume of the Kiraṇavṛtti (GOODALL 1998:lxv–lxx) I unaccountably made no reference to the lengthy treatment of the language of the Kubjikāmatatantra in the editors' introduction (GOUDRIAAN and SCHOTERMAN 1988:44–109). Mention should now also be made of the substantial and impressive discussion of the language and metre of the Siddhayogeśvarīmatatantra by Judit TÖRZSÖK (*1999:xxvi–lxix). TÖRZSÖK opens her discussion (*1999:xxvi) with the following gentle reproof.

The irregular forms are called Aiśa—characteristic of the language of Lord Śiva (Īśa)—following Kṣemarāja's usage of this word in his commentary on the Svacchandatantra. While one may hesitate to agree with Kṣemarāja that these must be hallmarks of divine style, they perhaps should not be considered simply 'erroneous forms that would make a learned man blench', or 'grotesque solecisms' either.¹¹⁶ This is a language with its own rules, whose basis is Sanskrit but which shows influence from Prakrit and Apabhraṃśa. Although Sanskrit is a convenient point of comparison to describe what can be called Aīśa, it does not mean that Aīśa is simply 'erroneous Sanskrit'—just as pidgin language is not erroneous English or French, even if it may best be described in comparison to English or French.

This seems to me to be truer of the Siddhayogēśvarīmatatantra than it is of some Siddhāntatantras, since that text's language is much further removed from the language of other roughly contemporaneous texts considered to be written in 'good' Sanskrit. The Parākhya, however, with its discussion of other theological doctrines in what aspires to be the style of philosophical kārikās, is attempting to place itself within the mainstream of Sanskritic philosophical debate and, I think, to write 'good' Sanskrit. Of course this 'kārikā style' is not consistently maintained, and perceptions of style can seem arbitrarily subjective and largely influenced by subject matter. The treatment (in chapter 5) of cosmology, for instance, would not seem out of place in any Purāṇa (though an observant reader might notice the total absence of interjected vocatives and the relatively small quantity of other verse-padding material), whereas the discussion of the connection between word and meaning in the beginning of chapter 6 might in most. But the following seem to me features that suggest the style of philosophical kārikās: dense compression of ideas in certain passages (e.g. 6:14ab); awkward enjambements, i.e. having the syntactical units spill out beyond the boundaries of the metrical ones (e.g. 2:107cd–108a, 4:24–5, 4:140–1, 5:90–1, 6:3–4, 6:27–8, 6:62–3, 14:101–2); paucity of metrical padding (see discussion on p. liv above); frequent allusions to the doctrines of other schools (see p. xlviii ff above); the fact that, with the exception of chapter 5, the entire text takes the form of a debate; and the carefully organised and well sign-posted presentation of themes throughout the text.

The morphology of classical Sanskrit is relatively well defined because of the importance given to morphology in the grammatical tradition, but, as TÖRZSÖK observes (*1999:xxvi), 'the rules of the syntax and lexicon show much more flexibility'. While it may be more generally regular in its morphology than the earliest of the Siddhāntatantras, the author of the Parākhya displays a number of what strike me as irregularities in his syntax and compound formation. I list below a number of stylistic peculiarities.

overuse of hanging relative pronouns:¹¹⁷ 1:2a, 1:8, 1:36cd, 1:37, 1:52ab, 1:64a, 2:86cd, 2:100d, 4:75b, 4:109a, 4:110c, 4:120b, 4:123c, 5:33a, 6:29, 6:31a, 6:40ab, 14:16cd, 15:64, Appendix I.A:2ab and 7ab.

clumsy use of anaphoric pronouns (i.e. pronouns with no clear referent, or referring back to distant words or to words tucked away in compounds): 1:31, 1:43, 1:50, 1:69 (see note ad loc.), 2:40c, 4:21c, 4:23a.

a special instance of the last mentioned peculiarity is the repeated use of asmin by itself (where we would rather expect iha or atra) to mean 'in this śāstra': 1:50d, 2:10b, 2:19c, 2:28c, 2:44c, 2:61c, 2:66a, 2:80c, 3:5c, 3:6a, 3:67b, 4:90c, 15:33d, 15:40a.

a further special instance of this peculiarity is the tendency to use forms of the masculine pronoun to refer to the soul even when no words for the soul are nearby, e.g. in 1:84b, 4:56a. (Many examples of this could be cited.)

anacoluthon of various kinds: 1:12–13 (vinā used once with accusative and then supplied with a series of nouns one of which is in the instrumental), 1:61 (in the first half of which a tatpuruṣa compound containing caitanya occurs, and in the second the word must be supplied in the nominative case, even though no pronoun represents it), 3:4 (sudden change of construction in a series of parallel statements such that ellipsis of a neuter subject must be assumed), 3:5cd (singular in a relative clause and plural in the correlative); 2:25a and 14:61e (attraction of genitive pronoun to the case of a noun with which it is in construction).

¹¹⁷SPEYER observes (1886:350) that the correlative pronoun is often omitted when the relative clause follows the correlative, and he mentions (1886:349) that it may be omitted when the relative clause precedes the correlative (of such an omission he gives no example), but it seems to me that the omission of correlatives in the Parākhya is much more frequent than is normal.

somewhat too frequent use of compounds ending in -ga where a genitive (or other case ending) would be more normal: 1:13d, 1:41d, 1:68d, 2:28d, 2:45d, 2:53d, 2:55b, 2:72b, 2:102c, 3:25d, 3:26d, 3:29b, 3:35b, 3:48d, 3:49d(?), 4:33a, 4:38d, 4:44b, 4:49a, 4:83c, 4:99d, 4:136c, 5:68a, 5:92d, 5:111d, 5:117d, 5:134c, 5:153a, 5:156d, 6:35b, 14:11a, 14:15b, 14:28b, 14:33b, 14:45d, 14:48b, 14:57d, 14:71a, 14:75b, 14:75c, 14:75d, 14:78a, 14:81d, 14:89b, 14:90c, 15:19a, 15:46d, Appendix I.A:6d, Appendix I.B:10b.

also not infrequent are words ending in -ja: 1:3b, 1:17e, 1:39d, 1:52b, 2:14d, 2:26b, 2:41a, 2:103b, 3:74c, 3:75b, 4:53b, 4:66d, 4:82a, 4:82d, 4:91f, 4:103b, 4:133c, 5:35d, 5:140d, 5:162c, 15:59d, 6:13d, 6:14a. Such compounds should perhaps be classed together as manifestations of a general tendency of the author of the Parākhyā to employ short tags of one or two-syllables, usually to get the sense of different case-endings without spoiling the metre. Apart from -ga and -ja, the use of -ka in this sort of way seems to occur (e.g. 1:89b, 3:44d, 4:66b, 5:14d, 5:150a, 14:87c);¹¹⁸ -uttha is not uncommon (1:3a, 1:43c, 2:49c, 3:76c, 4:82c, 4:133d, 15:10a); -ākhyā is much used (1:7c, 1:8d, 1:47b, 1:80a, 2:15b, 2:19c, 2:29a, 2:35d, 2:36b, 3:62b, 4:15b, 4:92e, 4:115b, 4:124c, 4:154b, 5:12a, 5:12c, 5:13a, 5:13b, 5:16a, 5:41a, 5:41c, 5:42c, 5:45a, 5:45c, 5:47a, 5:48c, 5:72c, 5:78a, 5:86a, 5:90b, 5:101a, 5:133c, 5:143a, 5:145a, 5:145d, 5:146d, 5:147a (twice), 5:147d, 5:148b, 5:149b, 5:149c, 5:151a, 5:151c, 5:152b, 5:152c, 5:155d, 6:19c, 6:20c, 6:31b, 14:13d, 14:21c, 14:69a, 15:2cd (thrice), 15:31c, 15:44d, 15:64b, Appendix I.A:2c, Appendix I.B:15a),¹¹⁹ and there are an extremely (and, I think,

¹¹⁸And it is relatively liberally used as a metre-filling bahuvrīhi-marker (e.g. 1:22a, 1:66b, 2:15d, 2:35d, 2:39d, 2:71b, 2:94b, 4:14ab, 4:29f, 4:46d, 4:80d, 4:125d, 4:134d, 4:149b, 4:162b, 5:2d, 5:44b, 5:82d, 5:84b, 5:111b, 5:145d, 5:146b, 5:152b, 6:7b, 14:34d, 14:36b, 14:73d, 15:7c, 15:17c) and as an otiose syllable-filler in names and some nouns (see below under morphological peculiarities).

¹¹⁹Other forms derived from the root $\sqrt{\text{khyā}}$ are also frequent.

non-bahuvrīhi compounds inflected as though they were bahuvrīhis: 1:32d, 3:1b, 4:1b, 4:2b, 4:2c, 4:34d, 4:93d, 6:8b, 6:45b, 14:20d, 14:37d, 15:19d. Observe that seven instances are of compounds ending in āśraya, saṃśraya or samāśraya (1:32d, 4:1b, 4:2b, 4:93d, 14:20d, 14:37d, 14:58d) and all but one of the rest¹²⁰ concern comparable verbal nouns formed with kṛt suffixes. Perhaps they could instead be grouped under the rubric of verbal nouns used as adjectives at the end of tatpuruṣa compounds.

'split' or incomplete compounds: 2:73b (doṣas tv itaretaraḥ), 6:18a (kāryakāraṇo yogaḥ), 6:19a (sādhyaśādhano yogaḥ),¹²¹ 6:31b (śivākhyamāntralakṣaṇam)¹²².

tautologous compounds to fill the metre: 1:52b, 4:103b (compounds ending in -nimittaja), 15:34c (taddvārayogataḥ).

a dvandva compound apparently followed by a ca or a vā connecting its two members: 4:102a, Appendix I.B:28c.¹²³ the suffix -taḥ apparently used as though it were -tvāt or -tvena: 3:40d, 4:8d, 4:69d, 5:85c, 15:50d(?). Apart from these rather strained uses of tasil, the suffix is, as we have remarked above, extremely frequently used in its commonly accepted senses.

āha with past-tense meaning: 1:2c, 1:18d.¹²⁴

¹²⁰The final member of the compound in 4:34d is gocara.

¹²¹These last two could perhaps be included under the above heading.

¹²²The required sense is that of śivākhyamāntralakṣaṇam, but that would infringe the metre.

¹²³A similar case is noted by TÖRZSÖK (*1999:xlvi) in Siddhayogeśvarīmatatantra 8:8:

caturaṣṭakaraṇ vāpi ...*

present active participles used as main verbs: 2:59c, 4:22b, and perhaps 14:82d.

double sandhi: 4:21c, 4:67d, 5:52c, 5:93d, 5:96d(?), 5:132b, 6:79a, 14:50c, 14:57c, Appendix I.B:30c.

irregular sandhi of the masculine nominative pronoun saḥ: 5:87c.

sandhi applied when endings should be pragr̥hya: 15:16a, 15:20c, Appendix I.A:2d–3a, Appendix I.B:12c.

treatment of vocalic ṛ as equivalent to ri or ru (excluding instances of hiatus): 4:101b, 5:15a, 5:20b, 5:132c, 14:98a (and perhaps also in 4:105d).¹²⁷ A special case is 5:129b, ṛṣayo ṛṣubhāvanāḥ, which is different from the above-mentioned instances of hiatus in that the final form of the first word has been modified as though the second began with r followed by a vowel. Such a treatment of the vocalic ṛ as though it were a combination of a consonant and a vowel is common enough in some Purāṇas: see, e.g., ADRIAENSEN, BAKKER, and ISAACSON 1998:27–8.

neuter for masculine: 4:83c (utkarṣam) 5:95d (udanvat), 14:94d (nijadharmam).¹²⁸

¹²⁵Hiatus between two pādas, such as we find, for instance, between 2:61c and d, 14:22a and b, 14:104a and b, etc., seems not to be especially common in this text, but it is in any case so common in epic, puranic and tantric literature that it seems hardly worth recording here as a peculiarity.

¹²⁶These first two are instances of hiatus where the second word begins with a vocalic ṛ. Since hiatus inside a pāda is not a common feature of the style of this text, this suggests that in the redactor's pronunciation (and therefore usage) the vocalic ṛ had the phonetic value of ri or ru. There are a number of other indications that this was so, for which see next entry.

¹²⁷There are a number of indications that for the scribe too, and not just for the redactor, vocalic ṛ was so treated, e.g., his writing kṛddhaḥ (for kruddhaḥ) in 5:123a.

¹²⁸In this last instance, as well as in 4:83c, the neuter ending appears to be the result occasional pleonasms: 5:62b, 5:139b.

The following are morphological peculiarities:

svākya with the sense, perhaps slightly intensified, of the possessive adjective sva.¹²⁹ abbreviations of certain nominal forms: 3:3c (gauta for gautama?), 14:4d (cara for carāṇa, perhaps to fit the metre), 15:11d (adhikārikā for adhikārakārikā?).

meaningless extension of some nouns (particularly names) to pad the metre with -ka: 5:5d, 5:14d, 5:48d, 5:68c, 5:69a, 5:112b, 5:118a, 5:147d, 5:148b, 14:4d, 14:7b, 14:73d.¹³⁰ irregularly formed past-participles: perhaps 14:12d and 14:90b (anusandhita), and perhaps 14:22d (chindita).

¹³⁰This last, an instance of tālu-ka, finds parallel in a number of other tantric works, e.g., Niśvāsamukha 4:52 (f. 16^v), Niśvāsa guhyasūtra 1:133 (f. 44^v), Svacchanda 4:365, 5:75, 7:38, 10:1172, 15:25, Kubjikāmata 17:75, 25:93, and Tantrāloka 32:26.

One further observation on my use of the expression 'aiśa language' is worth making. A comparison of the above list with the accounts referred to above of deviant usages in the Kiraṇa, Sārdhatrīśatikālottara, Siddha-yogēśvarīmata, and the Kubjikāmata seems to me to reveal rather surprisingly little that is common to all those texts. We can observe in all of them a tendency (of very varying strength) to transform non-vocalic nominal stems into vocalic ones, particularly when this is metrically required, and a tendency to irregularities of sandhi (hiatus and double sandhi); but beyond this, each list tables largely idiosyncracies peculiar to each text. Even confusion over lyap and ktvā, which one might expect to be universally shared, appears not to be a common feature of the Parākhyā.¹³¹ Certainly the Parākhyā, in the form it has been transmitted to us, cannot be said to have been written in a distinct language whose basis is Sanskrit.

Welcome light on ārṣa (and therefore also aiśa) usage is shed by a grammar of epic Sanskrit that has just appeared: OBERLIES 2003.

Some remarks on the treatment of metre

The Parākhyā ends each chapter with a verse in a different metre: chapters 1 and 6 are concluded with an upajāti, 2 and 14 with a vasantatilakā, 3 with a mālinī, and 4, 5 and 15 each with a śārdūlavikrīḍita. But in respect of its anuṣṭubh it is almost as remarkably bland as the Kiraṇa or the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha, both of which, as I have observed (GOODALL 1998:lxix), not only restrict themselves to the anuṣṭubh but scarcely deviate from the pathyā. The occasional vipulās are these:

na-vipulā 1:18a, 1:60c, 2:76e, 5:35c, 5:104c, 15:65c, and Appendix I, verses B:40c, C:54a, and L:126c.

ra-vipulā 6:19d and 6:20d (identical pādas, both missing a caesura after the fourth syllable).

¹³¹A single instance is to be found in the chapters transmitted by M^y (15:60c) and one is to be found in Appendix I.L:132a, but see also the apparatus ad loc. But I should add the caveat that we possess only fragments of the parts of the text most likely to contain plentiful absolutes, namely the parts giving ritual instructions.

ma-vipulā 1:66c, 2:111a (ex conj. and with the wrong preamble), 3:56a, 5:95c, 14:10c, Appendix I, verses E:79a (with no caesura after the fifth syllable), E:87c, and K:115a.

Even including the verses in Appendix I, not quite one percent of the half-lines have vipulās. Without the verses in Appendix I the percentage is yet lower.

A number of 'errors' with the pathyā occur when a short vowel in the fifth syllable is followed by a conjunct in which the second consonant is a semivowel: 5:4c, 5:44a, 5:76c, 5:124a. These could therefore be treated as ma-vipulās, irregular because they are not preceded by a ra-preamble. But I regard them rather as instances of the pathyā in which the weak conjunct at the beginning of the sixth syllable was not felt to strengthen the fifth. Of course conjuncts with semi-vowels do strengthen the syllables they precede; indeed, as we have seen above (see p. lxxxiii), it is clear that even a consonant followed by a vocalic ṛ was felt in a number of cases to be sufficient metrically to strengthen the preceding syllable. But what I am suggesting is that they were felt not necessarily to do so. Occasionally we find conjuncts with semi-vowels being similarly treated as weak in the cadence of the even pāda too: 1:71d, 3:11d, 5:109d, 6:48b, 6:68d.

Two even-numbered pādas might originally have been faulty for being entirely iambic: 5:136ef (ex conj.; see fn. 613 on p. 312) and 4:86b (see fn. 391 on p. 257).

There are a couple of instances where metrical constraints have been entirely abandoned, both to be explained as the result of having to incorporate metrically awkward names: 2:43c, 14:91. Verse 1:14a is hypermetrical, but it belongs to a class of hypermetrical pādas that is not uncommon in aiśa and ārṣa language: we must treat its two initial short syllables as having the value of a single long.¹³² In 5:58a the hypermetry is the result of a conjecture, but one that seems not implausible (see fn. 541 on p. 294). In the text as constituted there are few metrical solecisms in the even pādas, and such as there are can for the most part, as we have seen, be 'justified'. Since these give the cadence, they are the most inflexible part of the verse. In only a small handful of instances (1:51cd, 2:38ab, 3:65ab, 15:41ab, Appendix I.B:16cd and 17ab) does a word awkwardly bridge an odd and an even pāda. In two instances the author (unless these are transmissional errors) has awkwardly split compounds in order to avoid a bad even pāda (2:35 and 6:31b).

¹³²See GOODALL (quoting TOKUNAGA) 1998:lvii, fn. 132. A weak intervening consonant, such as a nasal or (as in our instances) a semivowel perhaps helps the collapse of two syllables into one.

The author of the Parākhya was not, we may conclude, a skilled handler of metre. He may have been very slightly more ambitious than the authors of the Kiraṇa and Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha, but his verses in longer metres, unless the transmission has badly distorted them, are far from being smooth compositions. Perhaps their lack of clarity is in part to be explained by their being in each case densely packed summary verses.

Does the Parākhya tell us anything new?

The rediscovery of a large part of the Parākhya made possible by this edition does not provide us with a lot of new or surprising doctrines, and it should not radically change our picture of the old pan-Indian Sanskrit Śaiva Siddhānta. It could be said, in other words, to be just another scriptural formulation of a body of views that we find (with one or two variations here and there) in a number of published works. But we should take note that it is one more document of the period before the appearance of what seems to have been the most significant body of Saiddhāntika exegesis in the history of the school, namely the writings of the tenth-century Kashmirian lineage of Rāmakaṇṭha II. It joins, therefore, a very small corpus of published pre-tenth-century Saiddhāntika writings: the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha, the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha, the Sārdhatriśatikālottara, the Kiraṇa, the Sarvajñānottara, the Mataṅga, the Mṛgendra, and the surviving writings of Sadyojyotis. Among the scriptures of this already modest list, the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha is badly transmitted and, I believe, incomplete;¹³³ the greater part of both the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha and the Kiraṇa is, I maintain, uninterpretable as presented to us by their South Indian editions;¹³⁴ and of the Sarvajñānottara only a very small portion has been published, and in the only easily accessible edition of that small portion (that of the ¹³⁴ The incomprehensibility of the Devakoṭṭai edition of the Kiraṇa (E_D) is plentifully illustrated in this volume: see footnotes 143, 726, 732, 755, 781, 846, and 904 on pp. 181, 347, 351, 358, 364, 383, and 402. Fewer illustrations are given of difficulties in the South Indian edition of the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha, but see footnotes 522 and 743 on pp. 290 and 355. VASUDEVA (*2000) draws attention to and repairs a number.

Adyar Library) its text is marred by large distortive interpolations,¹³⁵ non-sensical omissions,¹³⁶ and passages that deviate very widely from all the manuscripts I have consulted.¹³⁷ The corpus of published early scriptures is thus small indeed, and the addition to it of the Parākhya makes a considerable difference, if only in bulk. And even if it treats many of the same themes as other texts, naturally it has different emphases. Thus it devotes more attention than the other early published scriptures to theories about language, mantras and scripture, and to the relative importance of dīkṣā and the four pādas. The Parākhya's fourteenth chapter is a welcome addition to the small collection of works on early Śaiva yoga. BRUNNER, in her article on the subject (1994), was obliged to rely (among the early Saiddhāntika sources) on the in some respects unusual account of the Mr̥gendra, the uninterpretable corrupt account of the Devakoṭṭai edition of the Kiraṇa, and the difficult treatments of the Mataṅga and the Sārdhatriśatikālottara, the latter given piecemeal in a number of chapters.¹³⁸

In one respect this volume is quite new: it contains the first translation of an early Siddhāntatantra into English. The only complete translations of early Siddhāntatantras are those into French of the Mr̥gendra (HULIN 1980 and BRUNNER 1985) and the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha (DAGENS and BARAZER-BILLORET 2000), the latter being, in my opinion, of limited use because of the poor state of the text they followed. Of the Svāyam-bhuvasūtrasaṅgraha only the first three and a bit chapters, out of twenty-three, have been translated into French and English (FILLIOZAT 1991a and 1994), and of the Kiraṇa the first twelve, out of sixty-four, have been translated into Italian (VIVANTI 1975), and the first seven into English (GOODALL 1996 and 1998).

A word about the arbitrariness of the annotation. The criticism may be raised that in some places I have quoted a great deal of tangentially relevant matter, and in others barely anything at all. The charge is unanswerable. All annotation is likely to be arbitrary to a certain extent, and of course I have followed up some things that interested me and not others.

¹³⁵One of these forms the subject of GOODALL forthcoming B.

¹³⁶One is referred to in fn. 838 on p.381.

¹³⁷See footnotes 332 and 348 on pp.238 and 245 below.

I have on the whole tried to quote most from the most closely related texts whenever I found in them matter that helped me to contextualise and to interpret what I found in the Parākhya. In other words, I have intentionally referred most to the early Siddhāntas, and among those particularly the Mr̥gendra, Mataṅga, and Kiraṇa, which I judge to be closest in spirit to the Parākhya,¹³⁹ and then to exegetical Saiddhāntika literature, particularly when it contained quotations of passages of the Parākhya and commented on them. Relevant passages from texts of other schools of thought have been quoted less frequently.

It may be unfashionable to comment unfavourably on the literary quality of something one edits, particularly when it does not belong to one's own culture, but I think some remark on the subject belongs to a characterisation of the text. It is not, in my view, a work of beauty. It is, as we have seen, less prolix than the Mataṅga, and yet this does not render it as neat and clear as the Mr̥gendra, nor indeed any clearer than the Mataṅga. It is less lively than the Kiraṇa and considerably less lively than the Niśvāsa. Metrically it is, as we have also seen, indifferent; indeed it seems to me that it does not in its use of metre, diction or any means aspire to be poetry. Its author's aim was a systematic presentation and justification of the principal doctrines of the Śaiva Siddhānta in unadorned verse.

The nature of this edition

Browsing in A. E. HOUSMAN's classical papers is an absorbing diversion for someone who aspires to edit ancient texts, but it is not without its stings. I recently came across the following and was uncomfortably reminded of my text and translation of the Parākhya:

Here then, between poets capable of much and copyists capable of anything, is a promising field for the exercise of tact and caution; a prudent editor will be slow to emend the text and slow to defend it, and his page will bristle with the obelus. But alas, it is not for specimens of tact and caution that one resorts to the editors of the Culex; it is rather to fill one's ¹³⁹I should reiterate that this 'closeness' may be illusory, given that so few early Siddhāntatantras are accessible to us. Perhaps they should not really form a group; but given what survives, they seem to.

bosom with sheaves of improbable corrections and impossible explanations.¹⁴⁰

Fortunately, since this is, as far as I am aware, the first edition of the Parākhya, I can reassure myself with the reflection that, by reporting as accurately as I can what all the sources for the text read and offering as many suggestions for improvement as occur to me and to others to whom I have shown the text, I am at least recording what is preserved by what appear to be the last, fast-decaying witnesses of the Parākhya, and am improving at least some parts of it for future readers.

And HOUSMAN offers this further consolation:

Some ancient authors have descended to modern times in one MS. only, or in a few MSS. derived immediately or with little interval from one . . . Others there are whose text, though in the main reposing on a single copy, can be corrected here and there from others, inferior indeed, but still independent and indispensable . . . There is a third class whose text comes down from a remote original through separate channels, and is preserved by MSS. of unlike character but like fidelity, each serving in its turn to correct the faults of others. . .

If I had no judgment, and I knew it, and were nevertheless immutably resolved to edit a classic, I would single out my victim from the first of these three classes: that would be best for the victim and best for me. Authors surviving in a solitary MS. are by far the easiest to edit, because their editor is relieved from one of the most exacting offices of criticism, from the balancing of evidence and the choice of variants. They are the easiest, and for a fool they are the safest. One field at least for the display of folly is denied him: others are open, and in defending, correcting, and explaining the written text he may yet aspire to make a scarecrow of the author and a byword of himself; but with no variants to afford him scope for choice and judgment he cannot exhibit his impotence to judge and choose.¹⁴¹

¹⁴⁰From HOUSMAN's "Remarks on the 'Culex' ", The Classical Review XVI (1902), p. 339, as quoted in HOUSMAN 1981:95.

¹⁴¹From HOUSMAN's preface to his edition M. Manilii Astronomicum Liber Primus (London, 1903) as quoted in HOUSMAN 1981:34-5.

There is so much that is noteworthy and quotable that strikes the reader in HOUSMAN's papers, and now that I have started it is difficult to stop, but I will restrict myself to just one more quotation, not because it is pithy and amusing, but because it illustrates something that must powerfully strike students of every branch of Sanskrit literature:

The Pithoeanus was first applied to the recension of Juvenal in 1585 by its godfather Petrus Pithoeus. His text, founded on this MS., served in 1613 as a model to Rigaltius, and Rigaltius served as a model to editors of Juvenal for near two hundred years. From 1800 onward, when P had long disappeared, Ruperti first, and then Achaintre and Heinrich, produced recensions founded on inferior MSS. But in the middle of the century the Pithoeanus was rediscovered in Montpellier and was restored to its pride of place by Otto Jahn and K. F. Hermann; and in the series of modern editions, Jahn's of 1851, Hermann's of 1854, Jahn's of 1868, Buechler's of 1886 and 1893, the text of Juvenal has drawn nearer and nearer to the text of P.¹⁴²

Across centuries, generations of scholars, building upon each others' achievements, have gradually worked towards re-constructing many classical Greek and Latin texts. In India, commentarial literature written from early times up to the present day has played its role in securing and rendering interpretable some Sanskrit texts. But it is only in recent times that editions of Sanskrit works based upon exhaustive collations of the sources have begun to appear, and it is evident that, although it is fashionable to question the fruits of such endeavours for some texts,¹⁴³ there is much to be gained from critical editions in every branch of Sanskrit literature.

With this first edition of the Parākhya I have attempted to repair the text as much as possible, but I am aware that much of the text is lost, much is uninterpretable corrupt, much is suspect, and much that has not aroused my suspicions may not be in the state its author intended.¹⁴⁴ I am also aware that it is unlikely that generations of text-critics will follow who will gradually work at improving the text, winning nearer and nearer to its original state. And there are few passable editions of the surviving texts most closely related to the Parākhya; indeed many have not been printed at all. Although I have tried to read related literature, reading much of it inevitably involves editing it. There is, I have no doubt, much surviving material that I have missed and that I might profitably have adduced to repair and elucidate passages in the Parākhya. I could therefore allow further years to pass in the study of related material before daring to publish. But publishing now means that one further source for the intellectual history of Śaivism is made available to other students and editors of this body of literature.

¹⁴²From HOUSMAN's preface to his edition D. Iunii Iuvenalis Saturae (London, 1905) as quoted (with subsequent corrections incorporated) in HOUSMAN 1981:54.

Comparing the one surviving MS that transmits the Parākhya with the wealth of sources that transmit other Siddhāntatantras, for example the Kiraṇa, should make us mindful of another reason for being sceptical of, indeed inevitably dissatisfied with, the text offered in this edition. In the case of the Kiraṇa we can plausibly divide the surviving MSS into three groups. It seems likely to me that the Nepalese sources are the most 'sincere', which is to say that they appear not to have transmitted a lot of deliberate modifications, and such deviations as there are from the text as it was first composed seem likely in the main to be the result of accident, of 'innocent' error. The MSS M^Y and R^N reflect the text as it was transmitted to and by the tenth-century Kashmirian exegete Rāma-kaṇṭha II (in both cases, but certainly in the case of R^N, this may have been a South Indian text modified in accordance with the commentary): a slightly polished up Kashmirian text, from which a number of awkwardnesses had been removed by circumlocution. The other South Indian manuscripts transmit a text that has in places also been 'improved upon' in the interests of clarity—again not, it seems, with a view to modifying its doctrines (see GOODALL:1998:369–70, fn. 604)—and which has here and there suffered conflation with the other groups. Using these groups and the surviving commentaries we can often infer what is likely to have been the original wording of a particular verse, and that is often very different from what we find in the Mysore codex M^Y.

¹⁴⁴In the introduction to my edition of the Kiraṇavṛtti I very briefly defended the practice of conjectural emendation (GOODALL 1998:cxiv); here I assume that no such defence is necessary, because I imagine that it will be clear to all who attempt to read the text as it has been transmitted by M^Y that it must be corrected if we make the minimal assumption that the text once made sense. But it is of course not only where it cannot be construed or cannot be plausibly construed that the text may be at fault.

Now in the case of the Parākhya we have only one source, the same Mysore codex M^Y, and that tells us almost all we can know about the transmission. Quotations attributed to the Parākhya reveal deviations, but these, as we can discover from comparable quotations in the same works of other more reliably transmitted texts, are not likely all to be reliable. But it is not improbable that the Parākhya, like the Kiraṇa, should have been transmitted with enormous variation, and that what we have preserved today is a corrupt and damaged exemplar of one version among several of the text. For it should not be supposed that the enormously varied transmission of the Kiraṇa is exceptional in this genre of literature. We have plentiful evidence (in the form of surviving Nepalese MSS) for the text of the Sārdhatriśatikālottara that reveals that it too was transmitted with huge variation, a great deal of which is not reflected in the editions published to date.¹⁴⁵ Even for the Mataṅga a considerable amount of significant variation is not reflected in the apparatus: apart from the numerous surviving South Indian MSS not used for the IFP edition,¹⁴⁶ Nepalese MSS have not been consulted at all for the first volume, and yet the one Nepalese palm-leaf MS that has been consulted for the second volume (using a not wholly accurate transcript, IFP MS T. 970, reported with the siglum 'ca') could improve on the text offered in the first volume in many places.¹⁴⁷ For much of the second volume no Kashmirian source gives testimony, and yet a catalogued Śāradā MS survives in the BORI (MS No. 235 of 1883–84) which, unlike the other Śāradā sources, covers the commentary for the beginning of the text and, alone among all the sources, covers the commentary for almost all of the yogapāda (the end of chapter 6 and the beginning of chapter 7 are missing) and for the beginning of the caryāpāda. It also contains portions of the commentary on the kriyāpāda for which BHATT had no source. The ¹⁴⁵ Some indication of this was given in GOODALL 1998:lxvi–lxviii; for further evidence see, for example, the short quotation with (minimal) apparatus in fn. 793 on p. 368 below.

¹⁴⁶ A few of these are referred to by GOODALL 1998:lxix, lxxxii and xcvi.

¹⁴⁷ The original manuscript is MS 5-688 in the National Archives, Kathmandu: NGMPP Reel No. A 43/2.

manuscript is in some disorder,¹⁴⁸ but it gives a much more complete text of Rāmakaṇṭha's commentary than any which BHATT actually used.¹⁴⁹

It is not improbable then that M^Y might represent but a single strand of a multifarious transmission, perhaps a version close to that once transmitted by the lost classical commentary, just as M^Y's version of what it transmits of the Kiraṇa is close to the text presupposed by Rāmakaṇṭha's Kiraṇavṛtti.

¹⁴⁸It contains 253 folios divided up as follows: 101 folios labelled ff. 119–219; 18 unnumbered; 48 numbered ff. 1–18; 86 numbered ff. 1–86. The commentary on the yoga-pāda (from which I have cited in the annotation to chapter 14) is covered on ff. 44^r–83^v of the last sequence of pagination.

¹⁴⁹SANDERSON (1995b:565) mentions the omission of this source in his review, as well as of two other catalogued sources in North India that I have not seen: Sāhitya Saṁsthāna, Rājasthāna Vidyāpīṭha, Udaipur, Accession Nos. 205 and 334. In a letter of 27.ix.1997, Professor SANDERSON drew my attention to the existence of another Kashmirian MS in a collection recently acquired by the Staatsbibliothek in Berlin: it is part of a Sammelhandschrift, at that time labelled KA 1436, part of which has been consulted for its text of the Mālinīvijayottara and described by VASUDEVA (*2001:xiii).

SOURCES FOR THE CONSTITUTION OF THE TEXT

The Mysore Manuscript

The principal source for the text is University of Mysore, Oriental Research Institute MS P 258/9 (i.e. MS P 258, ff. 27^r–35^v). The last digit of the shelf-mark is intended to indicate the place of the text in the codex, but the Parākhya appears to be the eighth and not the ninth. This codex's text of the Parākhya is listed by MALLEDEVARU (1987:66–7), as are most, but not all, of the other works in the codex elsewhere in the same volume. The following account is a modified version of my description of the codex in the introduction to volume 1 of the Kiraṇavṛtti (GOODALL 1998:xxxix–xci):

Palm-leaf (talipot). Nandināgarī. Folios of $2\frac{1}{2}'' \times 1'2\frac{1}{4}''$ with eighteen lines to a side. The leaves were numbered (perhaps at the time of writing) in Kannaḍa numerals in the left margins of each recto and later in Arabic numerals in the spaces round the string holes. I have followed the latter. The first verse of the text of the Kiraṇa (f. 35^v[12]) directly follows the colophon to the Parākhya (for which this is the codex unicus) on f. 35^v (labelled 35B), line 11. The penultimate folio of the Kiraṇa was placed after f. 70 of the codex, was noticed by the second numerator to belong earlier, and was labelled 39B. [...] The whole codex is beautifully written in a very small, neat hand and makes an old impression. The Parākhya is preceded in the same codex by the Tattvaprakāśavṛtti (ff. 1–5^r); the Prayogasāra (ff. 5^v–9^r); Rauravasūtra-saṅgraha [for chapters 5 to 10 and for half of chapter 4 of which this is the codex unicus] (ff. 9^r[6]–12^r[15]); Svāyambhuvasūtra-saṅgraha [for which this is the only South Indian manuscript known to me in which all twenty-three chapters appear in the correct order and unmixed with other material] (ff. 12^r^[15]–18^v^[16]); Sārdhatriśatikālottara (ff. 18–22^r); Kālaññāna (f. 22^v); and the Mṛgendrottara [= Mṛgendra] (ff. 23^r–27^r [the text on f. 23 does not follow on from that on f. 22]). The Parākhyā is followed in the same codex by the chapters 1–11 and 58–9 (the last two being numbered 59 and 60 respectively) of the Kiraṇa (ff. 35^v–39^v); by the Paṣkara (ff. 39^v–48); Goraṣaviracita-prabodha (ff. 48–50^r) and Yogaḍīpikā (ff. 52^r–53^r). On f. 54^v appears the colophon iti śrīmahādevaviracite aṣṭaṃgayogaḥ kṛtikeyasaṃvādaḥ muktisopānaśāstraṃ samāptaṃ. Then follows the first adhikāra of Abhinavagupta's Īśvarapratyabhi-jñākārikāvimarśinī (ff. 54^v–71^r). The last colophon of that work is that of the seventh āhnika. F. 71^v is blank. I could not identify what text the last folios, 72–76^r, transmit. I noticed only one colophon-like phrase: iti jainasamayānirākaraṇaṃ (f. 72^r^[13]). The same codex was used for its text of the latter chapters of the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha (not for the first three and half) and cursorily described in BHATT's edition of the Raurava (p. xviii and p. 174). It was not used by FILLIOZAT for his edition of the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha. The bulk of M^y's readings of the Kiraṇa probably coincide more nearly with the conjectured text of Rāmakaṇṭha than those of any other independent manuscript of the mūla. The text of the two paṭalas it transmits of the yogapāda is written without break after that of the vidyāpāda.

The work called Kālaññāna transmitted on f. 22^v, of which only the first five and a half chapters are given, is an unpublished hundred-verse recension of the Kālottara that is also transmitted in Nepal,¹⁵⁰ but is unmentioned in BHATT's list of known recensions.¹⁵¹ Although the text breaks off in the middle, no folio appears to be missing: the Roman and the Kannaḍa foliations (the latter only partially visible here) tally for the preceding and following folios, and some blank space has been left at the end of the last line of f. 22^v, as though to indicate that the remainder of the text had been missing also in the scribe's exemplar. The text of the Mṛgendrottara (= Mṛgendra) begins straight away at the top of f. 23^r. It ends (with the colophon iti śrīmrṛgendrottare yogapādaḥ samāptaḥ) at the end of line 15 of f. 27^r. The manuscript in fact transmits only the vidyāpāda and the yogapāda. The kriyāpāda and caryāpāda are not given. Thus for a number of texts—the Mṛgendra, the Kiraṇa, the Parākhya, and probably the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha—the scribe has omitted chapters. In each case he appears to have retained the parts that focus on doctrine and yoga and to have omitted ritual prescriptions. From the Kiraṇa, as we have seen, he has copied only chapters 1–11, in other words all of what Rāmakaṇṭha treats as the vidyāpāda with the exception of the twelfth chapter, and 58–9, the two chapters that treat yoga. Of the Parākhya, the first six chapters and the last two (chapters 14 and 15) have been selected. I have suggested before (GOODALL 1998:xl, fn. 92) that M^Y's text of the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha may be incomplete, but I failed to mention some evidence that bears upon this assumption: BHATT's apparatus records that the chapters numbered 7–10 in the edition are not so numbered in the manuscript: three are not numbered at all, and the eighth he reports as being numbered 10 in M^Y. In fact even the eighth chapter does not appear to be numbered in M^Y.¹⁵² Since, as we have seen, the scribe of M^Y has omitted chapters of other tantras copied in the same codex, it is possible that he might have done the same when transmitting the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha. As with the Kiraṇa, Mṛgendra, and Parākhya, he may well deliberately have dropped passages that were not of interest to him.

¹⁵⁰It is transmitted, for example, immediately following the recension in fifty verses, the Jñānapañcāśikā, on ff. 4^v–9^v (in the first foliation) of NAK MS 5-4632, NGMPP Reel No. B 118/7. As I have observed (GOODALL 1998:xc, fn. 184), the names Kālaññāna and Kālottara are used interchangeably in the colophons of the Nepalese manuscripts of the non-eclectic recensions. Here too in M^y the name Kālaññāna occurs in the colophons of chapters 3–5, but Kālottara in that of chapter 2 (f. 22^v^[7]).

¹⁵¹BHATT's list, given on p. xlviii of his upodghāta to his edition of the Sārdhatriśatikālottara, omits also the Jñānapañcāśikā (mentioned in the previous footnote) and the Sārdhaśatika recension, which is transmitted on ff. 1^v–6^v (in the second foliation) of NAK MS 5-4632, NGMPP Reel No. B 118/7.

Since I have been able to find no other manuscript of the Parākhya, excepting its apographs, which will be described below, and since M^Y is therefore our only source (directly or indirectly) for almost all of the text, some more remarks about its script and scribal practices are called for than I offered in the introduction to the Kiraṇavṛtti. Unlike in some styles of South Indian Nandināgarī, a medial short i is notated as in Devanāgarī, that is to say it does not lack the vertical bar that precedes the letter to which it is attached (contrast, e.g., R^N in which the Kiraṇavṛtti is transmitted). This bar in M^Y , however, is often hooked slightly to the right towards its bottom. I mention this detail because it explains why I can sometimes with some confidence transcribe a medial i (rather than a medial ā, o or au belonging to the preceding akṣara) in portions where the tops of the akṣaras are invisible.

The scribe's convention for an initial ṛ appears to have a form that could be interpreted as rṛ (or perhaps he consistently wrote rṛ, even where initial ṛ is required).¹⁵³ The reader should therefore bear in mind that wherever I have transcribed ṛ, this could be interpreted as rṛ, and vice versa. The scribe invariably writes jh for jḥ, a habit comparable to that of many other scribes of always writing either cha or ccha, regardless of which is required. The scribe has marked corrections variously: a single akṣara is cancelled by a superscript dot (not a small circle, as is used for an anusvāra or to make up a visarga); a long portion of text can be deleted by being enclosed in round brackets or encircled¹⁵⁴ and, in some cases, also drawn through with a horizontal line; part of an akṣara (e.g. the r of a pra) can be deleted by dense scribbling over it. It appears that all the corrections have been executed by the scribe himself.

Antecedents

There are a number of indications that there may have been at some point in the transmission of the text down to M^Y an intermediary in Grantha script: the confusion of ha and bha (in 1:28d, 4:77a, 4:83a, 4:102a, 4:164b?, 5:28c, 5:92a, 6:69c, 14:10a); the occasional confusion of kṛ and kū (in 3:28c, 5:37c);¹⁵⁵ the confusion of va and pa (e.g. in 2:105b, 2:115c, 4:47d, 4:104d, 4:107c, 4:118d, 4:120d, 4:152b, 5:14d, 5:27c, 5:44a, 5:95d, 5:109b, 5:114c, 5:149a, 6:36b, 6:43d, 14:27d, 14:37b, 14:58b, 14:98d, 15:1c, 15:27d, 15:37b); the confusion of dha and ya (e.g. in 4:166b and 5:137d); the confusion of ta and na in 4:54c; the confusion of ca and pa in 4:120a; the confusion of ta and ka in 1:17f, 4:92f and 5:145d; the confusion of pa and ba in 1:32a and 5:124c; the confusion of rtha and rdha in 4:67c; and the confusion of ndha (consistently represented by mdha in M^y) and ddha (in 1:12b, 2:5a, 2:57d,¹⁵⁶ 4:14d, 4:31a, 4:48a, 4:149c, 4:156c, 4:165c, 4:170d, 14:21a, and 14:23c). These are all confusions that are palaeographically possible when copying from a Grantha exemplar. The confusion between pa and ba and that between rtha and rdha could also be the result of failure to distinguish voiced and unvoiced stops (particularly when they are medial) in Tamilian pronunciation.¹⁵⁷ To the category of phonetic mistakes possible for Tamil-speakers (i.e. those who principally use Grantha script) belong the occasional confusions between ka and ga, e.g. in 4:46b¹⁵⁸ and 14:53b, between ṭ and ḍ (in 5:27b), between t and d (in 2:115d),¹⁵⁹ between pa and bha (in 5:91a), and between tth and ddh (in 4:133d), (these four being examples of confusion between voiced and unvoiced stops of the same varga), as well as instances of confusion between aspirated and unaspirated stops of the same varga, e.g. da for dha in 4:82a, 15:10c, and perhaps 5:18d. The writing of iyāsā for iyiāsā in 4:59c would also be a mistake typical of a Tamil-speaker, since an initial palatal vowel is commonly pronounced prefaced by a y; but this Southern tendency is not exclusive to Tamil speakers.

¹⁵³Occasionally, as in 3:5a, 5:129b and 5:134c, B has actually transcribed rṛ.

¹⁵⁴This is the practice referred to in Naiṣadhīyacarita 1:11.

There are also confusions in M^y that, though they might result from copying a Grantha exemplar, are also possible results of copying from other scripts: the confusion of ca and va in 4:65c.

And there are also occasional confusions that are not likely to have resulted from a Grantha exemplar but that might suggest an intermediary in an early Northern script or Śāradā or in the script of M^y itself: confusion between pa and ya (4:44a, 6:36b); ta and bha (4:4d, 4:21d, 4:32a, 4:106b); confusion of nna with tra in 15:22d. Apart from these, there are of course plenty of errors that do not suggest the existence of intermedi-

¹⁵⁶ In this instance (of maddhanāt for manthanā) nthā was probably first mistaken for ndhā.

¹⁵⁷ I do not mean to imply that we must assume, as some do in similar cases, that the Parākhya must have been dictated at some point in the transmission that reached M^y. Phonetic similarities obviously colour the way we write down unspoken thoughts: are there English-speakers who have never written 'there' for 'their', or 'hear' for 'here'?

aries in any particular script, a number of which will have had nothing to do with confusion about the shapes of letters or with local vagaries in pronunciation.

Deviant orthography

By comparison with other South Indian manuscripts that I have studied, this codex appears to be the work of a remarkably careful and accurate scribe with remarkably careful and accurate exemplars before him. Many of my emendations to the text are no more than corrections of what the scribe would probably have regarded as possible orthographies rather than as errors: for example, he not uncommonly omits a visarga before a kṣ, sy, sv and other initial sibilants in ligature with semi-vowels or nasals—a practice so common among South Indian scribes that it should indeed perhaps be classed as a variant orthography,¹⁶⁰ along with the permitted omission of the visarga before an initial sibilant in ligature with an unvoiced stop (cf. GOODALL 1998:236, fn. 228). It is possible that a certain confusion about whether or not omitting the visarga before other unvoiced stops in ligature with semi-vowels is permissible may account for occasional instances where a visarga is omitted before, e.g., a pra, or, as it seems, erroneously supplied before one.¹⁶¹ Another relatively common and easily detected error is the degemination of what should be doubled consonants when in ligature with semi-vowels or nasals (e.g. 1:15d, 2:114a, 4:4b, 4:33c, 4:51a, 4:60d, 4:64a, 4:65a, 4:66b, 4:66c, 4:79b, 4:95b, 4:114cd, 4:124a, 5:4b, 5:9b, 5:24b, 5:57c, 5:111c, 6:22b, 14:94d) or of doubled consonants after a long vowel, e.g. in 2:34b, 2:111c, 2:113a, 4:65d, 4:85a, 4:102c, 4:126d, 6:17c, 14:2d, 14:5a, 15:15b.¹⁶² Instances of the first of these types of degemination have been corrected silently in the case of certain words, since degemination of this kind would probably also have been regarded as acceptable orthography by the scribe. By this I mean that he would have regarded both budhyā and buddhyā as possible orthographies (though the first is arguably not), just as he would have seen no difference between smaryate and smaryyate (which really are both correct orthographies). But I have not silently corrected instances of degemination at the juncture of two words in a compound. By this I mean that the correction, for example, of digrahaiḥ in 5:111d to diggrahaiḥ is signalled in the apparatus.

¹⁶⁰e.g. in 2:103c, 2:119b, 3:18c, 3:64a, 4:38c, 4:92f, 4:126cd, 4:133ab, 5:26a, 5:50b, 5:83a, 5:88e, 5:119a, 5:130a, 5:149b, 5:162c, 6:3a, 6:15c, 6:22a, 6:36a, 6:40c, 14:18b, 15:10b, 15:64b.

¹⁶²Many of these concern the past-participle ujjhita at the end of a compound.

Transcription

I transcribed by hand M^Y's text of the Parākhya from the original in the summer of 1996, and returned to Mysore to collate my typed up transcriptions against the manuscript in autumn 1997 (when fever prevented me) and again for a week in September 1998, but unexpected holidays meant that I had time only to collate chapters 2–6 and 14 against M^Y and chapters 14 and 15 against M^Y's partial apograph MS B 811. I returned in October 1999 and checked chapters 1 and 15 against M^Y, and again in October 2001 to read the other partial apograph, MS B 785, as well as to check various other small points throughout the text about which I had suspicions. Some errors will, of course, still not have been eradicated.

Condition

The leaves of the codex are strung through their right-hand string-holes only. All M^Y's leaves of the Parākhya were correctly ordered and correctly situated in the codex when I first transcribed the text in 1996, but ff. 27 and 35 were broken in two by a vertical break through the centre of the left-hand string hole and f. 31 was broken in two by a vertical break about 1.5cm to the left of its centre. When I collated my transcriptions against the manuscript in 1998 I found the broken pieces not attached by the string were scattered (together with a number of other fragments now broken off from other leaves) through the codex. The leaves transmitting the Parākhya (ff. 27–35) were still internally correctly ordered in 1998, but these leaves had been removed and replaced in the codex in such a way that f. 27 was now next to f. 36 and f. 35 next to f. 26. In one or two places (parts of) some more akṣaras had been lost at the edges of leaves.

Apographs

MS B 811 (catalogued by MALLEDEVARU 1987:66 and Appendix I, p. 92) is an apograph of M^Y covering only chapters 14 and 15 of the Parākhyā. It is clearly by the same hand and copied on to the same sort of paper as other partial transcripts of M^Y, such as those of the Prayoga-sāra, Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha and Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha (B 776) and of the Kiraṇa (B 812).¹⁶³ Like these, MS B 811 is written in a florid Kannada hand with a black fountain pen on paper water-marked 'GOVERNMENT OF MYSORE'. Corrections have been made in copper-beech-coloured ink. MS B 811 comprises a single signature of 5 sheets (i.e. 10 folios of 19.5cm × 16cm) bound in pale blue buckram. On f. 1^r in the right-hand margin is written in the copper-beech ink '16.5.07', meaning presumably that it was copied on 16th May 1907 AD. A stamp on the cover reads 'ORIENTAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE MYSORE FILMED.'. Over the dots is written 'FN 1093'. As in K₂ the colophons have been amplified with obeisances to Rāma and Kṛṣṇa. The first speaker indication of chapter 14 (prakāśa uvāca) is preceded in MS B 811 by the following (f. 1^r[1-2]):

// śrīrāmacandrāya namaḥ — // śubham astu śrī// atha parākhye yogapādaḥ// śrīkṛṣṇāya namaḥ//

Another apograph, clearly by the same hand, covers the first six chapters of the text: MS B 785. It appears to have been written on the three days before MS B 811, for the recto of its first folio has been dated '13/15.5.07'. Corrections have been executed in pale red. Bracketed numeration has been added by a later hand—perhaps that of one of the editors of the Śaivaparibhāṣā, for see p. cxx below—in blue ink for the first thirty-six verses, as have occasional conjectured modifications. MS B 785 was once bound in black buckram (the binding has disintegrated) in four signatures, also of five sheets, and its text begins on f. 151^r and ends on f. 189^r. On the cover it has been noted that it has been filmed (Film No. 2306). The beginning of the tantra is preceded by the following:

parāgamah śrīsāmbasadāśivāya namaḥ// śubham astu//
śrīr astu// śrī// atha parākhyatantre +vidyāpādaḥ+
prārabhyate// śrī// śrī// +jñānapādaḥ prārabhyate+

¹⁶³MS B 812, the apograph of M^Y's text of the Kiraṇa, is assigned the siglum K₂ and described in the introduction to volume 1 of the Kiraṇavṛtti (GOODALL 1998:xcj).

I should perhaps have described MS B 785 before MS B 811, but I only saw it in October 2001. The existence of MS B 785 is not recorded in the same volume (MALLEDEVARU 1987) of the descriptive catalogue as that in which M^Y and B are recorded (the volume which purports to deal with āgama) but appears under the title Parāgamaḥ in a later volume that purports to deal with tantra (RAJAGOPALACHAR 1990:298–9 and Appendix, pp. 334–5).¹⁶⁴ In case others should be interested in the valuable testimony of M^Y, it is worth recording the three other partial transcripts of which I am aware: MS B 783, a transcription of M^Y's text of the Sārdhatrīśatikālottara; MS B 784 of the Mṛgendra; and MS B 813 of the South Indian Pauṣkara.

Although they are apographs of M^Y, MSS B 785 and B 811 have nevertheless been collated not only for the few extra lines and akṣaras they preserve that have since been worn away at the edges of the leaves in M^Y, but for the whole text. It has been most useful to have somebody else's transcription of the early MS, since its dense, miniature hand is often difficult to read. Reading it with confidence from various photographic reproductions (the Oriental Institute of the University of Mysore twice kindly gave me permission to attempt to photograph M^Y) proved so unsatisfactory that, as I have related, I instead made frequent trips to Mysore to verify my transcription. Deviations in B's transcription from my own have frequently alerted me to errors, ambiguities and problems. But recording throughout the apparatus what the apographs read seemed unnecessary. For the most part B differs from M^Y only in accidental copying errors and details of orthography (homorganic nasals almost consistently replace anusvāras), and its readings are only relevant to the constitution of the text where M^Y is illegible, or where the scribe of B has consciously written something different from M^Y in order to emend. Since he does not mark his emendations, we cannot be certain where his deviations are willed and where accidental. My policy, therefore, has been to report B's readings in the apparatus to the edition only where M^Y is damaged and where it seems possible to me that B has deliberately differed. But in the apparatus to the unedited transcription of M^Y I have recorded B's readings throughout: thus a reader who so wishes may gain an impression of its faithfulness to its exemplar and of the kinds of errors to which it is prone.¹⁶⁵ Even in this apparatus, however, I have suppressed mention of most instances where the scribe miscopied and then corrected himself immediately (here the corrections are in black), as well as of most instances where he miscopied and corrected himself later, presumably while checking his text against that of M^Y (here the corrections are in copper-beech red). Nor have I recorded instances where B has, for example, pañca for M^Y's paṃca, or kāryam for M^Y's kāryaṃ, or other such purely orthographic variants. Suffice it to say that, apart from consistently preferring to write homorganic nasals where M^Y has the anuvāra, B generally degeminates consonants in ligature with semi-vowels that M^Y has geminated, and frequently alters a visarga before a sibilant to the sibilant in question.

Transcription conventions

The above should explain why I decided that it was not worth supplying images of the leaves of M^Y with this edition; I have opted instead to give a diplomatic transcription of the whole, as well as an edition with a critical apparatus incorporating the readings of testimonia. The diplomatic transcription I have tried to keep as faithful as possible, deviating from the original only in supplying verse numeration enclosed in double daṇḍas. (In the manuscript itself there is no verse numeration and each half-verse—with very occasional exceptions—is concluded with a single daṇḍa.) I have marked the line changes of the manuscript with line numbers in roman numerals enclosed in round brackets. Strings of akṣaras of which the tops have been severed I have printed widely spaced and I have put an entry in the apparatus to draw attention to their tops being missing. Gaps left by the scribe I have marked with a \sqcup . Where the gap is large, I have often marked the number of syllables for which space has been left. Thus a gap left for six missing syllables is notated thus: '□[-6-]□'. Portions that are illegible or broken away have been indicated by a triple dash (---). Where I wished to indicate the number of syllables missing, I have added the number in square brackets: thus '---[-6]---' indicates that six syllables are broken off or illegible. Letters that are enclosed between plus-signs (+...+) are letters that were added subsequently, sometimes in between lines or in a margin. 'X's are used to bracket text that has been written and then in some way cancelled (x...x).

Other editorial conventions

The apparatus is divided into three registers. On a page where all three registers are present, the uppermost register records testimonia and parallels; the middle register records lacunae or passages where the tops of akṣaras are damaged in the manuscript; and the bottom register records the variants. The apparatus is fully positive. Each entry is preceded by the verse number and pāda letter (a, b, c and d indicate pādas 1, 2, 3, and 4 respectively). There follows the lemma, printed exactly as it is printed in the textus receptus, then a lemma sign:]. After this appears the siglum (or sigla) of the source (or sources) that transmits the textus receptus, then the variants, separated from what precedes them and from each other by semi-colons, and each marked with the sigla of the sources that transmit them. A siglum with superscript ac (ante correctionem) marks the reading of a manuscript before correction (e.g. M^{Yac}); a siglum with a superscript pc (post correctionem) marks the reading of a manuscript after correction (e.g. B^{pc}). When a reading is unmetrical, this is recorded after the siglum of the source that transmits it.

No key is given for the abbreviations used in the bottom register of apparatus for the titles of the texts from which testimonia are drawn, for they have all been formed in the same way from the initial syllables of the principal parts of the names: thus SvaU stands for Svacchanda-tantroddyota, JñāRa for Jñānaratnāvalī, SiDī for Siddhāntadīpikā, etc. (A glance above at the register that records the testimonia should clear up any possible doubt.)

Repairs to the text about which I feel rather little doubt, typically small and obvious corrections of common scribal errors, are marked em.

(emendation); bolder conjectures are marked conj. (conjecture). The difference is of course subjective. It could be argued that in a fully positive apparatus there should be no need to signal where I have proposed improvements to the text, but these labels do make it less easy for the reader to overlook the fact that all transmitted readings have been rejected and they enable me to give some indication of how confident I feel about each conjectural restitution. The suggested conjectures of others that have been accepted are attributed; conjectures that I have considered and not accepted (whether my own or those of others) are occasionally referred to in the annotation to the translation, but they are not recorded in the apparatus. Double angled brackets in the textus receptus (⟨...⟩) enclose 'free' diagnostic conjectures, that is to say conjectures made where the transmission is lacunose and that are therefore based rather on diagnosis of what the context appears to require than on transmitted akṣaras.

The verse numeration is to some extent arbitrary: for the most part the text is summarily divided up into four-pāda units. Occasionally considerations of sense led me to introduce some six-pāda verse; reflection at the last stages of editing often prompted me to introduce others, but I resisted doing so because the required alterations would have cost hours of extra work (changing the numeration of whole chapters in the edition, diplomatic transcription, pāda-index and translation) and increased the risk of further errors: the effort and risk seemed not commensurate with the gain.

Independent testimonia

Some remarks must be made about the use of testimonia. The eight chapters that M^Y transmits comprise 1839 half-verses;¹⁶⁶ for 357 of these (a little less than one fifth) testimonia, in the form of quotations and borrowings in other works, have been traced. For tracing these, my starting point was the Luptāgamasāṅgraha of Gopinath KAVIRAJA (1970) and Vrajavallabha DVIVEDĪ (1983). The card-index held in the French Institute of Pondicherry¹⁶⁷ enabled me to locate many more in some published ¹⁶⁶Including the five not actually transmitted in M^Y but that are found in testimonia and have been judged to fit into M^Y's text, namely 4:101cd, 4:105cd, and 5:78c-79.

¹⁶⁷This useful tool, compiled over many years principally by Messrs. R. SUBRAMANIAM and SAMBANDHAN of the IFP, contains an index of topics (principally relating to kriyā), a half-verse index of a wide range of tantric works, and a small index of quotations in South Indian works, and Professor SANDERSON kindly referred me to yet others. The remainder, perhaps a half of those identified, I have come across gradually over the last few years. There are doubtless more to be found.

Almost all the quotations of portions of the text can be regarded as independent testimonies to its wording, since they have been transmitted independently in texts with entirely different transmissional histories. It should be noted, however, that there is one exception: quotations in the Śaivaparibhāṣā derive from the edition prepared in Mysore, where the editors evidently made use of M^Y or of MS B 785 (see p.cxx below). Many of the South Indian texts in which I have located quotations from the Parākhya are sadly themselves so poorly transmitted that their value as testimonia is not great. The editions of the Śataratnollekhinī and Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati, for example, are often garbled and evidently rest on poor manuscript evidence. But many other texts (e.g. the Siddhāntasamuccaya, the Śivajñānasiddhisvapakṣaḍṣṭāntasaṅgraha, the works of Jñānaprakāśa, etc.) are yet worse served in that they have never been edited.

A large number of the later (typically sixteenth- and seventeenth-century) Saiddhāntika works are not just very poorly transmitted, they provide no meaningful context for most of their quotations, since they take the form of strings of quotations, often with no interconnecting material. Into this category fall the Nānāvaraṇaviḷakkattarumpatavivēkam, the Dikṣādarśa*, the Śivajñānasiddhisvapakṣaḍṣṭāntasaṅgraha*, the Śivāgamādimāhātmyasaṅgraha*, the Śaivāgamaparibhāṣāmañjarī, the Śaivasiddhāntasaṅgraha*, the Sakalāgamasārasaṅgraha, and the Śivayogaratna.¹⁶⁸

Constraints of time and energy have held me back from the vast task of looking at all the manuscripts accessible to me of all the texts from which I draw testimonia. I know this to be a deficiency; but since the task would really be huge, I hope I shall be forgiven.

Apart from quotations, there is one other important source of testimopredominantly South Indian Saiddhāntika works arranged by the title of the work to which they are attributed.

¹⁶⁸The composite character of this text appears not to have been noticed by its editor and translator Tara MICHAËL. A cursory search enabled me to find just less than a half of the verses that make up its first and principal section in other sources, among which the Sarvajñānottara and the Devikālottara appear to be the most quoted.

nia: the eighth chapter of the South Indian Pauṣkara, half of which is, I believe, drawn from the Parākhya. This has to be used with some caution, because its redactor appears to have introduced clarificatory modifications here and there; but it is of immense use because two commentaries of it survive: the Pauṣkarabhāṣya of Umāpati and the unpublished Pauṣkara-vṛtti of Jñānaprakāśa, of the last part of which I have made a preliminary edition using the three transcripts in the IFP and a manuscript from Hoshiarpur. In the annotations to my translation I have quoted extensively from these two works, and other commentarial material that expounds verses in the Parākhya.

Highly valued both for their help in constituting the text and for the proof they afford of the relative antiquity of the text are the quotations in tenth-century Kashmirian works: Kṣemarāja in his Svacchandatanthroddyota quotes seventy-four half-verses from the Parākhya which are to be found in M^Y's text of chapter 5; Rāmakaṇṭha quotes 4:45c–46b in his Mataṅgavṛtti ad vidyāpāda 12:25–27b, pp. 347–8; and Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha quotes 4:35ab ad Mṛgendravīdyāpāda 11:11, p. 281 and quotes 4:19abc¹⁶⁹ ad Mṛgendra 2:7, p. 59. The last of these is significant because Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha there attributes the quotation to the Saurabheya, which is said, e.g., in Kiraṇa 10:27d, to be an alternative name for the Parākhya. (Only one other exegete, Kṣemarāja [ad Netratantra 13:12ab], uses this name,¹⁷⁰ but in this instance the verse quoted is not to be found in what M^Y transmits.)

I give below a complete list of the works in which quotations from the Parākhya have been traced to date. Unless otherwise stated all quotations are attributed. Verses that appear in Appendix I are attributed to the Parākhya, but not found in the text that M^Y transmits. For ease of reference these verses have been roughly grouped by theme and consecutively numbered. Thus Appendix I is broken up as follows:

A:1–8 on the brahmamantras

B:9–40 on snāna

C:41–55 on caste and dīkṣā

D:56–77 on prāyaścitta

E:78–88 on creation and dissolution

¹⁶⁹In the Devakōṭṭai edition (p. 67) four pādas are given.

¹⁷⁰I discount the instance in the Sarvadarśanaśaṅgraha (p. 189), since that is evidently part of a block lifted from the passage of the Mṛgendravṛtti just referred to.

- F:89–91 on mudrās
- G:92–4 on gurus
- H:95–110 on miscellaneous matters of ritual
- J:111–14 on prāṇāyāma
- K:115–20 on karman
- L:121–47 miscellaneous
- M:1–3 misattributions to the *Parākhya*¹⁷¹

Asterisked works are unpublished to date. Of some of the less well-known of the works I have made a few remarks about dating, provenance, and transmission.

Ātmārthapūjāpaddhati probably by the sixteenth-century author Vedaññāna II (IFP MSS T. 282, T. 321, T. 323, T. 371 T. 795): Appendix I, verses B:12, 16–17, B:22–4, B:26–27b, 30ab, B:37, B:38–40, H:110, L:132–4. As DAGENS' brief account of the text reveals (1979:7–9), the attribution and the transmission of the work are not unproblematic. The various transcripts deviate from one another enormously; in very many places quotations found in one transcript are not in the others.

Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati of Īśānaśiva: 1:5cd, 1:15, 4:14, 4:15cd and Appendix I, verses G:93, H:99, H:108, L:127. This is an eclectic, literary Śaiva 'manual' of ritual (it is styled Tantrapaddhati in 1.1:1) written principally in verse (in a range of metres) that quotes plentifully from a wide range of sources but predominantly from early Siddhāntatantras and related Saiddhāntika works. The date and place of its composition are disputed; but it is transmitted solely in Kerala, as are certain of the works it quotes (e.g. the Prayogamañjarī and a Nārāyaṇīya), and so may well have been composed there.¹⁷² Its author quotes from the works of Somaśambhu, Rāmakaṇṭha, Bhoja, and Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha, but not from the influential Saiddhāntika writings of the 12th-century South Indian exegete Aghoraśiva, and from this we might be led to conclude that he could not have written much later than that Aghoraśiva; but he does refer to some Siddhāntas of which Aghoraśiva seems ignorant and of which the versions known to survive today appear to be relatively late South Indian redactions (e.g. Kāraṇa, Ajita). For further discussion of the author and his work, see UNNI 1987. The transmission of the text is evidently poor, for much in the edition (of T. GANAPATI SASTRI) is uninterpretable corrupt.

¹⁷¹Of course many of the other verses in this appendix may have been misattributed, but these three quotations have clearly been mistakenly ascribed.

Kiraṇavivṛti of Tryambakaśambhu (IFP T.1102 and IFP 47658): 4:24cd, 4:165. This unpublished commentary on the Kiraṇa (surviving only on chapters 1–6) is of uncertain date and provenance. As I have pointed out in my brief characterisation of this text (GOODALL 1998:cvii–cix), its author was late enough to know and quote from Kṣemarāja's Svacchandatanthroddyota, but appears to have been ignorant of many important Saiddhāntika writings (including, remarkably, those of Rāmakaṇṭha II). The work is not well transmitted. This Tryambakaśambhu is certainly not to be identified with the late twelfth-century Trilocanaśiva who wrote the Somaśambhu-paddhatiṭikā, among other works.¹⁷³

Kriyākramadyotikā of Aghoraśiva. Appendix I.C:53. The text in question is that published with Nirmalamani's commentary, the Prabhāvyākhyā. Suspicion about the authorship of the various other texts published as parts of the Kriyākramadyotikā by the South Indian Archaka Association has been expressed by GOODALL 1998:xiii–xvii, fn. 24, and independently by ISHIMATSU 2000:236.

Kriyākramadyotikāvyākhyā of Sadāśiva (IFP MS T.962, pp.1–56 [third numeration]): Appendix I.F:89–91.

Jñānaratnāvalī of Jñānaśambhu (the author of the Śivapūjāstava) as transmitted in IFP T.231 and Madras GOML MS R 14898, some of whose quotations are shared with a manuscript also purporting to transmit the Jñānaratnāvalī but that appears to be a manual based upon it: IFP T.106, pp.13–60.¹⁷⁴ 2:84c–85b, Appendix I, verses B:9–20, B:22–25, D:56–77, L:132–4. This text is a large manual, rich in quotations, by a South Indian brahmin living in Benares¹⁷⁵ who was, along with the celebrated twelfth-century Saiddhāntika Aghoraśiva, a guru of Trilocanaśiva,¹⁷⁶ and who therefore also belonged to the twelfth century. Although of great interest, the text is, as BRUNNER has pointed out (ibid.), poorly transmitted. But now that further sources have come to light some scholar may feel encouraged to respond to BRUNNER's exhortation (1998: lvi) to edit it. The uncatalogued manuscript in the GOML in Madras is in fact very closely related to the previously known manuscript IFP MS T. 231: the IFP transcript is evidently an apograph of it and bears, without explanation, its library number (R 14898) on its cover. Shortly before going to press, I became aware of another corrupt but much less closely related source in the Oriental Research Institute in Mysore: MS P. 3801, a palm-leaf manuscript in a cursive Nandināgarī hand that is not easy to decipher. This preserves more of the beginning of the work.¹⁷⁷ An editor would also derive much help from testimonia, for the text is very often borrowed from and quoted in later paddhati literature.¹⁷⁸

mikaḥ: 1:73c–75b, 2:1ab, 2:2–3b, 2:29 (attributed to Niśvāsa), 2:64c–65b, 2:71c–73b, 4:86–7, 4:95c–96b, 4:97ab, 4:98ab, 4:99ab,
4:100ab, 5:67cd, and Appendix I, verses E:78–81, E:82, E:83–4, ¹⁷⁵See GOODALL 2000:212, fn. 22 (referring to information provided by Professor SANDERSON).

¹⁷⁶See GOODALL 2000:209–11. For confirmation of the long-known twelfth-century dating of Aghoraśiva see GOODALL 1998:xiii–xvii.

¹⁷⁷Another hitherto unmentioned source is IFP RE 39946, a palm-leaf MS in Grantha script. This deviates very considerably from the Mysore MS in the portions I have checked.

¹⁷⁸The relation of this text to the apparently lost Bārajñānaratnāvalī (or Bālaratnāvalī), to which we find references in the same literature (e.g. Śivadiḥṣāvidhivyākhyāna T. 542, pp. 41, 43) is uncertain. The two works are mentioned together in a versified list of *paddhatī*s at the beginning of the Ātmārthapūjāpaddhati in such a way as to imply that they were by different authors (T. 323, p. 2):

kl̥ptā jñānaśivena tatra guruṇā śrījñānaratnāvalī

E:87-8, L:126, L:129. This is a voluminous Saiddhāntika work in Tamil, full of Sanskrit and Tamil quotations, that comments on the Ñānāvaraṇaṭṭakkam (a work that is in turn in some sense a commentary on the Civañānacittiyār) of Kuruñānacampanta-paramācāriyar, the sixteenth-century founder of the Śaiva maṭha of Dharmapuram (Tanjore district).¹⁷⁹ According to the introduction (p.15), Veḷḷiyambalavāṇasuvāmikaḷ took śivadīkṣā and śaivasannyāsa under the fourth head of the same maṭha, and took jñānadīkṣā under the fifth.¹⁸⁰

Tattvatrayanirṇayavṛtti of Aghoraśiva: 2:42ab (without attribution), 2:99ab (without attribution).

Tattvapraśāsavṛtti of Aghoraśiva: 2:99ab (without attribution), 6:6ab.

Tantrāloka of Abhinavagupta: Appendix I.L:125. The apparent absence of quotations of the text in the Tantrālokaviveka (and of an identification here of Abhinavagupta's quotation) suggests to me that Jayaratha may not have had access to the Parākhyā.

Dīkṣādarśa of Vedajñāna II (IFP MSS T. 76, T. 153, T. 279): Appendix I, verses C:41-44b, 45-8, 54-5, G:94, H:103 and 104. This is characterised by BRUNNER (1977:liii) as ¹⁷⁹Publications of the Dharmapuram Adhinam often include a 'short life of Gurugnanasambandha' (e.g. MUDALIAR 1976:xxi-xxiv) in which a late sixteenth-century date is proposed (p. xxiii):

An inscription of Krishna Maharaya Ayyan, King of Tanjore and daughter's son of Krishnadeva Raya during the times of Sadasiva Maharaya appointed Tiruvarur Gnanaprakasa Pandaram as the Superintendent of the DEVADANAS OF SIKKI, VADAKUDI, ODACHERI etc. This order bears a date equal to 1561 AD. A stanza in the MAZHUVADI PURANA written by Kamalai Gnanaprakasa records the date of the composition as Salivahana Saka 1488 (equal to 1566 AD). These two authorities prove that Gurugnanasambandha lived about 390 years ago (in the second half of the sixteenth century).

¹⁸⁰It is evident that the conception of initiation here is not the classical one, nor is the hierarchy of initiations classical. For the movement away from an indispensable salvific ritual of initiation as the central point of the Śaiva Siddhānta, see GOODALL forthcoming B, in which Umāpati's treatment of the topic is briefly discussed, and see also DEVAENAPATHI 1966:238ff.

un assemblage de citations d'origines diverses, groupées en chapitres logiquement ordonnés, mais liées entre elles par un commentaire insignifiant. L'ouvrage aurait pu être très précieux pour les nombreux extraits qu'il donne de textes totalement ou partiellement perdu, s'il n'était désespérément corrompu, et ceci dans tous les mss. qu'on en connaît.

DAGENS (1979:6–14) has discussed the œuvre of Vedajñāna II and of his guru, Vedajñāna I, and established that they both lived in the sixteenth century, the latter having died in 1563 or 1564. The transmission of the work is indeed (pace DAGENS 1979:9) atrocious.

Nādakārikāvṛtti of Aghoraśiva: 6:14ab.

Nityādisaṅgrahābhīdhānapaddhati of Takṣakavarta (Śāradā MS: Bodleian MS Stein Or.d.43): Appendix I.A:1–8.¹⁸¹ This is a 'manual' of Śaiva (not exclusively Saiddhāntika) ritual from the Kashmir valley preserved in only one Kashmirian manuscript. It contains many lengthy quotations from a wide range of tantras.

Netroddyota of Kṣemarāja: Appendix I.L:124.

Paṣkarāgama (none attributed, all in chapter 8): 2:83–86b, 3:7, 3:9–10, 6:5c–11 (differently ordered), 6:13c–19, 6:22–3, 6:28c–29b. For the lateness of this (probably South Indian) tantra, see GOODALL 1998:xliii–xliv. All its borrowings from the Parākhya are in its eighth and final chapter, which (this and other) evidence suggests may be a secondary interpolation (see fn. 654 on p. 326, drawn from GOODALL 2001a:330). In a number of cases the two commentaries (the unpublished Paṣkaravṛtti of the Ceylonese Jñānaprakāśa [IFP MSS T. 110, T. 180, and T. 188, Hoshiarpur MS 4385] and the Paṣkarabhāṣya of Umāpati [not the fourteenth-century author of Tamil Saiddhāntika works, for see COLAS-CHAUHAN 2002:305–6]) support different readings. Such differences have been recorded in my apparatus.

¹⁸¹I am grateful to Professor SANDERSON (letter of 2.ix.1996) for drawing my attention to this passage.

Pratiṣṭhāvidhi of a Candrasekharabhaṭṭāraka (IFP MS T.370, pp.246–302): Appendix I, verses C:41–44b and C:45. It may not be right to refer to this section of IFP MS T.370 as a Pratiṣṭhāvidhi. The reason for doing so is that after a colophon to the antyeṣṭividhi of Aghoraśiva's Kriyākramadyotikā on p.246, there follows more manual material, full of quotations, in which the first colophon appears to be that on pp.299–300, which reads: iti śrīmatkamalālayapuranivāsicandraśekharabhaṭṭāraka-śiṣya-tannāmadhāriṇā aghoraśivadeśikakriyamāṇarītim avalambya pratiṣṭhāvidhi[h] kṛtaḥ.

Prabhāvyākhyā of Nirmalamāṇi (a commentary on Aghoraśiva's Kriyākramadyotikā): 2:78abc, 14:78ab, and Appendix I, verses A:8b, B:16c–17b, B:32–6, C:44c–f, C:49, H:96–8, H:110, L:130.

Bhāvacūḍāmāṇi of Vidyākāṇṭha II (Kashmirian Nāgarī MS: Jammu MS 5291): Appendix I, verses H:107, L:121–2, L:135–8. This is a commentary by Rāmakaṇṭha II's pupil on a pratiṣṭhātantra called the Mayasaṅgraha. For further remarks about this work see GOODALL 1998:xi–xiii. The sole surviving manuscript is full of corruption.

Bhogakārikāvṛtti of Aghoraśiva: Appendix I.L:123.

Mataṅgavṛtti of Rāmakaṇṭha: 4:45c–46b.

Mṛgendrapaddhatiṭikā of Vaktraśambhu (IFP T.1021): Appendix I, verses A:8a–d, C:41, C:50–1, H:100. This is a commentary on a paddhati attributed to Aghoraśiva that bases itself on the Mṛgendra. I know of only one source for the text, and it is far from being free of error. Along with Trilocanaśiva (see below s.v. Somaśambhupaddhatiṭikā), Vaktraśambhu appears to have been a pupil of Aghoraśiva and so to have belonged to the late twelfth century.¹⁸²

Mṛgendravṛtti of Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha: 4:19abc, 4:35ab and Appendix I, verses H:105, H:106.

¹⁸²See GOODALL 2000:209–10, but for the author's name see also fn. 97 on p.lix above. For a brief characterisation of the text see BRUNNER 1985:xxiv.

Mṛgendravṛttidīpikā of Aghoraśiva: 1:56d, 2:29–30d, 2:42ab, 2:43c–44c, 2:79a, 2:99ab (without attribution), 4:79ab, 4:81ab, 4:112ab, 5:67cd, 5:155d, Appendix I.C:54ab (without attribution).

Ratnatrayollekhinī of Aghoraśiva: 2:99ab (twice without attribution).

Varṇāśramacandrikā: Appendix I, verses B:21, C:41–2, C:49, G:92, This is a manual about adhikāra largely consisting of quotations and composed c. 1600 AD (see Tamil introduction, p. 38) by Tiru-Ambaladeśikendra, the seventh head of Dharmapurādhīna, a Śaiva maṭha in Tanjore district.

Śataratnollekhinī: 1:29, 1:35, 1:37–9, 1:43–4, 1:49c–50b, 1:58cd, 1:59cd, 1:60cd, 1:68c–69, 1:77c–79b, 1:86–88b, 1:90c–91b, 1:91c–92b, 2:25–26b, 2:29, 2:70–71b, 6:3ab, 6:6c–7b, 15:4cd, 15:5cd, 15:6c–9b. This is an anonymous commentary on the Śataratnasaṅgraha (q.v.).¹⁸³ As I have pointed out (GOODALL 1998:xxxi–xxxii, fn. 72), the author has without acknowledgement borrowed liberally from other Saiddhāntika writings. His opening verses suggest that he wrote in Chidambaram, and he quotes plentifully from a number of late South Indian Siddhāntatantras. The text of the commentary in the Tanjore edition (see p. iii of its Sanskrit preface) is entirely based upon the Calcutta one, and its deviations are therefore not reported in my apparatus.

Śataratnasaṅgraha of 'Umāpati': 1:1, 2:2–3b, 2:29, 2:78. This is an anthology of verses culled principally from Siddhāntatantras attributed to an Umāpati, who is not uncommonly assumed to have been the author of the Paṣkarabhāṣya, as well as of certain of the Tamil Meykaṇṭacāttiraṅkaḷ, including the Caṅkarpanirākaraṇam, a work which dates itself to 1313 AD. The identification of these three Umāpatīs as one man seems to me impossible. The verses herein are attributed by the work's commentator, and labels of attribution, which sometimes differ from those offered by the commentary, are also found in MSS of the work that do not transmit the commentary; but it is possible that the compiler did not himself identify his sources. Proving beyond doubt that the Śataratnasaṅgraha was not compiled by either the author of the Caṅkarpanirākaraṇam or of the Pauṣkarabhāṣya is impossible, for the Śataratnasaṅgraha consists entirely of verse quotations from Śaiva works. But it can, I think, be demonstrated that the Śataratnasaṅgraha is extremely unlikely to have been compiled by either of them, because both the range of sources drawn on as well as the range and character of ideas to which the anthology gives prominence would be untypical of either of them.

Fourteen sūtras that occur in a seventeenth-century Tamil translation of this work (the Catamaṇimālai) are not in the Calcutta edition.¹⁸⁴ These have been traced in a manuscript (of the Sanskrit work) in the Tiruvāṇṭūrai Maṭha by THIRUGNANASAMBANDHAN (1973:xx-xxi and 113-18), and have accordingly been added, in an appendix, to the Tanjore edition of 1976. They are also to be found in other manuscripts of the work, e.g., IFP MSS T.112 and T.804. Among these we find: Parākhyā 1:92c-94d (see also Appendix I.M:1).

Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 1:1-2 (1-2), 2:1 (19), 2:8

The 39th verse of the Calcutta edition (of which, as we have seen, the second half has been supplied by the editor, and of which the first pāda looks as if it belongs to the tail-end of a passage of prose) is therefore to be expunged. The verses that are missing in the Calcutta edition and supplied in THIRUGNANASAMBANDHAN's appendix have here been numbered 40a, 40b, etc., following the numeration in that appendix. I have not been able to trace a source that preserves the missing parts of the commentary.

trayaparīkṣā 82c-83b], 40m [similar to Ratnatrayaparīkṣā 84c-85b], 40n, 78, 82-4).

As far as one can judge from his selection, the theology of the compiler seems to have been that of the classical Śaiva Siddhānta. A very heavy emphasis is placed on the path to mokṣa consisting of śaktipāta and dīkṣā, and this theme occupies verses 45 to 73. None of these verses expresses the doctrines of the author of the Pauṣkarabhāṣya, nor are there verses drawn from some of the scriptures which one would most expect the Pauṣkarabhāṣya to cite. There are none, for instance, from the Pauṣkara itself, and the non-dualist Sarvajñānottara, upon which the author of the Pauṣkarabhāṣya heavily relies to support his position, is represented by a single verse asserting the indispensability of dīkṣā for attaining liberation (Śataratnasāṅgraha 54). As for the Umāpati accredited with authorship of a number of the Tamil Meykaṇṭacāttiraṅkaḷ, he too is, I think, unlikely to have compiled this anthology, since his positions too on the liberated state and how it is reached seem incompatible with the theology the Śataratnasāṅgraha appears to support. BHATT (1996:70), who actually suggests that the ascription of the Śataratnasāṅgraha to the same Umāpati who wrote the Pauṣkarabhāṣya is improbable, on the grounds that the conceptions of the liberated state in the two works are discrepant,¹⁸⁷ suggests, however, that the Śataratnasāṅgraha is closely parallel to the centum of Tamil verses attributed to Umāpati called the Tiruvaruṭpayan. He observes that the themes of both works are treated in the same order and he goes so far as to suggest correspondences between groups of verses in each work (1996:72):

Śataratnasāṅgraha	Tiruvaruṭpayan
18	11-20
19-33	21-30
34-70	31-70
71-8	71-90
79-91	91-100

This correspondence of themes, which I do not in any case find particularly close, is, I think, the coincidental result of the author of each work indepently choosing to treat first the familiar Śaiva topics of pati, paśu and then pāśa, and then following this exposition with a discussion of liberation and the means to attain it. But the manner of the treatment of these themes seems to me not in the least similar: dīkṣā, for instance, which appears in 7 sūtras of the Śataratnasāṅgraha, is not mentioned once in the Tiruvārūṭṭpayan.

Śivajñānabodhavṛtti of Jñānaprakāśa: 1:43–4. This is a short Sanskrit commentary on the Śivajñānabodhasūtra by the Ceylonese Jñānaprakāśa of Śālivāṭī (in Jaffna).

Śivajñānabodhasaṅgrahabhāṣya of Śivāgrayogin: 1:94a–d, 2:2–3b. This is Śivāgrayogin's shorter Sanskrit commentary on the Śivajñānabodhasūtra.

Śivajñānabodhopanyāsa of Vedajñāna II, also known as Nigamajñānadeśika: 2:78abc (without attribution). This is a short sixteenth-century Sanskrit commentary on the Śivajñānabodhasūtra currently being re-edited and translated by Dr. T. GANESAN of the French Institute of Pondicherry.

Śivajñānasiddhisvapakṣadṛṣṭāntasaṅgraha of Vedajñāna II, also known as Nigamajñānadeśika (IFP T. 317, pp. 968–1118, and IFP MS T. 533, pp. 197–224, which is incomplete and has only a few of the quotations listed below): 1:15, 1:39, 1:73c–75b, 1:82ab, 1:83ab, 1:92c–93b, 1:93c–94d, 2:1ab, 2:2ab, 2:3, 2:15cd, 2:29, 2:70–71b, 2:96, 4:35ab, 4:96c–97b, 4:98ab, 4:99ab, 4:100ab, 4:101ab, 4:101c–102b, 4:103ab, 4:104–5, Appendix I verses E:83–6, K:115–20, L:126, L:129, L:139–45. This is an anthology of verses culled from Siddhānta-tantras and from Saiddhāntika works compiled to provide corroborative authorities for the statements of the svapakṣa section of Aruṇandi's Tamil commentary (the Civaññānacittiyār) on the Śivajñānabodhasūtra. For Vedajñāna II's sixteenth-century date and oeuvre, see DAGENS 1979:6–14.

Śivapūjāpaddhativyākhyāna (IFP MS T. 962, 1st and 2nd pagination): 14:78ab, and Appendix I, verses A:8b, H:95, L:130.

Śivapūjāstavavyākhyā: 2:44–60, 6:6ab, 15:69, Appendix I, verses H:96–8, H:101–2. This is an anonymous commentary transmitted in a number of South Indian manuscripts (e.g. IFP MS T. 962, 3rd pagination) on the Śivapūjāstava of Jñānaśambhu, the author of the Jñānaratnāvalī* (q.v. above). Although the commentator's name is not known, he identifies himself as the great-great-grandson of the Trilocanaśiva who wrote the Siddhāntasārāvalī (q.v.).¹⁸⁸

Śivayogaratna of Jñānaprakāśa: 2:70c–71b (unattributed), 15:69.

Śivayogasāra of Jñānaprakāśa: 2:70c–71b, Appendix I.L:146.

Śivāgamādimāhātmyasaṅgraha of Jñānaprakāśa (IFP MSS T. 281, T. 372, T. 1059): Appendix I.C:41–2, C:54–5, G:92. This is a ni-bandha of quotations from Siddhāntatantras and other Saiddhāntika material compiled by the Ceylonese Jñānaprakāśa. The transmission of the work is not good. The quotations attributed to the Parākhya found in one source are not always to be found in the others.

Śivāgrabhāṣya of Śivāgrayogin: 1:94a–d and Appendix I.C:43c–44b. This is Śivāgrayogin's long Sanskrit commentary on the Śivajñāna-bodhasūtra. Śivāgrayogin has been shown, on the basis of information given in the opening verses of his Śaivasannyāsapaddhati, to have written in the sixteenth century.¹⁸⁹

Śaivaparibhāṣā of Śivāgrayogin: 1:15, 1:19–20, 1:22–3, 1:29, 1:31–5, 1:94a–d, 2:70, 6:6ab (without attribution), 14:78–79b, and Appendix I.C:43c–44f. This is an independent prose work characterising Śivāgrayogin's Śaiva Siddhānta. Unless otherwise specified, I refer always to the Mysore edition, which was the sole source of the Madras edition. The fact that the Mysore editors give verse numeration for the quotations from the early part of chapter 1 of the Parākhya (e.g. on pp. 44 and 47) shows that they had access to an independent text of the work. The readings and the lacuna they report on p. 53 for the quotation of Parākhya 1:29–35 and that they attribute to a manuscript in Mysore (atra hastalikhitaparākhyapustake) show that the manuscript they had before them was M^Y or the apograph MS B 785. I suspect the latter, since I suspect that one of the editors was responsible for adding the verse numeration and the occasional conjectured modifications in blue ink to the text of MS B 785 (see p. cii above). The quotations in this work are thus not wholly independent of M^Y.

¹⁸⁹This was observed by S. ANAVARATAVINAYAKAM PILLAI in his introduction to the Civaneṅṅipirakācam (1936, pp. vii–viii) and later (apparently independently) by R. RAMASASTRI (1950, pp. 9–12 of the bhūmikā to his edition of the Śaivaparibhāṣā).

Śaivasiddhāntasaṅgraha (IFP MS T. 46): Appendix I, verses B: 22c–23b, B:26–31, B:37, J:111–14. This is a paddhati made up of quotations of (predominantly late) scriptures and of other paddhatis.

Śaivāgamaparibhāṣāmañjarī of Vedajñāna II: 1:5, Appendix I.L:126.

Sakalāgama(sāra)saṅgraha: Appendix I.B:16c–17. This is a South Indian Saiddhāntika anthology of quotations culled from (principally late) Siddhāntatantras and paddhatis relating to temple worship. The work is transmitted (as are a few other works of the same and similar titles) in a number of South Indian manuscripts (e.g. IFP T. 199, 246, 351, and 374) and has been published by the South Indian Archaka Association (Madras, 1974).

Sarvajñānottaravṛtti of Aghoraśiva (Grantha MS: IFP 47818): 1:5cd, 1:15c, 1:43–4, 2:42ab (without attribution). For remarks on the transmission of this work see GOODALL 1998:lxii.

Sarvamatopanyāsa's appendix IFP MSS T. 284, pp. 1–23 and 23–30 (and T. 801, p. 1–23, disregarded because it is copied from the same source as T. 284): 15:2, 15:4–8, 15:9ab, 15:10, 15:14, and Appendix I, verses C:52 and C:54–5. The Sarvamatopanyāsa is a doxographical work in śloka that covers a handful of rival doctrines, concluding with the śaivamata. After its simple colophon (iti sarvamatopanyāsaḥ sampūrṇaḥ) there follows an appendix of confusingly labelled quotations, among which a few are from Parākhyā 15. This is concluded, on p. 30, with the following pair of verses: iti sarvamatasthānām uktvā siddhāntam āditaḥ/ paścād aghoraśiṣyeṇa sarvātmaśambhunā mayā// śaivānām samayasthānām śaivasiddhāntadīpikā/ sadāśivapadasthena cittena samudīritā// iti śam. There then follows the familiar (because published, albeit with the title Siddhāntaparakāśikā) Siddhāntadīpikā of Sarvātmaśambhu, which is either the text referred to in the verse just quoted, or a quite different work that merely happens to follow and happens also to be called Siddhāntadīpikā and to be by a Sarvātmaśambhu. This seemed to me a remote possibility before (see GOODALL 2000:208, fn. 8), and I now think that it can definitely be excluded because of the evidence of a fragmentary and disordered text of the Sarvamatopanyāsa that is transmitted in an uncatalogued MS in the GOML in Madras: MS R 16820 (pp. 14–16 of 2nd pagination, pp. 1–8 of 2nd pagination, and pp. 1–12 of 3rd pagination). This MS has not been mentioned hitherto because it does not have the quotations from the Parākhyā; but it does have the beginning of an appendix tagged on after the final verse of the Sarvamatopanyāsa, and in the beginning of this appendix there is an explicitly labelled reference to an identifiable statement in the Siddhāntadīpikā of Sarvātmaśambhu.¹⁹⁰ It therefore now seems probable to me that the quotations of the Parākhyā belong to a passage interpolated by someone other than Sarvātmaśambhu between the Sarvamatopanyāsa and the Siddhāntadīpikā, which were once strung together by Sarvātmaśambhu when he added his Siddhāntadīpikā to an already existing Sarvamatopanyāsa. The above quoted verses leave open the possibilities that the latter was a composition of his own or of his guru's or of someone else. The presentation of different views in the Sarvamatopanyāsa is relatively sophisticated in comparison with that of the Siddhāntadīpikā, and this consideration makes the first possibility seem least likely.

Siddhāntadīpikā* of Madhyārjuna (IFP MSS T. 112 and T. 284): 2:44, 2:90cd. This is a catechistic prose work with plentiful quotations from late South Indian Siddhāntatantras (e.g. from the Ajita, Makuṭa, Santāna, and Vātulaśuddhākhyā), which a final verse ascribes to an abbot of a maṭha in Tiruvīṭaimarutūr (the Sanskrit name of which is Madhyārjuna). The author also quotes (without always identifying the source he is quoting) the Siddhāntasamuccaya of Trilocanaśiva.

Siddhāntaśikhāmaṇi* of Jñānaprakāśa (Grantha MS: IFP 10871): Appendix I.A:8a–d. This is an independent prose work by the Ceylonese author of the Paṣṣkaravṛtti presenting the tenets of the Śaiva Siddhānta.

Siddhāntasamuccaya* of Trilocanaśiva (IFP T.284, pp.127–74, IFP T.206, pp.57–111, Madras GOML MS R.14394, and GOML MS R.16820, pp.1–14 in last sequence of numeration): 1:15, 2:1, 2:25–26b, 2:42ab (without attribution), 2:79a, 2:99ab (without attribution), 3:74–6, 4:69, 5:153cd, 6:3ab, 6:5c–6d, 6:26–29b, 6:60–4, 6:67–68b, and Appendix I.C:43c–44f. This text, still in line with the old Śaiva Siddhānta, is a useful source of quotations, many of which, since they are not all part of a common stock of verses found cited in many works, this author seems himself to have chosen (unlike the compilers of, for example, the Śivajñānasiddhisvapakṣa-dṛṣṭāntasaṅgraha and the Ñānāvaraṇaviḷakkattarumpatavivēkam, whose shared errors—e.g. in their quotations from the beginning of Parākhya 2—suggest that they may not have selected their quotations independently). The other sources he cites are all early: old Siddhāntas (predominantly Mṛgendra, Mataraṅga, Kiraṇa, Sarvajñānottara, Parākhya, Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha, Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha, Mohaśūrotara [e.g. on p.143]), and works such as that of Somaśambhu (e.g. on p.174) and those of the Aṣṭaprakaraṇa. His conclusion (T.284, p.174) tells us that he was the head of a maṭha in Sitāraṇya (a Sanskrit translation of the Tamil toponym Tiruveṅkāṭu). He may also have been the author of the Siddhāntasārāvalī and of the commentary on the Somaśambhupaddhati (q.v. below).¹⁹¹ Sadly this work is badly transmitted.

Siddhāntasārāvalīvyākhyā of Anantaśambhu: 1:93c–94d, 14:78–80, Appendix I.L:132–4 and H:104. This is a commentary on Trilocanaśiva's Siddhāntasārāvalī, a Saiddhāntika 'manual' (though, like the Tantrāloka and the Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati, it is actually a literary work and not simply a handbook of instructions), of which there are numerous South Indian manuscripts.

Siddhāntasūtravṛtti of Sadāśivaśivācārya: 1:93c–94d, 14:78–79b, and Appendix I, verses C:44c–f. This is a short Sanskrit commentary on the Śivajñānabodhasūtra.

Somaśambhupaddhatiṭīkā of Trilocanaśiva (IFP T.170, described by BRUNNER 1998:li–lii, and GOML MS R 14735): 2:1c, 2:42ab (without attribution), 2:99ab (without attribution), 3:68c, 14:78ab, 15:10c–f, and Appendix I, verses A:8b, H:95, L:130. Judging from their shared range of quotations, both this commentary on the Somaśambhupaddhati and the Siddhāntasamuccaya may be the work of the same author. Trilocanaśiva probably belongs to the late twelfth century, for he appears to have been a disciple of Aghoraśiva and of Jñānaśambhu, the author of the Jñānaratnāvalī and of the Śivapūjāstava.¹⁹²

Svacchandatanthroddyota of Kṣemarāja: 5:16c–18b, 5:19–31d, 5:38a–d, 5:42ab, 5:44ab, 5:45cd, 5:47ab, 5:48cd, 5:50ab, 5:51c–f, 5:66b, 5:71–72b, 5:73, 5:74c–75, 5:77, 5:79–82a, 5:82c–84, 5:85cd, 5:86c–88b, 5:89ab, 5:89d–90b, 5:108, 5:134ab, 5:135ab.¹⁹³

I cannot conclude this discussion of quotations attributed to the Parākhyatantra without an apologetic remark about my treatment of the quotations from portions of the text not transmitted by M^y and so relegated to Appendix I. They are presented, in most cases, without translation or explanatory annotation, and it is certainly true that much more work could have been done on them. HOUSMAN's remarks on Lucilius reinforced my lazy reluctance to continue puzzling over them.¹⁹⁴

The truth is that the difficulties of the text of Lucilius are for the most part inexplicable and its corruptions for the most part irremediable. What more than anything else enables the critic and commentator of an ancient author to correct mistakes and to elucidate obscurities is their context; and a fragment has no context. An editor of Lucilius or Ennius or Nonius or the Reliquiae scaenicae, unless he is grievously self-deluded, must know that the greater number of his corrections, and of his explanations also, are false. There is a simple test, if he cares to use it. The bulk of Lucilius' fragments is preserved to us by Nonius only: take Nonius' citations of an author whose works survive, try to explain or emend them, and then compare your efforts with the author's text.

¹⁹³I have here clubbed together consecutively numbered verses; Kṣemarāja has not necessarily quoted them together in these blocks.

¹⁹⁴From HOUSMAN's 'Luciliana', The Classical Quarterly I (1907), as quoted in HOUSMAN 1981:103.

I have not attempted the kind of test HOUSMAN describes, although it could certainly be tried using citations in, for instance, the Dikṣādarśa*. But the bitter-sweet discovery of part of B (Mysore MS B 785) at a point when I thought that I had nearly finished my edition gave me a taste of the experience he speaks of: only occasionally had I correctly inferred the sense of the small fragments missing from the tops of folios in M^Y that I subsequently found to be transmitted in B (e.g. in 5:131d-132a), and not one of the restitutions proposed by myself or by friends—stylistically plausible as the restitutions seemed—was confirmed with the discovery of the apograph. In other words, even when equipped with the context, patching together the sense and wording of damaged passages of the Parākhya has proved not to be straightforward; raising the stakes by removing the context must make it yet more difficult. The following edition and annotated translation of the chapters of the Parākhya transmitted by M^Y may seem to some a monument of incaution, but I am not so recklessly incautious as to plunge myself into the task of elucidating all its fragments as well, at least not for the moment.

Śataratnasaṅgraha 15, p. 24. But note that the Śataratnollekhinī (p. 25) cites and justifies a variant: निमित्तमीश्वराख्यं यदद्वृष्टं सहकारणमिति पाठे अद्वृष्टशब्दवाच्यकर्मणः सहकारिकारणत्वमुक्तम् । यथात्रैवारण्यपटले — निमित्तमीश्वरस्तेषामुपादानं स बिन्दुराट् । नृकर्म सहकारि स्यात्कार्यमेतत्तत्तुहेतुकम् ॥

(The editor of the ŚaRaU identifies this as Paṇḍikā 8:18c-19b, where the verse indeed occurs, but the commentator probably intended to refer to its occurrence as Parākhya 6:6c-7b. The label आरण्यपटल is odd.)

The longest unit is that quoted in the Mṛgendravṛttidīpikā ad vidyāpāda 8:3: यदुक्तं पराख्ये

PARĀKHYATANTRA CHAPTER I

Seeing the stainless Prakāśa, who knows [how to achieve both] his own aims and those of others (svaparārthajñam), in his Ashram on the Ganges, the worthy Pratoda,¹ bowing (praṇataḥ), asked of him the supreme teaching (jñānam...param): (1)

‘Lord, tell me the supreme teaching that liberates from bondage.’ Thus addressed by him, Prakāśa (sa) venerated Śiva (natvā somam) and spoke [the following] clear teaching. (2)

Take this teaching, a medicinal herb for the soul which springs from the ground that is Śiva, which is delightful in its ripening, which is sweet, which reveals special properties. (3)²

¹For the identification of the Parākhyā’s interlocutors Pratoda and Prakāśa with Vasiṣṭha and the sun respectively, see introduction p. xl and following. One could consider a conjecture suggested by Dr. ISAACSON: arhaḥ san. This would make explicit that Pratoda’s ‘worthiness’ was a condition of his receiving teaching. The author might have intended to emphasize thereby that Pratoda was already an initiate, since initiation is a prerequisite for the study of scripture. Compare Kiraṇavṛtti 1:10.17–24, in which Rāmakaṇṭha infers that Garuḍa must be an initiate in order to receive the teaching of the Kiraṇa.

²This verse appears as the fifth of the Śataratnasāṅgraha and is commented upon in the Śataratnollekhinī as follows (pp. 12–13):—

ātmabheṣajam etaj jñānam saṃgrhāṇa. gr̥hyatām ity arthaḥ. auśadhasya sarvasya bhūmyuddbhūtatvād asya jñānarūpaśauśadhasyāpi utpattibhūmiṃ darśayati—śivakṣmotttham iti. śiva eva kṣmā bhūmiḥ, taduttham tadutpannam ity arthaḥ. punaḥ kīdṛśam? pariṇāmasukham. pariṇāmaḥ udarkaḥ. uttarakālasukhakaram. svādu amṛtasamānatvāt. viśeṣaguṇadarśakam sarvajñatvādiguṇānām abhivyañjakam. auśadhapakṣe viśeṣaguṇasya svāsthyasya darśakam. anena viśeṣaṇatrayeṇāpi jñānasyāsya agrāhyatāśāṅkā nirastā, loka udarkasukhakarāṇām amṛtarūpāṇām viśeṣaguṇasampādakānām padārthānām sarvair api gr̥hyatvād iti. ātmabheṣajam ity asyābhiprāyaḥ—yathā cakṣuṣaḥ, vartamānā prakāśanaśaktiḥ paśutvamalaruddhā gururūpeṇa paramaśivavaidyena paramakṛpālunā tadbheṣajajñānaprayogeṇa paśutvanirasanadvārā punar abhivyañjate iti. tad uktaṃ śivadharmottare—

Now hear from the beginning the [teaching called the] Para, which brings about the cutting of the knot that is the connection between bonds

śivajñānasya sambandhād bhāvam ālocya mucyate*

Receive this knowledge [that is] a medicinal herb for the soul. 'Take [it]' is the meaning. Since all herbs arise from a ground, he shows the ground from which this herb that is knowledge arises with the expression (iti) śivakṣmottham. Śiva himself is the ground (kṣmā = bhūmiḥ); the meaning [of the expression] is 'arising from that [ground that is Śiva]' (taduttham = tadutpannam). How [is this knowledge] further qualified? [It is] pariṇāmasukham. [Here] transformation (pariṇāmaḥ) [refers to] future time (ūdarkaḥ). [And so the expression means] 'which will give happiness at a subsequent time'. [And it is] 'sweet' because it is like nectar. [Its being something] 'which reveals special properties' (viśeṣa-guṇadarśakam) [means] 'making to appear the properties of omniscience and so forth'. When applied to the herb [to which knowledge is likened, it means] that which reveals the particular [good] quality of health. By all three qualifiers the suspicion that this knowledge might not be something that should be taken is cast aside. For in worldly life things that subsequently give happiness, that are of the nature of nectar and that bring about particular [good] qualities are to be accepted by everybody. The intention behind [using the expression] ātmabheṣajam is as follows (...iti): as in the case of an eye [infected by a cataract], the power to illumine that exists [in each soul and] that is blocked by the impurity that characterises the state of being a bound soul (paśutvamalaruddhā) is again made to appear by the supremely compassionate doctor Śiva, in the guise of the initiating teacher (gururūpeṇa), by casting aside the impurity (paśutvanirasanadvārā) by the use of the knowledge that is a medicinal herb for the soul. This has been taught in the Śivadharmottara:

Just as medicine is by its nature the remedy to diseases, so Śiva is known to be the remedy to the ills of the transmigrating universe. And just as one may dispel ills [of the body] by the power of a medicinal herb, so too [He] averts [worldly] ills by the knowledge that is medicine for the soul. Therefore the wise man, at peace, practising austerities and in control of his senses, sees the truth (bhāvam ālocya*) by attaining Śiva-knowledge and is liberated.

It is possible that this passage of commentary, like others in this text (see GOODALL 1998:xxxi-xxxii, fn. 71), is copied or adapted from an older source, perhaps from the commentary on the Parākhyā from which Aghoraśiva quoted a few verses in his Kriyākramadyotikā, p. 4, lines 23-8 (part of the quoted portion appears in a different order as 3:69-70 of the Śaivāgamaparibhāṣāmañjarī). For evidence of another trace of this commentary see fn. 101 on p. 166 below.

and the soul, whose essential teaching is the liberation that is the revelation³ of the [soul's already] existing [powers of knowledge and action]. (4)⁴

In this scripture called the "Supreme" (*jñāne parānvite*⁵) five topics (padārthapañcakam) are established:⁶ the bound soul first (paśuḥ), the

⁴It is probable that this verse or verse 5 or verses 4 and 5 (or perhaps even 3–5) together were intended as a mūla- or ādi-sūtra, a unit of text intended to encapsulate the essential message of the tantra and to announce its program. For further discussion see introduction p. xxxviii and following.

⁵Emending (to parāhvaye or parābhidhe) has been considered and decided against. Adding -anvita to the end of a name (with the sense of an appended -ākhyā or -āhvaya) must, I think, be possible. Compare Umāpati's reading of Pauṣkara 8:42c (≈ Parākhya 6:19a): na sādhyasādhanañveyaḥ [scil. sambandhaḥ]. The reading parerite might also be considered, for compare the use of īritam in Mokṣakārikā 152b.

For jñāna in the sense of 'scripture' or 'text', cf., e.g., Svacchanda 11:188a, the opening of the Sarvajñānottara as quoted in GOODALL 1998:lx, fn. 145, and Sārdhatriśatikālottara 5:6d (pace Rāmakaṇṭha).

⁶The number of padārthas in a Siddhāntatantra varies: see GOODALL 1998:lxii and 182, fn. 69. About the number in the Parākhya there has been disagreement—see GOODALL 1998:lxii, fn. 151—but it is plain that there are five, and the content of the surviving chapters makes clear that they are not to be divided or interpreted as DAGENS suggested (1979:202–3) when discussing this verse as it appears quoted in the Śaivāgamaparibhāṣāmāñjarī (see apparatus) and again in a discussion of the number of categories in the Raurava (DAGENS and BARAZER-BILLORET 2000:xxxvii, fn. 72), even though he was then aware of and referred to my citation of the verse in its correct form (GOODALL 1998:lxii, fn. 151). Observe that the verse is there followed by another line that mentions that the number of padārthas in the Raurava is also five, which I suppose to be an unproblematic reference to Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 4:48 (which should be corrected with the quotation in Kiraṇavṛtti 1:13.36–7). In other comparable verses that mention the number of padārthas in different works the Parākhya is consistently assigned five: e.g., the verse mentioned in BHATT's introduction to Mataṅgavidyāpāda (p. xlvii) quoted by Umāpati in his Pauṣkarabhāṣya ad 1:8:

pañcoktāḥ śrīparākhye ca mṛgendrāday trayāḥ smṛtāḥ* and in the Śaivaparibhāṣā (p. 28):

*sapta svāyambhuve proktāḥ ṣaṭ pauṣkaramataṅgayoḥ
śrīmatparākhye pañcoktāḥ padārthā raurave trayāḥ.*

In this last verse the Raurava, however, is assigned only three, and this is, I think, because it refers to some part of what I believe to be a later body of material, namely that which has been published as the 'kriyāpāda' of the Raurava.

Lord (īśvaraḥ), [pure] knowledge (vidyā), the womb (yonih), and, the last in this scripture (iha), liberation (muktiḥ).⁷ (5)

Where there is [discussion of] the accomplishment of experience caused by various past actions (tattatkarmanibandhanā),⁸ that is held to be the topic 'bound soul', afflicted by the faults of impurity (paśutvadoṣanir-dagdhāḥ). (6)

That in which there is supreme excellence of effects, pure, dissociated

Much ink has been spilt on the subject of padārthas. I wish to qualify here just two remarks of BRUNNER on the subject (1981:140, fn. 198): 'la répartition des objets d'étude en catégories fondamentales est assez arbitraire' and later 'la division tripartite (pati, paśu, pāśa), la plus célèbre, semble primaire'. As to the first, it should be borne in mind that for the early Siddhāntatantras the padārthas are not generally conceived of as a fixed list of irreducible ontological categories into which the universe can be analysed—which is an impression one can have of them from Mṛgendra 2:2, Tattvapra-kāśa 5, the opening of Rāmanātha's Siddhāntadīpikā and from some later literature: see, for example, Kavirājaśekharaśūryabhaṭṭāraka's Śaivasiddhāntaparibhāṣā, in particular p. 13, Civañānacittiyār, parappakkam 294 (to which my attention was drawn by TOKUNAGA 1981:4–7 and 17), Vāyavīyaśaṃhitā Pū. 5:10ff, and the opening of the second pariccheda of Śivāgrayogin's Śaivaparibhāṣā: atha prameyaṃ nirūpyate, tac ca trividham: patiḥ paśuḥ pāśaś ceti. (It should be mentioned, however, that Śivāgrayogin goes on to explain that other lists of padārthas are scriptural.) The padārthas are instead various groupings of topics following which the various tantras choose to expound their ontology. Their purpose is, in other words, epistemological or didactic. The perhaps inadequate translation 'topic' has therefore been deliberately chosen to indicate that the padārthas are not, as in other branches of learning, fundamental categories of Saiddhāntika ontology. It is precisely their arbitrary character that makes their similarity in different tantras suggestive of close relations between those tantras (cf. p. lii above).

As to the second of BRUNNER's observations, it may be that the Śaiva Siddhānta can be characterised as a pluralism that sees the world as ontologically tripartite, but examination of the earliest scriptural lists of padārthas suggests that the list of the three ontological realities was not the starting point for the Saiddhāntika padārthas, which are, I think, more likely to have been inspired by the similarly non-ontological padārthas of the Pāñcārthika-Pāśupatas.

⁷As in the Kiraṇa, the bound soul is the first topic to be listed and treated in depth. As in the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 2:21) and in the Kiraṇa 1:13 as interpreted by Rāma-kaṇṭha, the last topic is that of means to achieve liberation (upāya is the name given to it in the Mataṅga).

⁸*ex conj.* ISAACSON (letter of 26.v.2001). One could keep more of M^Y's reading and emend instead to tatra karma nibandhanam, 'for that the cause is karman', but this would be syntactically disturbing, since yatra in the first pāda correlates with the sa in the fourth. But pāda b could be treated as a parenthetical aside. Observe that in this verse and in the following description of the other topics some of the qualifiers apply to the padārthas and some apply to the subjects of the padārthas.

from what is impure,⁹ is the topic called the Lord, in which an array of powers have their seat. (7)

Where the principal Mantreśas, together with the mantras (savidyānām) arise, where they are resorbed (teṣāṃ layaḥ), and where they hold sway (adhikāraḥ),¹⁰ that is known as another [topic] called 'knowledge'. (8)

Where the elements (mātrānām) take on an arrangement which is within the range of [experience for] souls (ātmagocaraḥ), that, together with the Rudras [that oversee it] is [the topic] called the womb (yonisamjñakāḥ), [which is taught] in order to explain the effects of those [elements] (tatkāryakhyāpanāya).¹¹ (9)

Where there is the use of rites [performed] with mantras (mantrakriyāyogaḥ), augmented by [proper] bathing, worship and so forth, together with [adherence to] the rules of the cult,¹² and augmented by yoga (yoga-puṣṭāṅgaḥ), that is the most important [topic], namely that of liberation (muktilakṣaṇaḥ). (10)

This group of five matters is to be expounded by [stating the position of] the Siddhānta, attacks [on that position], and by settlements [of those attacks] (siddhāntākṣepaniścayaiḥ),¹³ using grammar, hermeneu-

¹³ This compound could also be understood 'by attacks upon and [then] settlements of [the view of] the Siddhānta'. This would reflect the usual mode of discourse in Saiddhāntika texts: each truth is communicated in response to an attack or question that first challenges it. Observe, for example, the presentation of views throughout the Kiraṇa, and notice Rāmakaṇṭha's frequent formula atha...praśnapūrvaka[m] prakaraṇāntaram (introducing chapters 2–6 of the Kiraṇavṛtti). And we see this structure not just in tantras, but also in independent treatises: Śivāgrayogin prefaces, e.g., his Śivajñānabodhasaṅgrahabhāṣya and his Śivāgrabhāṣya with a 'garland of questions' (praśnamālā). But although in the Parākhya too the discussion of each point of doctrine tics, and logic (padavākyohaiḥ),¹⁴ with [their] attendant[instrument]s (-paricchadaiḥ) of figurative interpretation and so forth (lakṣaṇādi-). (11)

Without grammar (padam vinā) one cannot understand the sandhi of words (tatsandhiṃ), compounds [of them] or derivation from verbal roots (dhātunirgamam); without hermeneutical science (vākyena [vinā]) one cannot understand sentence[s]; without logic (pramāṇam [vinā]) one cannot understand how to use arguments (hetuśamśrayam).¹⁵ (12)

And [without an understanding of] the indirect usages of words (lakṣaṇā) [one cannot understand] the supplying, on the level of words and syllables, [of what is not explicitly stated, inferring it] from the meaning of neighbouring [passages].¹⁶ Without knowing the rules of interpretation (paribhāṣāḥ) that belong to one's own system one does not know [how to interpret] hidden meanings (kṣiptān [arthān]) and meanings which are inferred from the connecting of [widely] separated [words or passages].¹⁷ (13) is introduced by a question of Pratoda, here these questions are in turn preceded by 'programme' verses (1:15, 2:1, 3:1, 4:1, etc.), and these, as Dr. ACHARYA has suggested to me, may be intended to be opening statements of the Siddhānta.

These are the instruments¹⁸ of the creator of this [book] (tatkartuḥ); the very same (samāni hi) are to be employed by the teacher (ācāryasya), as is appropriate in order to establish the meaning,¹⁹ at the time of expounding [the scripture]. (14)

The bound soul²⁰ is different from its body, indestructible, [all-]pervading, distinct [from God and from other souls], with impurity, not [innately] insentient, the experiencer of the fruits of its own actions, an agent, partially equipped with the power of knowledge, subject to the Lord.²¹ (15)

†The yogin [Pratoda], endowed with the power of knowledge, equipped understanding of lakṣaṇā.

¹⁸Note that this pāda has too many syllables; but this particular type of hypermetry, in which the first two short syllables are probably intended to be read rapidly together and must count for one, appears to be not uncommon in this sort of writing (see fn. 132 on p. lxxxvi above). The interpretation of this verse has been suggested to me by Dr. ACHARYA. Also perhaps conceivable would be an interpretation based on the assumption that tatkartuḥ is in apposition to ācāryasya and means vyākhyākartuḥ: 'These instruments are to be employed equally(?) at the time of expounding [the scripture] by the teacher who does that [expounding]...'

²¹In the Śātaratnollekhinī, when commenting on this verse (Śātaratnasāṅgraha 18), the commentator locates a further discussion of all but the first and last of these epithets in the subsequent verses of this chapter. (For the entire passage, see Appendix III.) Thus the epithet anaśvaraḥ the commentator finds expanded upon in 1:29ff; vyāpī he finds expanded upon in 1:37ff; vibhinnaḥ in 1:43ff; samalaḥ in 1:58c ff; aḥaḥ in 1:68c ff; svakarmaphalabhuk in 1:77c ff; kartā in 1:84c ff; kiñcijjñāḥ in 1:91c ff. Though the first epithet, dehānyaḥ, is not explicitly related to any following verses in the chapter, the author of the Śātaratnollekhinī takes it to be directed against the Cārvākas (anena cārvākasya nirāsaḥ (p. 32)), and so it is clear that he saw it expanded upon in 1:18ff. The text of the whole of the commentary on this verse is given in Appendix III.

Thus we see that this verse contains the program for the remainder of the chapter: each epithet, with the exception of kiñcijjñāḥ and seśvaraḥ, is challenged in turn by Pratoda in the order given in the verse and is then shown by Prakāśa to be just:—dehānyaḥ is questioned in 1:17 and 1:21; anaśvaraḥ in 1:28; vyāpī in 1:36; vibhinnaḥ in 1:40 and 1:42; samalaḥ in 1:51; aḥaḥ 1:61; svakarmaphalabhuk (perhaps) in 1:81; kartā in 1:85. The last epithet, seśvaraḥ, is not explicitly challenged by Pratoda; but it is echoed in the last word of the chapter (seśaḥ in 1:95d), and it is probable that Prakāśa is expanding on it in 1:94, hence the translation 'subject to the Lord'. This interpretation finds further support in Parākhya 2:122cd, where the term is so used of officials of the universe: śivatulyabalāḥ sarve kiṃ tu te seśvarāṇavaḥ (≈ Mataṅgavidyāpāda 4:55cd).

with a small amount of reasoning²² asked Prakāśa briefly (leśāt) about the distinctness [from the body] of the soul's power of knowledge (tacciteḥ).²³ (16)

This body is a transformation of the four elements, distinguished by connection with consciousness²⁴ and possessed of vital breath [even] when [it is] not [actually engaged in] cognising anything (agrahe); it displays activity (viṣṭambhate) in various ways, such as by movement (vartanādyaiḥ). This being the case, we do not [accept that we] experience a controlling (adhyakṣakaḥ)²⁵ soul inside this elemental body. (17)

Questioned thus, the lord Prakāśa, who knows [how to achieve both] his own aims and those of others, through the access of the power of the ²²It is perhaps just possible that all the qualifiers of this line still belong to the preceding general statement about the bound soul. If they do, then perhaps something is missing from the text, for the next line, without mentioning Pratoda or using any epithet that might be applied to him, reports that he asked a question with prakāśaṃ pṛṣṭavān. This small difficulty could of course be explained away by the assumption of a lost speaker indication of the form pratoda uvāca. But the possibility is remote, for none of the attributes of 1:16ab seems to be taken up later for discussion and proof, in the way that those of 1:15 all are. Note that yuktileśa is used, apparently without negative connotations, in 2:77d and that 1:18c might have been begun with the similar phrase īṣadyukti-. Cf. also Mṛgendravidyāpāda 9:1:

kathyate granthipāśasya kiñcid yuktyāpi leśataḥ*

'Now a brief (kiñcit) definition of the bond of māyā is related, such as [that bond] has been understood from the teaching of the omniscient [Lord], as well as, to a small degree, from reasoning.' Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha comments ad loc.: yuktyāpi leśata iti nāgama-mātreṇa kevalena, api tu stokād anumānopapannam api tallakṣaṇam ucyata ity arthaḥ.

²³This translation assumes that vyatirekitām relates only to the first objection that Pratoda is about to voice, namely that of a Cārvāka. But perhaps we should rather interpret it to refer to the querying of all the attributes of the soul that are to follow in this chapter and so translate the second half-verse thus: '...[Pratoda]... then (tat) questioned Prakāśa briefly about the sentient [soul]'s having the opposite characteristics [to those stated].' Dr. DEZSŐ has suggested to me the possibility that leśāt might be a corruption (influenced by the previous line) for dehāt.

Lord's light,²⁶ spoke this speech, smiling [the while] (hasann iva). (18)

Even when there is an aggregate of elements,²⁷ and even though the faculty of sight might be unblemished of a body engaged in trying to grasp objects determinately [i.e. with its buddhi also engaged] (adhyavasāyataḥ), there cannot be the expected (abhipretaḥ) grasping of external objects when its mind is otherwise directed.²⁸ Since [this is so], therefore [we can be certain that] there exists separate [from the body and the sense faculties] (anyaḥ) [but] inside it (asmin) a soul, which has become absent-minded (śūnyamānasah).²⁹ (19–20)

²⁷ It is odd to have the presence of a body stated as a condition for that same body grasping or not grasping something, for when we unpack this, what it appears to mean is 'a body which is engaged in grasping an object ceases to grasp the external object in the way one might expect, if its mind is elsewhere engaged, despite the presence of a conglomeration of elements [i.e. the body itself] and a functioning faculty of sight'.

One could therefore assume that samudāye is here used in the sense of samudāyātve, 'even though it is an aggregate of the [requisite] elements', but this is hardly less problematic.

²⁹ Cf. Śivāgrayogin's paraphrase of the argument in the introduction to his quotation of Pauskara 4:61c–72b, which immediately precedes the quotation of our passage (Śaiva-paribhāṣā p. 45): kiṃ ca nirdoṣendriyārthasannikarṣe 'py arthagraho na dṛśyate. tat kasya hetoḥ? vyāsaktatvād iti cet, hanta tarhi cittavyāsaṅgaprayojakaḥ sūkṣma ātmā-bhyupeyaḥ.

Dr. WATSON has pointed out to me (letter of 4.vi.2001) that Vasubandhu in the beginning of the pudgalaviniścaya that forms the end of his Abhidharmakośabhāṣya (p. 461) spells out the use of a structurally similar argument—where the absence of an effect in some cases but its presence in others enables one to infer an extra cause that is present in the latter cases but not in the first—to establish the existence of the indriyas, at the end of which he observes that such an argument cannot be constructed to prove the existence of the soul. Indeed it might here be objected that all Prakāśa has really proved is the existence of the manas. But one might reply to this that it is possible that the conception of the soul which the Cārvāka may wish to reject appears to be a conception of it as a mental entity (this is implied by Pratoda's next question).

Pratoda spoke:

No mental entity is ever (*yataḥ kvacit*³⁰) perceived in it by direct perception; what is seen is [just] a conglomeration of [the gross] elements [that is conscious] because of a special kind of transformation.³¹ (21)

Prakāśa spoke:

Now what we observe in the body are four states, beginning with childhood, which are quite distinct, one from another, because of a particular kind of transformation. (22)

There is a rememberer who has a synthetic awareness of one given state, even though that has passed, while he is in another. [The Cārvāka rejoins:] that awareness that is memory is separate [from the body and

Furthermore it could be argued that to prove the existence of the manas is to prove, if one accepts the Sāṅkhyas' model of perception, the existence of the soul, since the manas is not itself the perceiver, but rather that which focusses the attention of the perceiving soul.

³⁰I assume that this is an expression equivalent to yatra kutracit.

³¹Dr. WATSON has pointed out to me that this special kind of transformation of the elements that results in a sentient body is referred to extremely frequently in Cārvāka pūrvapakṣas, e.g. in the Nyāyamañjarī (vol. 2, p. 267), Mṛgendravidyāpāda 6:6 and Mṛgendravṛtti ad loc, the Nareśvaraparīkṣāprakāśa ad 1:18ab, p. 44 and by Kumārila in the Ślokaṁvṛttika, ātmavāda 69. The transformation is special in that it is different from the kind of transformation that results in such inanimate things as pots, as Pārthasārathimiśra makes explicit in his Nyāyaratnākara ad loc.: bhūtānāṃ hi cicchaktiyoge tebhya eva ghaṭādipariṇāmād viviktāc charīrākārapariṇāmāc chaktyabhivyaktirūpād anugrahād indriyādisahāyād buddhir utpadyate... In other words, the point of specifying the 'particularity' of the transformation is to avoid the objection 'if consciousness arises from transformations of matter, why aren't all such transformations conscious?' The answer is that consciousness arises only in those particular transformations of matter that result in functioning bodies with sense-organs. The example of alcoholic fermentation is often adduced: if particular ingredients are not mixed in a particular way, then the power to intoxicate will not arise.

Note that, as WATSON has pointed out (*2002:254–5, fn. 69), nowhere in the discussion which follows does Prakāśa answer Pratoda's objection in the way that Rāmakaṇṭha might, i.e. by claiming that the soul is a fact of experience which is svasaṃvedanasiddha: see, for example, Nareśvaraparīkṣāprakāśa ad 1:5, p. 14: tatrāyaṃ sthīrarūpaḥ prakāśaḥ sarvadaiva ... ātmapadapratipādyah pratipuruṣaṃ svasaṃvedanasiddhaḥ. Versions of the same sentence are to be found also in the Paramokṣanir-āśakārikāvṛtti ad 43, p. 294 and in the Mataṅgavṛtti ad vidyāpāda 6:34c–35b, p. 172. Cf. also Kiraṇavṛtti 2:25.2–3, in which WATSON (*2002:137, fn. 30) proposes emending °prakāśatayā to °prakāśakatayā.

Prakāśa, by contrast, resorts only to anumāna and it seems fair to assume that the redactor of the Parākhya, unlike Rāmakaṇṭha, held that the soul could only be inferred.

senses but] produced from the body and its senses.³² (23)

[We know this] because awareness [arises] from the presence of those [viz. the body and its senses] and because one does not perceive it [when] they are not present (tad asat).³³ [We reply that] their existence too [though] is inconclusive, [since] cows and such like beasts do not have consciousness.³⁴ (24)

After all one cannot show [knowledge] to be an effect of them [viz. of the body and the senses] in as much as it is a quality [of the soul], and one can determine [the existence of] inference, which has as its effect the cognition of an object.³⁵ (25)

And (tu) it is by the use of this [type of cognition known as inference] that worldly interaction among men is observed to take place. Since the elements in the body are referred to as properties of that [soul] on the basis of [observation of] positive and negative concomitance, because we observe that those [elements in the body] are concomitant with the same thing [viz. the soul], we therefore proclaim [the existence of] a rememberer. Where there is this [rememberer], there there is memory. The cognition [that we call] memory exists in him; memory is not [possible] in something that is impermanent.³⁶ (26–7)

³²The editors of the Śaivaparibhāṣā have here accepted smṛtir jñānam bhinnam bhūtākṣanirgatam and SURYANARAYANA SASTRI (1982:102) renders this last half-line with '... he is the one who remembers and the remembrance is cognition which is different from what arises from the elements and the [elemental] senses' (as though he had had before him bhūtākṣanirgatāt). But the quotation in the Śaivaparibhāṣā ends at this point, so SURYANARAYANA SASTRI was not able to consider the full context; in the light of what I understand of what follows, I have decided to assume that a Cārvāka counter attack begins with smṛtijñānam.

³³Perhaps the second pāda should rather be interpreted 'it [viz. awareness] is not non-existent, because it is experienced'. The interpretation of this verse, indeed of the remainder of Prakāśa's speech is extremely tentative.

³⁴This is a surprising statement, unless we assume that caitanya is intended in a rather strong sense. Could it perhaps be intended to mean 'articulate self-awareness'?

³⁵Note that the tentative interpretation offered of this half-verse depends on two conjectures. Presumably it is intended to weaken the Cārvāka's case by emphasising that purely mental cognition exists—cognition that is based only on other cognitions—as well as perceptual cognitions that are based directly on the elements and senses, that is to say instances of pratyakṣa, which depend on there being indriyārthasannikarṣa and so could be said to be 'produced from the elements'. This entire speech of Prakāśa's is, it seems to me, a refutation of the Cārvāka view that awareness and mental events are produced from the elements.

³⁶This interpretation is of course tentative. Perhaps conceivable as an alternative is

Pratoda spoke:

Since knowledge flows in a stream and since it is [therefore] momentary, it is not permanent. There is no soul in this [body] separate from that [stream of knowledge], because we do not perceive logical grounds from which its existence might be inferred (*talliṅgānupalambhataḥ*³⁷). (28)

Prakāśa spoke:

If knowledge were momentary, to whom could the [fruits of] accumulated past action accrue? The fruits of one's actions could not be experienced if knowledge perishes without continuity. (29)

Pratoda spoke:

A trace of an action laid down previously by that [stream of knowledge] is brought to fruition (vyajyate) in a separate moment (vyavasthāyām), just like the colour taken on by the flowers of a thorn-apple [whose seeds were stained with lac].³⁸ (30) the following: 'It is because (yathā) the physical elements in the body are [erroneously] referred to as properties of this [soul] on the basis of positive and negative concomitance that they have [apparent] concomitance with regard to the same thing [viz. memory], and that is why (yena ... tenaiva) [we, who recognise that this concomitance is only apparent] proclaim [the existence] of a rememberer [viz. the soul]. Where that is, there there is memory. Memory must exist in him. Memory is not [possible] in something that is impermanent.'

³⁷M^y's corruption of this might be explained as the result of the text having passed through an intermediary in Grantha script (in which the graphs for bha and ha are similar and not infrequently confused), or as a result of aural confusion.

³⁸*ex conj.* APTE (1957, s.v. khalaḥ) records '3 The thorn-apple'. The same plant, referred to by the name unmatta, appears in a passage that I suppose to be discussing the same image in the Nareśvaraparīkṣāprakāśa ad 1:4, p. 10: tarhi sa eva saṃskāro nityena dharminā vinā nopapadyate iti tatas tatsiddhiḥ. na anityānām evonmattabī-jānām lākṣādisaṃskāras tatpuṣpāruṇimādinā siddhaḥ...

But it is not only the unmatta plant that is so treated, for cf. also the description of experiments on mango and cotton plants in the following passage from the beginning of the Jaina section of the Sarvadarśanaśaṅgraha (p. 49):

uptānām aṅkurakāṇḍaskandhaśākhāpallavādiṣu taddvārā paramparayā phale mādhyanyamāḥ. yathā vā lākṣārasāvasiktānām kārpāsabījādī-nām aṅkurādipāramparyeṇa kārpāsādaḥ raktimanyamāḥ. yathoktam*

yasminn eva hi santāne āhitā karmavāsanā phalaṃ tatraiva badhnāti kārpāse raktatā yathā kusume bījapūrāder yal lākṣādy avasicyate śaktir ādhīyate tatra kācit; tāṃ kiṃ na paśyasi? iti.

The first half of the second of the quoted verses is Ślokavārttika nirālambanavāda 200cd, and the first, as Dr. ISAACSON has pointed out to me, is cited in a number of

Prakāśa spoke:

This trace that you have spoken of, is it not undivided³⁹ (avicchinna-lakṣaṇā)? If it is different [in each moment, then] it could not exist in another moment.⁴⁰ (31)

If, when that moment [of action] perishes, this [trace] does not perish, then it is undivided, perduring, one and the locus of various cognitions. (32)

earlier sources, for instance Nyāyabhūṣaṇa (p. 495) and Nyāyamañjarī (vol. 2, p. 297). On the strength of these passages, one could accept the more obvious emendation phalapuṣpāttarāgavat (rather than the khalapuṣpa- suggested by the Nareśvaraparīkṣā-prakāśa), since it is clear that fruits as well as flowers are affected; I have not done so not simply because I am captivated by the ingenuity of my first conjecture, but for the reason that I expect the text to refer to a type of plant.

The interpretation of the expression vyavasthāyām is uncertain.

⁴⁰This translation assumes a hanging yadā (see introduction p. lxxx) and it assumes that kṣaṇāntargatā is ungrammatically used as equivalent to kṣaṇāntaragatā (cf. Rāma-kaṇṭha's interpretation of malāntaḥstham in Kiraṇa 2:9b to mean malāntarastham). One might instead interpret '... then it could not exist in that [first] moment [of action as well as in the moment of bearing fruit]'.

One could prefer instead assuming a standard use of antargata, understanding tadā in 32b to correlate with yadā, reading tatkṣaṇena vinaṣṭena in 32a and assuming that the alternative pakṣa is introduced only in 32cd. In that case we might translate 31c–32 thus: 'If this [vāsanā] is divided [into moments], would it not be included in its [own first] moment? By that moment's being destroyed, it [too] would then be destroyed. And [as for the possibility that it is] one, undivided, stable entity that is the locus of various cognitions, considered thus ...'. Both interpretations assume the awkwardness of 1:31c ending in a na which belongs to the following pāda, but the accepted interpretation is perhaps clumsier in that it assumes that this same awkwardness recurs in 1:32b. I find it difficult to choose between the two.

SURYANARAYANA SASTRI's not wholly satisfactory translation of this difficult passage (1:31–5) is as follows (1982:117–18):

What you call vāsanā (impression), is it not characterised by perishability? If it be not of a different nature, it would be included in that instant and when that instant perishes it would also perish. What is non-perishable, stable, one, the substrate of diverse cognitions, is to object of inquiry by revelation and by reasoning is not different from the soul. There is conjunction with another life, etc., because of grief, happiness and laughter etc.; similarly the remembrance of another life is from earlier experience; permanence is to be accepted for that memory; what is remembered cannot be in the absence of experience. The one who has remembrance and experience is really permanent; therefore one who has knowledge (consciousness) is permanent and pervasive.

Considered thus, it is not logically different from the soul, because [as when, in our theory, the soul is connected to a new body], when it [viz. your vāsanā] is connected with a body in a new birth, there is similarity [in the reactions] of grief, joy, etc. [with the reactions of grief, joy, etc. that adults have]. ⁴¹ (33)

And so when there is memory of a [previous] birth because of previous experience—just as one has memories of dead [or] distant relatives—we know that [the soul] is perduring because of the memory of that [previous birth]. Memory is impossible without experience. [It is only possible that] the rememberer is the [same as the] one who had the experiences because of the fact that he endures. Therefore the knower is perduring and [all-]pervading. (34–5)

Pratoda spoke:

You have [by implication] taught that the individual (pudgalaḥ) is not all-pervading, since [according to you] he experiences the fruits of his own actions,⁴² and whatever experience one has in the form of happiness and such like [emotions] is limited to within the body. (36)

Prakāśa spoke:

How can [the soul] reach (gatiḥ) whatever fruits of his actions might be ⁴¹*ex conj.* ISAACSON. From this it can be concluded that just as the adults' reactions are influenced by memories (of experiences in the same life) so must be those of the newborn, and since they have had no earlier experiences, their memories must be of experiences in the previous life. As Dr. WATSON has pointed out, 33cd echoes Nyāya-sūtra 3.1.18: pūrvābhyastasmṛtyanubandhāj jātasya haṣabhayaśokasampratipatteḥ.

One could instead assume that a sentence is concluded with vyatiricyate and connect 1:33cd with what follows, the °sāmyataḥ giving the reason for the jātisaṃsmaraṇa of 1:34a.

⁴²This is stated in 1:15. In the introduction to the quotation of this passage in the Śātaratnollekhinī ad 18 (=Parākhya 1:15), for the text of which see Appendix III, it could be understood to be implied that this question and its response deals with a Jaina view: kṣapapakavat tasyāvyāpakatve ... deśāntaraphalabhogo nopapadyate. 'If this [soul] were not all-pervasive, as [he is not] for the Jainas, then the experience of the fruits [of his actions] in another place [than where he performed them] would not be possible.' But it seems to me more likely that what is meant by this is that the author of the Śātaratnollekhinī identified the view that the soul is not pervasive as being typical of Jainas but was not sure that this discussion was specifically about a Jaina form of this view. And indeed there seem to be no indications in the question or the response that it is Jaina. Pratoda's use here of the distinctively non-Saiddhāntika term pudgala might have been intended to signal whose view point is being discussed, but although pudgala is a Jaina technical term, it designates atoms of matter rather than souls.

in some other place if he is [as you say] not all-pervasive? Or if he does reach it (asti vā tadgatiḥ) [without being all-pervading], then the soul must exist in two ways: with and without form. (37)

If it were [only] with form, then the fruits [of his actions] could not [in a subsequent life] be experienced, since form is subject to destruction. If, on the other hand (athavā), it is [wholly] without form and not all-pervading,⁴³ then how could it be led [to where the fruit to be experienced is] by [the power of] some action? (38)

How could something that is formless and insentient be skilled in leading? Thus the fruits [of past actions] that are situated in another place must arise from the connection [of the soul] with a body, [which is only possible] because [the soul is] all-pervading. (39)

Pratoda spoke:

There are established to be many souls and these are established to be all-pervasive. How can [each of] these, [though] overlapping, get the accumulated fruits of their own actions? (40)

Prakāśa spoke:

Things without form have no connection.⁴⁴ He who has a body, has [experience of] the fruits of that [body's karman]. Therefore we hold that there is a special kind of connection of souls with a body. (41)

Pratoda spoke:

[But perhaps] there exists only one knower, [situated] in various bodies, in accordance with his past actions. He appears both as one and as many, like the moon [reflected] in [rippling] water.⁴⁵ (42)

Prakāśa spoke:

In as much as [all are] of the form of consciousness they are one; [but] they are divided because of their various experiences. And those arise

⁴³One could perhaps instead understand here vyāpī (rather than avyāpī): 'If, on the other hand, it is formless, then how could it, [being all-]pervading, be led...'. For in that case, Prakāśa would be assuming the Vaiśeṣika position that if something is formless it must be all-pervading. This view is implied, for example, in the Praśastapādabhāṣya, p. 28, §2.8, ¶169 (edition of Bronkhorst and Ramseier).

⁴⁴Whether there can be conjunction between two formless and all-pervading entities is the subject of an old debate. Here Prakāśa sides with the Vaiśeṣikas. Cf. Bhaṭṭa Vādiṇdra ad Vaiśeṣikasūtra 7.2.12 (ISAACSON *1995:73 and 127-8).

from the soul's own past actions. These are delusion (avidyā), which is bondage. (43)

That which cuts away this [avidyā] is knowledge; [and so] there are [at least] two [entities] and the oneness [of all creation] does not exist. [Your] hanging on to non-dualism is finished, because there is a division between knowledge and delusion (vidyāvidyāvibhāgena).⁴⁶ (44)

⁴⁶M^Y's reading of 44b is also possible. Dr. WATSON has pointed out that this thrust is reminiscent of a passage in the Śloka-vārttika: sambandhākṣepaparihāra 82c-86:

puruṣasya ca śuddhasya nāśuddhā vikṛtir bhavet svādhīnatvāc ca dharmādes tena kleśo na yujyate tadvaśena pravṛtttau vā vyatirekaḥ prasajyate svayaṃ ca śuddharūpatvād asattvāc cānyavastunaḥ svapnādivad avidyāyāḥ pravṛttis tasya kimkṛtā anyenopaplave 'bhīṣṭe dvaitavādaḥ prasajyate svābhāvikīm avidyām tu nocchettuṃ kaścid arhati vilakṣaṇopapāte hi naśyet svābhāvikī kvacit na tv ekātmābhyupāyānām hetur asti vilakṣaṇaḥ.

And of a pure soul there could be no impure transformation. And because dharma and [its opposite] would be under his control, affliction by them would not be possible. Or if [you were to argue that affliction] acts [upon the soul] (pravṛtttau vā) because of that [karman], then [the undesirable corollary] would be entailed that there would be something existing beyond [the one soul] (vyatirekaḥ). Since [the soul] himself is of a pure nature and since no other entity can exist, what can cause nescience's acting upon the soul (tasya) [such that it perceives itself erroneously] as in a dream or the like? If one admits that the affliction (upaplave) is caused by something else, then a dualist position is entailed. Now a nescience [that simply exists] by its very nature [without beginning] nobody could destroy [and so liberation would be impossible]. [You might object that] in special circumstances (kvacit) [this nescience] that exists by its very nature might be destroyed by the occurrence of something of a different nature. But for those whose [one] remedy is the one soul there is no [such] cause that is of a different nature.

The interpretation of this last verse is uncertain. Pārthasārathimīśra introduces it thus: yadi svābhāviky apy avidyā, śyāmateva pārthivāññām agnisamyogena, dhyānādinochedyeta; ata āha... His commentary thereon reads simply na hy agnisamyogavad dhyānādyupāyāntaram ātmādvaitavādinām asti yad avidyām ucchindyāt.

Commenting on this passage of Kumārila, NAKAMURA observes (1983:339):

Stanzas 82 and 83 attack the most ancient Vedānta philosophy, especially the theory of transformation (pariṇāmavāda), which agrees with the theory of an opponent school in the Brahmasūtra (II, 1, 4; II, 1, 34 and 35). So Kumārila is repeating here a refutation of the Vedānta philosophy which had already been made prior to him. In the next stanzas

Pratoda spoke:

All traces [of past action] are delusion; they do not exist for me in reality.⁴⁷ Everything exists as knowledge. What is knowledge (yā vidyā),⁴⁸ that is the supreme soul. (45)

Prakāśa spoke:

All means of yours [in that case] which wipe away delusion are worthless,⁴⁹ since [the soul is] established to be [nothing other than the one] knowledge, [and] there is no bondage at the level of the highest reality. (46)

Everything must be knowledge. Or if there is something called delusion, then the [one] soul (saḥ) binds himself with it and should release [himself] by means of knowledge. (47)

Or [if] this is [all] the play [of the one supreme soul] or [simply His] nature (svadharmo vā), then [ultimate] liberation is impossible. Or if it be required that there is liberation, then it must be partial and not total. (48)

If [you say that it must be] partial (ekadeśe), [then we reply that] there can be no part, since it is formless and therefore without parts.⁵⁰ If there were to be total liberation, then this would entail that worldly existence must be cut off. (49)

And yet there is no cutting off of worldly existence, and so those [souls] are taught to be many, blocked beginninglessly by bonds, and that [bond] (saḥ)⁵¹ in this [tantra] (asmin)⁵² is the impurity that is taught. (50)

84–86 he attacks a new form of Vedānta philosophy, i.e. the theory of false manifestation (vivartavāda). [...] From the stanzas it is clear that those people were of opinion that the absolute brahman evolves itself by the power of nescience (avidyā), the phenomenal world as its effect being illusory like dream and illusion.

⁴⁸ ex conj. ISAACSON (letter of 11.vi.2001).

⁴⁹ This half-line is comparable to Mataṅgavidyāpāda 6:76cd: vidyākhyas cāpy upāyo 'yaṁ yo 'vidyāyāḥ pramāṛjakaḥ, but in that context the attack is not on Vedāntic Advaita.

⁵¹ ex conj. This alteration is not strictly necessary, since sā could be taken to refer back to avidyā.

⁵² This use of asmin, where, if I have interpreted the text correctly, we would expect iha or atra, is a stylistic peculiarity of the Parākhyas: see p. lxxx.

Pratoda spoke:

The soul cannot be impure, since it is pure by its own nature. And even if it were [to appear] so, then its discoloration [could] not [be] natural to it,⁵³ just as [redness is not natural] in a crystal. (51)

Prakāśa spoke:

This passion of the soul is born of the cause that is his own impurity.⁵⁴ If he had no impurity, then his passion would not arise.⁵⁵ (52)

Otherwise there could not of itself arise in him an attachment to the enjoyments of what is impure. Nor can passion be without a cause. [If it could, then] would it not arise even for liberated souls? (53)

Or past action might be the [cause of the] soul's (asya) passion, and that is beginningless. But this property of the buddhi (taddharmaḥ) is possible only when there is buddhi,⁵⁶ and buddhi, in turn, arises out of matter (avyaktasambhavā). (54)

Disproved (gatam), then, would be its beginninglessness.⁵⁷ On the other hand, [you might say that] it might exist [beginninglessly, stored up] as potential (śaktirūpeṇa vā sthitam). [In that case] nescience too

⁵⁴ For the emendation to svākya° (instead of to svakā°, which is perhaps also a possibility) see fn. 396 on p. 258 below.

⁵⁵ Cf. Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 2:4, of which this discussion is reminiscent:

yady aśuddhir na puṃso 'sti saktir bhogeṣu kiṃkṛtā?
śuddhe puṃsi na tadbhogo jāghaṭīti vipaścitaḥ.

⁵⁶ ex conj. I assume that sa taddharmaḥ refers to the soul's past action, which, being in some sense a property of the soul, would be 'stored' in the buddhi as the eight buddhidharmas. See, e.g., Aghoraśiva's Bhogakārikāvṛtti ad verse 60: iha hi buddhau vāsanātvena sthitā dharmādayo 'ṣṭau bhāvā ucyante. The correction of tasyām to satyām is not strictly necessary, since one could translate 'But this quality of the soul is stored in buddhi. . .'; but the locative absolute with satyām is smoother. These eight buddhidharmas are jñāna, dharma, vairāgya, aiśvarya and their opposites, among which avairāgya can be expressed by the term rāga. Prakāśa's answer then to the question he raised in the first half of the verse assumes a Sāṅkhya (or Śaiva) ontology in which an entity that can be called rāga exists at a relatively low level of emanation of the cosmos.

might be like this, and its opposite too, [or indeed anything].⁵⁸ (55)

If this is so, then all nescience must arise from the state of being a bound soul [viz. from impurity] (paśubhāvataḥ).⁵⁹ If, on the other hand (vā), past action were the cause of this [nescience], then it could not have influence (rañjakam) upon one who was pure [i.e. not already stained by impurity].⁶⁰ (56)

This [past action] could not have influence upon something all-pervading because of its having [i.e. being located in] a single part.⁶¹ Therefore past action cannot serve as the cause of envelopment of the soul (tasya). (57)

By it [viz. karman], when it is present (satā), the body, happiness, [and] unhappiness [are engendered]; since it is expended in doing just thus much, it [then] disappears.⁶² Therefore nescience,⁶³ which is distinct from the soul's past action (tatkarmanah), is the cause of passion. (58)

For every soul comes forth from its womb linked to nescience. And then (punaḥ) it [viz. nescience] envelopes the soul, [itself] bodiless, like ⁵⁸The rhetorical force of this verse is not certain; but I am assuming that 55cd is meant as a reductio ad absurdum: why insist that karman (or rāga) is the cause of impurity if one is then forced to admit that it in turn exists in some latent state of potency in order that it be prior to what one wishes it to have caused? Perhaps conceivable is that viparyayaḥ here is used not in the sense of 'the reverse' but rather as the Yoga label for nescience (Yogasūtra 1.6).

⁵⁹This I suppose to be a preliminary statement of the Siddhānta after the reductio ad absurdum of the previous line. The term paśutva can be used synonymously with mala, for see Kiraṇa 2:19c (quoted in fn. 464 on p. 276 below).

⁶⁰As we will see from the following verse, it is supposed that the potentially all-pervading soul must have some impurity delimiting it if karman, which is limited, is to act upon it.

the power in poison.⁶⁴ (59)

[He is] 'enveloped' because of his being occluded by that (tattiraskārāt) and because of [his qualities] being overpowered by the qualities of that [impurity]. The bound soul is therefore impure, the resort of [impure] qualities that are not adventitious [but not fundamental to his being either].⁶⁵ (60)

Pratoda spoke:

[Then] the soul is insentient by its own very nature, void of the property of sentiency, for [this sentiency] comes from outside, being produced from the ensemble of the body and its senses. (61)

Prakāśa spoke:

[The fruits of] past action,⁶⁶ good and bad, are experienced in the body. They are of two kinds: situated in another or situated in oneself. [From among the second pair] those which are situated in another are not experienced.⁶⁷ (62)

Those which are situated in oneself are of two kinds: that which is [directly] experienceable and then the other, which is other than that.⁶⁸ Now that which is experienceable, characterised as happiness or unhappiness [or the like], exists in the body. (63)

At the time when the body perishes, of what nature is the karman that is the cause of that [which we experience]? If it is subtle, then its

⁶⁷ It is possible instead that two mutually exclusive alternatives are proposed in this verse, namely that karman is in the soul or in some other thing, and that the second alternative is rejected as an impossibility.

⁶⁸ It is not clear what this other category is. Could it be karman the fruits of which have already been experienced (but cf. 1:82–4 below)? Or are these the two well-known categories of prārabdhakārya (= bhogyā) and sañcita (= abhogyā), i.e. karman that is to have effect in this life and that which is stored up for future existences? Mṛgendravidyāpāda 8:4a gives a threefold distinction: janakam dhārakam bhogyam. Perhaps anyat could refer to what is janakam and dhārakam?

subtlety must be an existence as mere potential. (64)

What is potentiality [after all]? It has to be existing in subtle form. Existing in subtle form is nothing more than potentiality.⁶⁹ If this past action can exist in subtle form at the destruction of the body, then sentiency too can therefore be held to exist in subtle form [into the next incarnation]. [If it were destroyed at the destruction of the body, it could not arise again, for] a thing which does not exist cannot arise.⁷⁰ (65–6)

It is not an effect, because there is no cause. [You might say that] everything is causally connected.⁷¹ [But all] these causes [that make up the ensemble of necessary causal factors for a particular effect] are not capable of accomplishing their function [of causing] with respect to this [consciousness]. (67)

For that in respect of which they are powerful is [something which has] potentiality that existed before. For with respect to all effects action is observed when we see (ālocya) that there is the nature of agency (kartur bhāvam) in the things [in which the effects arise]. That is why (yasmāt) this nature (sa bhāvaḥ) has the name śakti.⁷² [So] why do you not hold that consciousness must exist before that,⁷³ just as [the latent effects of] past action [do]? (68–9)

From the sun-stone arises fire and from the moonstone [arises] water; even though [many things have] the property of being stones in common, ⁶⁹The text is oddly repetitious here and has therefore been cruxed. It is suspicious that 1:65bc are similar to 1:64d and c and that 1:64d, 65a, and 65b should all seem to be saying the same thing. The reason for including so much within the crux marks is that it seems to me possible that 1:64 and 1:65 are two alternative versions of the same idea, one of them being a secondary modification (unless both contain modifications). A scribe of a manuscript in the transmission from which M^y descends may at this point in the text have been consulting more than one source and coped with a major deviation by copying two versions one after the other or by copying one in the margin. This sort of conflation was evidently not uncommon among the Grantha manuscripts transmitting the Kiraṇa (see, e.g., the apparatus to Kiraṇa 2:1, 2:2d, 2:9cd, 2:23cd, 4:7cd, 4:8ab, 4:21cd, 6:5a–6b, 6:25cd).

⁷⁰For discussions of satkāryavāda in other Siddhāntas see Mṛgendravidyāpāda 9:14–21, Mataṅgavidyāpāda 6:46–8, Paṣkara 4:80–3 and the commentaries thereon.

⁷¹If this is, as I suppose it to be, the intended meaning, it is loosely expressed. The interpretation of this passage is not beyond doubt. Perhaps 67b might be interpreted: '[Otherwise] anything might be the cause of anything'.

⁷²In this interpretation śaktivācakaḥ is treated as an unnatural bahuvrīhi compound: 'whose label is śakti'. The same usage is to be found in 2:48a.

⁷³i.e. before conjunction with the body and senses; see Pratoda's question in 1:61.

this [arising of fire or water] does not occur here in those others.⁷⁴ (70)

We require that arising necessarily comes about from that [potentiality] when [other] causal factors [are present]. For without [there really being some] potentiality [already present within the soul] (śaktyā ṛte)⁷⁵ [people would not have] here [in this world] cognition of [particular things as being] causes [of particular effects].⁷⁶ (71)

Pratoda spoke:

The nature of the universe is various because of particular transformations; but past action is not its cause; it is various by its very nature. (72)

Prakāśa spoke:

You cannot say that this [universe] has this nature [only], for [we sometimes see] the reverse [of that nature].⁷⁷ Even of [any one of] the four [visible] elements it cannot be said that we experience [one immutable] nature. (73)

Without [apparent] cause the earth shakes, water (kam) is sometimes observed to be hot, fire goes out, sometimes air rises upwards.⁷⁸ There is no [immutable, innate] nature even in the elements. How then will there be one [in them] when [they cause] the arising of bodies?⁷⁹ (74–75b)

⁷⁴The point of the image is to underline the importance of śakti: other stones do not have śakti, and so even when they are provided with the stimuli (the sun and the moon) which cause the sun-stone and moonstone to produce respectively fire and water, they do not do so. The stimulus provided by the sun is like the stimulus provided by the body and instruments of the senses: it achieves nothing if śakti is not there to be stimulated.

⁷⁷*ex conj.* If instead we retained the transmitted °viparyayaḥ, it could perhaps be construed with vaktavyaḥ: 'One cannot say that this [universe] has [this] nature [or that it has] the reverse of that nature.'

⁷⁸According to Vaiśeṣikas, among others, these elements have innate properties that are the reverse of or different from these. For an account of what their expected properties are, see, e.g., the Yuktidīpikā ad Sāṅkhyakārikā 38, pp. 225–6, a passage which, as WEZLER and MOTEGI indicate in their edition, is largely paralleled in Vācaspatiśrī's Tattvavaiśārādī ad Yogasūtra 3:44 as well as in the Yogavārttika ad loc.

Might that cause [of diversity in the universe] be visible (dr̥ṣṭam), or do you hold that the cause for these things is invisible (adr̥ṣṭam)?⁸⁰ (75cd)

For creatures endowed with sense and passion, for those with teeth, for those that are radiant, for those differing from each other in having bodies that are slow, [fast, small, large] and so forth, [for all these various creatures] the seen cause [viz. gross elements] is the same,⁸¹ [and] that [unseen cause] is understood from its multiform effect by means of inference. (76–77b)

When two men of like qualities and character are engaged on [the same] service, [only] one of them will attain the fruit [of that act], and so that man's 'cause' is the greater.⁸² Invisible, because it is a subtle cause, it is understood because of its connection with [its] effects. (77c–78)

That cause is labelled 'past action' (karmasamjñam) and exists in the form of meritorious and bad action (dharmādharmātmakam). Through past action the [soul achieves] connection with a body; through past action the bound soul experiences the fruits [of his deeds]; and imbued (vāsitaś ca) by past action he wanders about here [in this material universe] (itah)⁸³ deluded by nescience. (79)

The latent traces called past action are subtle, implanted (āhitā) like [the root of] a Jalavāsa [plant].⁸⁴ From past action [arises] all these fruits

⁸⁰ As Dr. HAAG-BERNÈDE has pointed out to me, the Vaiśeṣika explanation for behaviour of the elements that is contrary to expectations is adr̥ṣṭa. See Vaiśeṣikasūtra 5.2.8, 5.2.14 and 5.2.19, and Praśastapādabhāṣya p. 80, ¶360. In our context it is plain that the term adr̥ṣṭa is apposite because it is supposed that it means karman in such Vaiśeṣika passages. For a discussion of how adr̥ṣṭa might originally have been intended in these and other contexts in the Vaiśeṣikasūtra, see WEZLER 1983.

⁸³ ex conj. ISAACSON (letter of 15.vi.2001). Otherwise we might assume that the transmitted text uses cetas declined anomalously as a masculine, for which cf. Śivayogarātna 170 (if the constitution of that text is there correct), or that what was intended was vāsitaṃ ceto bhramaty ajñānamohitam?

⁸⁴ This interpretation may well be wrong. One of MONIER-WILLIAMS' entries (s.v. jālavāsa) refers the reader to jālamoda, which he defines as " 'water-enjoyer,' the root that are experiences of happiness and unhappiness. (80)

Pratoda spoke:

But since these [latent retributive effects of] actions are created only by an [already] existing body, how can it be the cause of the body, [since] at that time [i.e. at the time when, according to you, a body does not exist but is about to be produced] this [past action] does not exist, because it is impossible.⁸⁵ (81)

Prakāśa spoke:

Since (yathā) the soul is established to be beginningless [and its] existence is dependent on action⁸⁶—if, on the other hand, it had had a beginning, then the undesirable corollary would be entailed that creation would be uniform⁸⁷—therefore action is established to be beginningless, since transmigration is beginningless. (82)

As for its being [beginningless] like a stream (pravāharūpatā yeyam) undisrupted (avyucchinā) in existence after existence,⁸⁸ [what is meant is that] an action (asya) is destroyed by another one's arising; [this is] the eternality of action. And when an action is performed, it then stands by to be experienced by the soul (asya). The soul is taught to be the entity that creates it, the locus of [its fruits] happiness and unhappiness. (83–4).

Pratoda spoke:

The power of action does not belong to the soul that resides in the body, since actions are definitely (nīścitam) performed by the hands and feet and such [other instruments of the body]. (85)

Prakāśa spoke:

The soul is taught to be the agent of that [bodily movement] (tatkartā); the power of action is not the body's, since that [body] is insentient, [and] of Andropogon Muricatus". I imagine from the name that the plant's roots are invisible because below water and that it is their invisibility that is the tertium of the comparison here.

⁸⁵Or perhaps 'because it is not connected'.

⁸⁶*ex conj.* The transmitted text could perhaps be retained and interpreted in the same way. Also possible might be emendation to sāpekṣaḥ karmaṇi sthitaḥ.

since the power of action is eternal.⁸⁹ (86)

The power of action [is realised only] by [really] existing instruments (karaṇaiḥ sadbhiḥ); nevertheless it is that [power of action] which is of principal importance [in achieving an action]. So too people do not praise the axe [as the agent] in the cutting down of a tree. (87)

The soul, therefore, is held to be the agent, [acting] by means of the instruments, because he is of principal importance. Even when he is not doing something he has the power of action because of his will, [which is directed] towards the objects of desire. (88)

Thus because of the power of the soul's will there is transformation in [its body's] skin, hands and so forth.⁹⁰ This [will of the soul] (sā) will be commensurate with the degree to which the power of consciousness has been manifested (yādṛg bhavet ... cidvyaktiḥ) in the particular body [of that soul] (yasmin ... piṇḍe). (89)

The [soul's] power of knowledge (jñānam) is limited by the body, linked to the performance of his own actions.⁹¹ When [the degree of revelation is] small, little [of that power of knowledge] is revealed; when large, it is established that a large amount [is revealed].⁹² (90)

⁸⁹The readings of the Śataratnollekhinī in the second half of this verse are also interpretable: '... since that [body] is insentient. Therefore the power of action [resides] in the immortal [soul]. And so...'.
⁹⁰*ex conj.* vikāras tvakkarādikaḥ seems the most economical repair possible.

⁹²This rendering reflects the awkwardness and tautology of the text, but it may not be right. Perhaps also possible is the following interpretation: 'When [the soul's karman is] weak, little [of the power of knowledge] is revealed; when [the karman is] strong, a large amount is established [to be revealed].'

The verse is read, and so interpreted, differently in the Śataratnollekhinī. 1:90c-91b and 1:91c-92b (verses 57 and 56 respectively of the Śataratnasaṅgraha) appear embedded in the Śataratnollekhinī thus (p.71): ātmaśakter vibhutve 'pi tadbhānasya vyañjakādhīnatvāt sarvajñatāpi nāstīti parākhyasūtreṇa darśayati

Although the power of the soul is all-pervading, since its appearing is dependent on something that reveals it, there is no omniscience [for the likes of us in saṃsāra]. This (iti) he shows with a sūtra of the Parākhya:

[Although] being all-pervading [and] although of the nature of consciousness, since [it is only when he is] in a [particular] place [that] he knows this [universe of knowables], he is therefore taught to be parviscient, because of the absence of vision when in [a state of] separation [from that which reveals his consciousness].

[The word] jñānarūpaḥ [means] he whose nature (svarūpaṃ = rūpaṃ) is consciousness. Although he is of the nature of consciousness and all-pervading (vyāpakaḥ = vibhuḥ), because of the fact that he knows (jānāti = vetti) the knowable [external world] (jñeyam = tat) when in [a certain] position, [that is to say] in the position in which kalā and the others [of the evolutes of māyā] act as revealers [of his consciousness], the soul (ātmā = sah) is therefore taught to be (pratipāditaḥ = proktaḥ) parviscient (kiñcijjñāḥ kiñcij jānātīti kiñcijjñāḥ). He tells us the reason for this with [the expression] vyavadhānānīdarśanāt: because there is no vision (nīdarśanābhāvāt = anīdarśanāt), which is to say that there is no knowledge (jñānābhāvād ity arthaḥ), when he is in a position separated from factors that reveal [his consciousness] (vyañjakarahitasthale = vyavadhāne).

[Objection:] if the soul is [only] parviscient thanks to factors that reveal [his consciousness], then the soul could not become omniscient even when there is initiation, which is [also just] a factor that reveals [his consciousness], there being no difference [between it and kalā and the others] qua revealer [of consciousness]. This objection He refutes, giving an example, with a further sūtra that explains that there is a hierarchy of factors that reveal:

And when the factor that reveals is small, [then the power of consciousness is] small; when [the factor is] great, [then the power of consciousness is] great. As is [the factor that reveals] for the soul (yādṛk... bhavet tasya), accordingly is that [factor] established to be [great or small] (tat sthitam... tādṛk). So [it is with] a lamp in darkness [viz. if it reveals much, it is a powerful lamp; if it reveals little, it is weak].

When the factor that reveals is small (vyañjake svalpe sati = svalpe), that power of consciousness, which is blocked by impurity, is itself revealed to a small degree; when the factor that reveals is great (vyañjake mahati sati = mahati), it is great. He gives an example of this: just as [with] a lamp that reveals objects (arthavyaṃjakapradīpaḥ = pradīpaḥ) in darkness (timire = andhakāre); whether it is a revealer of little or of

As great [as the degree of revelation is the knowledge] of the soul (yādṛk tādṛg bhavet tasya), as with a light in darkness. Although all-pervading and of the nature of the power of knowledge (jñānarūpaḥ), he is taught to be parviscient when he enters [the subtle body]⁹³ through that by means of which he knows this [world] (tat)⁹⁴ [and not omniscient], because of the absence of the power of knowledge because of that which envelops him.⁹⁵ (91–92b)

The linking of the soul, though all-pervading, with a body because of action [comes about] through the [intervention of the] Lord. Because the soul is without power he does not of himself have the capacity for linking himself to [the consequences of his] actions, and so (ataḥ) the bound soul, whose power of consciousness is blocked by impurity, has no autonomy. (92c–93)

[And] action is devoid of consciousness and therefore it depends on something that links it [to those to whom it must accrue]. The entity that links it is the supreme Lord,⁹⁶ who does it by His will, since he has might. The bound soul has been taught to be thus, [its nature] not free of original faults. (94)

The existence of that which in this system is known as [the soul] subject to the Lord, [has been established] by argument,⁹⁷ [as has] its permanence, its being all-pervading, that its nature is distinct [from that of other souls], the existence of something that blocks it, and its nature much (svalpavyaṇjako vā mahāvyaṇjako vā = yādṛk)—and here we must supply (... ity adhyāhāraḥ) 'so too [it is with] the factor that reveals consciousness'—as a factor of revelation it is established to be (vyāṇjakatayā sthitam = sthitam) accordingly little or great (tathāvidham alpaṃ vā mahad vā = tādṛk). And so the nature of initiation is that of a greater factor of revelation than the small factors of revelation of kalā and the others [of the evolutes of māyā]. And so the purport [of this passage] is that omniscience is not impossible for the soul.'

⁹⁴Note that the Śātaratnollekhinī glosses tat with jñeyam.

⁹⁵This far-fetched translation is, I think, close to the interpretation implied by the commentary given in the Śātaratnollekhinī.

⁹⁷Note that the text again (see fn. 31 on p. 146 above) speaks of establishing the soul's existence by reasoning and does not maintain that its existence is, as Rāmakaṇṭha maintains, svaśaṃvedanasiddha.

has been established [as being] in accordance with [that expounded in] the teachings of the Siddhānta.⁹⁸ (95)

Thus the first chapter, elucidating thoughts about the topic of the bound soul, in the great tantra called the Supreme.

⁹⁸For rāddhānta in this sense, see, e.g., Amarakośa 1.5:4c: samau siddhānta-rāddhāntau. Note that this summary verse reiterates the conclusions of the disputes of the chapter in the order in which they occurred, just as 1:15 announced them in order at the beginning of the chapter, but it compresses the epithets from aṣṭaḥ through kiñcijjñāḥ with the phrase rāddhāntavākyānugataṃ svarūpam (unless we are to take rāddhāntavākyānugataṃ as adverbial). Note also that the last word, seṣaḥ, as well as reiterating seṣvaraḥ in 1:15d, introduces the topic of the next chapter: the Lord.

PARĀKHYATANTRA CHAPTER II

Prakāśa spoke:

Creator of all, great, empowered, knower of all is the supreme Lord. His body is of mantras, His exertions are for the sake of bestowing compassion, He is at rest (śāntaḥ), He is the awakener of the vidyeśas.⁹⁹ (1)

All things that are endowed with form, that are made up of parts, that have various forms (nānārūpaparicchadāḥ), because they are distinguished by¹⁰⁰ having gross parts must necessarily depend on a sentient cause.¹⁰¹ (2)

⁹⁹The string of epithets in this verse, like that in the fifteenth verse of chapter 1, sets the agenda for discussion for the remainder of the chapter. The first, sarvakartā, is expanded upon in 2:2–30; mahān might be taken to mean ‘all-pervading’, in which case it is expanded upon in 2:23–4 (still inside the discussion of sarvakartā); śaktaḥ is expanded upon in 2:32–62b; the Lord’s omniscience is defended and discussed in 2:62–78; the Lord’s body and the mantras of which it is composed are discussed in 2:79–96; both the topic of the Lord’s bestowing grace, which is referred to here with anugrahot-sāhaḥ, and that of his being impartially compassionate to all, which is presumably what is referred to with the epithet śāntaḥ, are treated together in 2:97–117b; the Lord’s awakening of the Vidyēśas is covered in 2:117–128.

¹⁰⁰I have adopted -śiṣṭatvād, assuming that it has the sense of -viśiṣṭatvād, because it has the support of the Śataratnollekhinī (quoted in the next footnote); but it is possible that M^y’s -viṣṭatvād is original and carries the sense of -samavetatvād.

¹⁰¹The commentary of the Śataratnollekhinī on this verse and on 3ab (Śataratna-saṅgraha 15, p. 26) reads as follows: mūrttāḥ ākṛtimantaḥ. sāvayavāḥ avayava-sahitāḥ. nānārūpaparicchadāḥ nānā bahuvīdhai rūpaiḥ saṁsthānaviśeṣaiḥ paricchadaḥ āvaraṇaṁ yeṣāṁ te nānārūpaparicchadāḥ. evambhūtā ye ’rthāḥ pṛthivyādayaḥ te (em. ISAACSON; ete Ed.) pakṣatvenopāttāḥ. mūrttādīni pakṣaviśeṣaṇāni kāryatvasādhane pratyekaṁ hetutvasūcatayā upāttāni, na tu bādhādinivāraṇāni. tasya pratijñām āha—buddhimaddhetupūrvakāḥ. buddhir yasyāsti sa buddhimān. sa cāsau hetuś ca so ’yam buddhimaddhetuḥ pūrvāḥ pūrvāvadhir yeṣāṁ te tathāvidhāḥ. upādānādi-gocarāparckṣajñānavatkartṛkā ity arthaḥ. hetupūrvakatvasādhanamātreṇa kāryatva-siddhāv api kartṛviśeṣasiddhivivakṣayā buddhimatpadam prayuktam. tatra hetum āha—sthūlāvayavaśiṣṭatvād iti. sthūlair asmadādibāhyendriyagrāhyair avayavaiḥ śiṣṭatvāt sambaddhatvāt. atra cāvayavānām apratyakṣatayā avayavayuktatvāhetor asiddhiparihārasūcatayaiva sthūlapadam upāttam, na tu vyabhicāravāraṇakatayā. atra ghaṭādivad ity udāharaṇam adhyāhartavyam. nigamanam āha—ataḥ sāvayavatvād

Therefore there exists some sentient [cause]. [And that is] proved to be the Lord. He is known, according to this system (atra), by inference, because of His effects, which we directly experience. (3)

Pratoda spoke:

Since we do not perceive that there is a relation of cause and effect between them [viz. between God and the world we see], and [because] there is therefore nothing [that we know] to have caused this [world], therefore you should not proclaim that we have direct experience of [His] effects [since we do not know them to be effects]. (4)

Prakāśa spoke:

You may argue that (vā) a relation [of cause and effect] is not perceived, but because of the [connection between] effect and cause [that we directly experience] in the world (iha), it is clear that when we perceive [what must be] an effect, we understand [that there must have been] a cause of it that cannot directly be perceived by us (parokṣam).¹⁰² Through such

Note that the two verses here quoted from the Vāyavīyaśaṃhitā appear (with variants) as though part of the Parākhya when Parākhya 1:2ab is cited both in the Nānāvaraṇa-ṣaṅkattarumpatavivēkam (Vol. 2, p. 611) and in the Śivajñānasiddhisvapakṣadṛṣṭānta-saṅgraha (IFP T. 317, pp. 981-2), for which see the apparatus to the text. It might be supposed then that these texts borrowed from the Śataratnollekhinī and somehow managed to confuse verses of the root text with those cited in the commentary. But those two sources also share another portion of text (patir viśvasya nirmātā...) that is not transmitted in M^y and that does not occur in the above-quoted passage of commentary from the Śataratnollekhinī. This suggests that all three texts drew on one source, and I propose that this source may have been the lost commentary on the Parākhya to which Aghoraśiva refers in his Kriyākramadyotikā (see fn. 2 on p. 138 above and see introduction p. lviii and following).

¹⁰²But we could read aparokṣam here, taking it with kāryaṃ: '...when we perceive an effect that is not beyond our senses, we understand [that there must have been] a

an effect the creator of the effect is known. (5)

That [which is to be proved can be inferred] not just from effect[s], but is also sometimes [to be] inferred from [some] property of it, and from a cause too its effect [can sometimes be inferred], and sometimes [things not directly perceptible may be known] through reasoning based upon the utterances of scripture (śabdoktiyuktibhiḥ).¹⁰³ (6)

By these inferential marks, such as effects, He may be known even though He is not directly perceived (adr̥ṣṭo 'pi).¹⁰⁴ A gross (sthūlaṃ)¹⁰⁵ effect with parts must lead [one to assume] a cause. (7)

How [do we understand] past actions to be the cause of the body though we do not perceive the causal connection? After perceiving various bodies the existence of [the retributive force of] past action is understood.¹⁰⁶ (8) cause of it.'

¹⁰³This verse might, at least in its first line, be referring specifically to the proving of the creator; but I take it to be a general stipulation of the necessary relationship between sādhya and sādhana that is to be added to the five formal lakṣaṇas required for a syllogism (see, e.g., Paṇḍita 7:44c–45b, which is cited in fn. 101 on p. 166 above) to tighten the conditions necessary for inference. Cf. Mataṅgavidyāpāda 3:9: dharmēṇa sādhyate dharmī kvacit kāryeṇa kāraṇam—kāraṇena kvacit kāryaṃ kvacid āmnāya-darśanāt. Note that this latter verse is quoted by both commentators on the Southern Paṇḍita ad Paṇḍita 8:42cd (≈ Parākhya 6:19ab) because they there interpret the text to be stating that the relationship between the logical ground and that which it seeks to prove necessarily depends on either a causal relationship or on one of inherence.

Elsewhere (GOODALL 2001a:332) I have suggested that the Parākhya's statement here might ultimately have derived from Dharmakīrti's insistence on the necessity of there being avinābhāvaniyama, expressed, e.g., in Pramāṇavārttika 1:31.

avinābhāvaniyamo 'darśanān na na darśanāt*.

This suggestion was advanced when I was understanding svadharmeṇa as svabhāvena, which now seems to me most unlikely; it is clear that the parallel (and probably related) unit mentioned above that occurs in the Mataṅga was not so intended, nor was it subsequently interpreted in such a fashion.

¹⁰⁶The variousness of experience is often adduced (e.g. in 1:82) as a proof of the force of karman on the grounds that nothing else could account for this variousness. Cf. fn. 87 on p. 160 above.

This circumstantial inference (arthāpatti iyam) is taught to be a valid means of knowledge, [but one] by which you can know general facts.¹⁰⁷ And there is no special difference between inference [as it is narrowly understood] and this circumstantial inference (upapattyanumāṇayoḥ).¹⁰⁸ (9)

If you maintain that (vā) there is some distinguishing peculiarity in circumstantial inference, then you should say what that [property] is in this [view of yours].¹⁰⁹ This [arthāpatti] does not apply to particulars [since it relates to general truths];¹¹⁰ [and] when [it is applied to] general truths, what it seeks to prove is already proved.¹¹¹ (10)

¹⁰⁸Prakāśa here appears to wish to accept as valid a wide range of inferences, not just those in which the connection between the liṅga and the liṅgin is amenable to direct perception. He could do so by accepting arthāpatti as an independent pramāṇa or by rejecting it but subsuming it under anumāna. But, as we shall see in the next verse, it is not certain which he is doing.

The use of ayam in conjunction with kaścit in 9c may seem odd (and emendation to viśeṣaḥ syād might be considered); but, as Dr. ACHARYA has pointed out to me, this appears to be an emphatic idiom: cf. the following rhetorically similar example from the Tantrāloka: asmaddarśane tu jñānavattvam antareṇa na kaścid ayam niyama ity āha. This introduces Tantrāloka 23:11ab: śrīpūrvaśāstre na tv eṣa niyamaḥ ko 'pi coditaḥ.

¹¹⁰This half-verse usually appears with anugamābhāvaḥ at the end of its first pāda: 'there is no vyāpti of the sādhya by the sādhana when [anumāna is] applied to particulars'. But see following footnote.

¹¹¹Other interpretations are perhaps possible of this problematic half-verse. Until I realised it to be an echo of a much quoted Cārvāka tag, I had been interpreting it as follows:

If [it has such a] distinguishing peculiarity (viśeṣe), then we would not accept it; [but] since [it has] the same nature (sāmānye), it would be redundant [to count it as an independent means of knowledge] (siddha-sādhya).

This would fit our particular context, but it is conceivable only if we assume that the author of the Parākhyatantra incorporated it without any understanding of how the unit is usually used. It appears elsewhere invariably to be quoted with viśeṣe 'nugamābhāvaḥ (or 'nugamābhāvāt) as its first pāda, with its second pāda ending variously in siddha-sādhya, siddhasāadhanam or siddhasāadhanāt and with or without various different versions of a following half-line. This verse, its variants in different quotations and the

Therefore [we know that] He must be (*saḥ*¹¹²) the sentient cause of this coarse [body of] effect[s that is the universe], the first of whose effects is the effect that is earth,¹¹³ by inference based on [a connection that is] known from a general principle. (11)

Pratoda spoke:

The form of the earth is thus; it was never not thus.¹¹⁴ The cause of several interpretations that Jayarāśi gives it are helpfully presented and discussed by FRANCO 1994:397–401. As FRANCO observes (1994:397), its purport ‘seems to be that there is no concomitance between the object of inference and the liṅga, if the former is an individual, and if it is a universal, then what has to be proved is already proved’.

Thus the verse is rather a potent Cārvāka attack on anumāna. And we find it so used in a Saiddhāntika work too: see Kumāradeva’s Tattvaparakāśatātparyadīpikā ad verse 72 (p. 108). (In the Nareśvaraparīkṣāprakāśa ad 2:9–10 we find only the unit sāmānye siddhasādhayatā quoted.) Here in the Parākhya, we seem to find it most inappropriately used to refute the acceptance of arthāpatti as a separate pramāṇa, even though a type of anumāna that is functionally indistinguishable from it is accepted as a pramāṇa. Perhaps after all the author of the Parākhya simply echoed this well-known tag without intending that the reader should recall its usual use. Perhaps, in other words, the alternative translation offered above in this footnote should be accepted, in which case Prakāśa would be accepting arthāpatti as a sub-variety of anumāna.

¹¹²*ex conj.* The transmitted sā makes no sense here, for it has no obvious referent. An emphatic syāt (‘there must be a sentient cause...’) would be unmetrical. The verse is not free of problems: it is conceivable that M^y’s kāraṇaṃ should be emended to kāraṇaḥ (cf. 3:2b and Kiraṇa 6:1b).

¹¹³The kārya in the compound kṣitīkāryādikasya is redundant, but it gives emphasis to the very point that Pratoda next questions: whether the earth is really an effect.

¹¹⁴This Mīmāṃsaka notion is similarly formulated in a tag that Rāmakaṇṭha frequently quotes (in Kiraṇavṛtti 3:12.5, in the Nareśvaraparīkṣāprakāśa ad 2:1 on p. 115, and seven times in the Mataṅgavṛtti): na kadācid anīdṛśaṃ jagat. It is commonplace elsewhere too, for see, e.g., Nyāyamañjarī Vol. 1, p. 491:

ata eva nirīkṣya durghaṭaṃ jagato janmavināśaḍambaram na kadācid anīdṛśaṃ jagat kathitaṃ nītirahasyavedibhiḥ.

Jayantabhaṭṭa incorporates it also into Āgamaḍambara 4:96. But, as Dr. Kei KATAOKA has pointed out to me, the tag is older still, for it appears in 2275 and 3114 of Śāntarakṣita’s Tattvasaṅgraha (2275):

iṣyate hi jagat sarvaṃ na kadācid anīdṛśaṃ na mahāpralayo nāma jñāyate pāramārthikaḥ.

Its absence in the Ślokaṇvṛttika suggests the possibility that it may have formed part of Kumārila’s lost Bṛhatṭīkā, which may have been a source of a number of discussions in the Tattvasaṅgraha: as Dr. ISAACSON and Dr. KATAOKA have pointed out to me, the problems of determining where we may assume this dependence (observed by FRAUWALLNER) are touched on by KELLNER 1997:81–7.

bodies and such (*tanvādeḥ*¹¹⁵) is [the retributive force of] past action. Why trouble with some artificial theory (*matena*¹¹⁶)? (12)

Prakāśa spoke:

Whatever entity is coarse is established to be constructed. If, on the other hand, you hold that (vā) what is coarse need not be constructed, your view is without [corroborative] examples. (13)

If you say that (vā) [the universe] is simply by its nature raised and low, it being characterised by mountains and such, then in that case [you are accepting that] it has parts that are raised and low; are those parts [too simply] by nature [so]? (14)

Would not the [supposed] cause called past action of this perceived [universe] [in that case] rather (vā) be disproved [i.e. shown to be not a cause]? Or would not (vā) forests and the like be exactly the same [as mountains, viz. simply by nature the way they are], since one could not otherwise account for them?¹¹⁷ (15)

Therefore it is established here that there is this sentient creator of ¹¹⁵ ex conj. Cf. 2:16b below. M^y's awkward tad vādeḥ could have been original, in which case the pāda might translate: 'Or that cause of [its] beginning might have been [the retributive force of] past action.' Pratoda's objection here is raised also in Kiraṇa 3:12 and in Nareśvaraparīkṣā 2:14. All three verses are perhaps conscious echoes of Ślokavārttika sambandhākṣepaparihāra 75, which Rāmakaṇṭha quotes in Kiraṇa-vṛtti 3:12.51-2 and in the Nareśvaraparīkṣāprakāśa ad 2:14: kasyacid dhetumātrasya yady adhiṣṭhātṛteṣyate/ karmabhiḥ sarvabhāvānām tatsiddheḥ siddhasādhanaṁ. 'If one require just any cause to preside [over the creation of the universe, then let this role be performed] because that [viz. adhiṣṭhātṛtva] of all things is established by [the retributive force of] past actions. [And in that case, the fault of] proving what is already established [vitiates the argument].' Cf. Abhidharmakośa 4:1a with the avatārikā given in the bhāṣya (p. 192) atha yad etat sattvabhājanalokasya bahudhā vaicitryam uktaṁ tat kena kṛtaṁ? na khalu kenacid buddhipūrvakaṁ kṛtaṁ. kiṁ tarhi? sattvānām karmajaṁ lokavaicitryam.

¹¹⁷ The text is quite uncertain to me here. Particularly puzzling is the rhetorical force of the two instances of vā. I suppose both half-lines to be intended to point to absurdities: the first points out that past action cannot have been the cause of a beginningless universe, and the second I have in a rather strained fashion interpreted as pointing to something which we might wish to account for in the same way as a mountain or valley and yet that we do observe to change, namely a forest. The quotation of the second half in the Śivajñānasiddhisvapakṣadṛṣṭāntasaṅgraha does not help, since it appears to be out of context in a series of lines that are out of sequence: see apparatus ad 2:3.

our bodies, [worlds] and so forth. And so (tat) [the retributive force of] past action is not the causal agent, but something used by that [causal agent]. (16)

[And yet] if that [karman] can be used [and so is in another's control], then its [own] power is not proved,¹¹⁸ or if it does have power, then should not that [power] itself alone [be sufficient cause] (kevalā)?¹¹⁹ (17)

If (yathā) you [are ready to] posit the power for this [generation of the universe] to belong even to something devoid of consciousness, can you not accept that the power for this, the agency, belongs to this sentient being? (18)

The activity of individual souls (jīvānām) depends on their own actions, [and] it has a [further] cause (sahetukā); and that cause, who is called the Lord over action, is known here¹²⁰ from [His] effect[s]. (19)

Pratoda spoke:

Does this effect [that is the universe] come about at a particular point in time or [all] at once in creation (sthitau), according to your system (iha)? Because [God is supposed to be] infinite [in time], no sequence [in the arising of effects should be] seen,¹²¹ and also if [you maintain that effects

¹²¹ ex conj. Pratoda's objection may not have been correctly repaired and interpreted, are generated] all at once, it is impossible [since it contradicts what we observe]. (20)

Prakāśa spoke:

That a creator creates effects is known by the arising of the effects. An effect does not arise without a cause. That is my certain opinion.¹²² (21)

[Now] the arising of effects is directly perceived [in ordinary life] to come about both [sometimes] all at once and [sometimes] gradually. Composite bodies may arise, as also may a single [simple] one. (22)

Therefore [His] being the creator of effects [is possible] simultaneously and gradually. At all times and everywhere [all things that arise] in this great area of the earth [are] effects. (23)

This [earth is] great and born of a cause, [and,] since to be great is to be all-pervading, therefore, because of its being all-pervading, the cause [too] is proven to pervade all [effects], since all effects arise when it is present.¹²³ (24–5b)

but it is clear that he is referring to the Sautrāntika and post-Sautrāntika Buddhist position that only things that have efficacy to produce effects (arthakriyākāritva) are ultimately real, and that things that have efficacy are necessarily momentary (kṣaṇika). Whatever is alleged not to be kṣaṇika and yet to have arthakriyākāritva should give rise to its effects either immediately or at some particular point in time, and both positions are, according to the Buddhist, impossible. If the Lord is the necessary and sufficient cause of everything, then everything should come into being simultaneously with him, and yet we observe that many entities come into being at different particular times: therefore we can conclude that effects arise each out of their own causal sequence. See Yaśomitra's Sphuṭārthā ad Abhidharmakośa 2:64d (neśvarādeḥ kramādibhiḥ) and bhāṣya (pointed out to me by Dr. Kei KATAOKA): neśvarāder bhāvā jāyante. kasmāt? kramādibhiḥ. ādigrahaṇena deśakālādīnām grahaṇam. atha vā anekakāraṇatvānavasthāprasaṅgād anyapuruṣakālanihnavādīnām grahaṇam. yadi hy ekam eveti vistaraḥ. yadi hy ekam eva kāraṇam īśvaraḥ syāt mahādevo vā vāsudevo vā anyad vā puruṣādi vety arthaḥ. yugapat sarveṇa jagatā bhavitavyaṁ kāraṇasya sadbhāvāt. na hy etad iṣṭam—sati kāraṇe kāryaṁ na bhavatīti. dr̥śyate ca bhāvānām kalalādīnām ankurādīnām ca kramasambhavaḥ. tasmāt svakāraṇa-paramparānirvṛtta iti neśvarādi kāraṇam iti gamyate. Among Saiddhāntika works, the Buddhist assertion that arthakriyākāritā is only possible of momentary things is attacked, for example, by Rāmakaṇṭha in Nareśvaraparīkṣāprakāśa pp. 52–6 and by Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha in the Mṛgendravṛtti on vidyāpāda 2:24–5b.

¹²²This is a line-filling cliché that occurs verbatim as the last pāda in the Kashmirian text of Maṭaṅgavidyāpāda 17:189 (BHATT has accepted evaṁ in place of iti), as well as fifteen times in the critical edition of the Mahābhārata (e.g. 5.177:19d, 5.186:26d, etc.; it is also to be found in the expunged 'additional' passages), once in the early Skandapurāṇa (15:36b), in Saurapurāṇa 3:34d, and doubtless frequently in other texts.

¹²³We could accept the reading of the Śataratnollekhinī, sannidhānena yasyāsmiṇ,

There is power observed in a magnet¹²⁴ even though it is devoid of the instruments of the senses; so too the Lord has innate power to create all effects. (25c–26b)

[But] this [case of the magnet] is merely an example. The comparison lies [just] in [their both] being agents [without the instruments of the senses]. Since this [comparison] has been taught to consist only in that [viz. in their both being agents], He cannot [be argued to] have all the qualities [of the magnet].¹²⁵ Since they are absent, there is no logical and interpret ‘...in the proximity of whom all effects arise, according to this system (asmin)’/ But we have retained instead sannidhāne yatas tasmin, which could be interpreted more literally (‘...since in that presence [viz. of Him] all effects arise’); but I suspect it to be an aśā anacolouthic usage comparable to that in 14:61e and intended to be equivalent in sense to yatas tasmin sannihite sati.

Note that when this passage (25–6b) is quoted by Trilocanaśiva in his Siddhānta-samuccaya (IFP MS T. 284, p. 138, IFP MS T. 206, p. 68, and GOML MS R 14394, p. 12), he follows it by quoting Śloka-vārttika codanāsūtra 138: anye ‘py āhuḥ:—sānniddhyamātratas tasya puṃsaś cintāmaṇer iva/ nissaranti yathākāmaṃ kuḍyādibhyo ‘pi deśanā iti. (I omit the variants of the MSS here.) This may be taken to imply a slightly different interpretation of our passage: instead of translating ‘...all effects arise’, we could then interpret ‘...all effects are possible’. Taken out of context, the verse might appear to be mocking at an impossibility: ‘Merely because of the proximity of this person, teachings [would] stream forth at his desire even from walls and the like, as from a wish-fulfilling gem.’ I therefore expressed surprise (GOODALL 1998:286, fn. 381) at Rāmakaṇṭha’s quoting it as a serious statement of his own position in the Kiraṇavṛtti ad 3:19; but Dr. ISAACSON has since observed to me (letter of 11.iii.2001) that the verse is frequently used in this way among Buddhist authors, and that he is therefore of the opinion that it is neither mocking nor pointing up a prasaṅga in the Śloka-vārttika, but that it is rather a quotation (or paraphrase) of an originally Buddhist formulation. He has pointed out its quotation in Tripiṭakamāla*’s unpublished Naya-trayapradīpa*, in the Amṛtakaṇikoddyotanibandha of Vibhūticandra, a sub-commentary on the Āryamañjuśrīnāmasaṅgīti (p. 128) and in Haribhadra’s Abhisamayālaṅkāralokā (p. 992), in Dharmendra*’s Tattvasārasaṅgraha* and in Thagana*’s commentary on Ratnākaraśānti’s Hevajrasahasajyoga (the first and last two of which survive only in Tibetan translation).

¹²⁴The same example is given in Kiraṇa 3:11cd and, in a different context, is alluded to in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 6:38.

ground [in the pakṣa, viz. in Śiva]; [and] the subject of an inference should not lack a logical ground. (26c-27)

And thus this proof is destroyed, and so too that which it was to prove. When the means of proof is not proved, then, according to this [system] (*asmin*¹²⁶), there is no proof by that [means of proof] (tatprasiddhiḥ) of that which is to be proved (prameyagā).¹²⁷ (28)

The instigating cause is called the 'lord'; that which is the auxiliary cause is something seen [such as the stick, wheel, etc.]; that which is the material cause is subtle [matter].¹²⁸ (29abc)

¹²⁸This verse appears in the Śataratnasaṅgraha as verse 15, and is introduced in the Śataratnollekhinī as follows (p. 24): evambhūtasya kartur īśvarasya prapañcam prati nimittatvam upādānatvaṃ cāsti, abhinnanimittopādānatvāṅgikārād iti kecid vadanti. tāt nirākartuṃ sarvasyāpi kāryasya prthaktayā kāraṇatrayasadbhāvaṃ parākhya-sūtreṇa darśayati. 'Some opine that such a creator God is both the instigating and the material cause with respect to the diversity [that is creation], since they accept [the possibility of an] undivided instigating and material cause. In order to refute them, he shows, with a sūtra of the Parākhya, that there must exist three separate causes for each and every effect.'

The Śataratnollekhinī then comments on the reading tad yad dṛṣṭaṃ (which I regard as being smoother than, but not essentially different from the accepted reading), but also on the variant yad adṛṣṭaṃ. The commentary is as follows (pp. 24-5): īśvarākhyam jñānakriyāśaktirūpaśvareṇa īśvara ity ākhyā yasya tad īśvarākhyam yan nimittam nimittakāraṇam, yac ca dṛṣṭam daṇḍacakraḍi saha-kāraṇam saha-kārikāraṇam, yac ca sūkṣmam mṛdādi upādānakāraṇam, tat tritayam api sarvakāryeṣu saṃhitam sambaddham. tathā ca kāraṇatrayam sarvakāryeṣu saṃhitam ity etaduttaravacanena sarvakāryasya prthaktayā kāraṇatrayavyāptipratipādanena prapañcasyāpi kāryasya prthak kāraṇatrayāśyakatayā abhinnanimittopādānatvaṃ nirastam.

'Īśvarākhyam [means] that whose name is īśvara because of the sovereignty he possesses in the form of powers of knowledge and action is the instigating cause (nimittakāraṇam = nimittam); that which is seen, such as the stick, the wheel and so forth [in the case of the creation of a pot], is the auxiliary cause (sahakārikāraṇam = sahakāraṇam); that which is subtle, i.e. the clay and so forth, is the material cause. This group of three is connected (sambaddham = samhitam) with all effects. And by the [immediately] following teaching that this group of three causes is connected with all effects, [a teaching] which explains that every effect is invariably concomitant with [each of] the three causes separately, since the effect that is creation too must [therefore] necessarily be connected with the three causes separately, its having a single instigating and material cause is refuted.

'If you object that we observe that a spider is both the instigating and the material cause with respect to the threads of his web, [we reply that this is] not [so], since even in this [case there is a separate material cause:] the saliva in its mouth is the material cause of those [threads]. Moreover, if the Lord were a material cause, it would be entailed that He would be subject to transformation and [thus] insentient. And it would follow that all creation, being produced out of Him (tadupādeyasya), would be sentient. And for the same reason the power that inheres in Him can also not be the material cause. [Even] if you accept [the position] that [the universe is no more than] an apparent transformation of consciousness, then it would be entailed that the universe would not be real. And this would not be a desirable consequence, since one cannot refute the universe, whose existence is proved by every means of valid knowledge. This is taught in the Pauṣkara:

[His] power is not the material cause, since it is sentient, like Śiva. Transformation is taught to be possible of an insentient entity, it is not possible of a sentient one. If [you] state that there is no more than an apparent transformation of consciousness, then if that is so, the effects would be unreal. How can the universe, whose existence is proved by every means of valid knowledge, be [no more than] an apparent transformation of consciousness?

‘And in this case [too, viz. that of sonic creation, which is the subject of the above quoted passage of the Pauṣkara], the Lord is the instigating cause of [sonic] creation; His powers are the auxiliary cause; bindu is the material cause. Just as is the case in this same [text, viz. the Parākhya, which is the source of the sūtra being commented upon]:

The instigating cause of these [phonemes] is the Lord; the material cause is great bindu.

‘[And] elsewhere [too]

Like the rays in the sun, moonlight in the moon, heat in fire, power inheres in Śiva; it is the auxiliary cause. The Lord, His power and māyā [are respectively instigating, auxiliary and material causes] like the potter, the wheel and the clay.

‘And in that place [too] Śiva is the instigating cause in the pure universe [and] bindu is its material cause. But in the impure universe one should understand that Ananta is the instigating cause and māyā is the material cause. So it is in the Kiraṇa:

In the pure path Śiva is the creator; Ananta is taught to be the lord in the impure.

‘With [the expression] “in the pure path” [what is meant is that] it is not appropriate that bindu and māyā, which are [respectively] pure and impure, be the cause of the reverse effects of purity and impurity. This is taught in the venerable Pauṣkara:

And māyā is not the material cause here, because she deludes by her power.

‘[The word] “here” means “in the pure universe”. And you cannot argue that māyā, or time, or karman or some other such [factor] can by themselves be the instigating cause of the universe rather than the Lord, since these, being insentient, cannot produce effects without being impelled to do so by a sentient agent, and because, it being indispensable that there should be some sentient agent to impel them, and since the likes of us cannot impel them on the grounds that our powers of knowledge and action are blocked and because it is therefore only the Lord, who is omniscient and omnipotent, for whom that

This triad of causes is connected with all effects and can therefore be is possible, it is appropriate for Him alone to be the instigating agent with respect to all creation.

'In the [other transmitted] reading, "The instigating cause is called the 'lord'; that which is the auxiliary cause is unseen", it is stated that karman, which is expressed by the word 'unseen', is the auxiliary cause. Just as [we find] in this same text in the †...†chapter:

The instigating cause of them is the Lord; the material cause is the great bindu; souls' karman is the auxiliary cause. This effect has three causes.

'And so all must accept that the three beginning with īśvara are the three causes, beginning with the instigating cause, with respect to the effect that is the universe.'

If one were to accept the alternative reading suggested by the Śātaratnollekhinī (yad adṛṣṭam), then one might interpret the verse thus: 'The instigating cause is the Lord; that which is an auxiliary cause is the unseen [retributive power of past actions]; that which is the material cause is subtle [matter], involved in all effects.' This is (essentially) the way Aghoraśiva quotes our passage in his Mṛgendravṛttidīpikā ad 8:3 (īśāvidyāpekṣitvāt sahakāri tad ucyate/ karma vyāpārajanyatvād adṛṣṭam sūkṣmabhāvataḥ), the subject of which is karman. One problem with this reading is that the passage then appears no longer to be a general statement about all effects, but rather to be one that is only about non-man-made 'effects' which are produced by God (which would mean that the -ākhyā in īśvarākhyam would be given less significance). Aghoraśiva introduces his quotation thus: ... samastadehādikārye kartṛsahakāryupādānalakṣaṇam kāraṇatrayam ghaṭādāv ivānumīyate. na tv eko janakaḥ; api tu ghaṭādīdṛṣṭāntasatvāt(?) kartrādisāmagry eva kāryajanikā.

But it seems to me probable that the redactor of the Parākhyā indeed originally intended this unit as the Śātaratnollekhinī first interprets it (see however the following verse and annotation), that is as a general statement about the arising of effects, and that he intended to make the point that even a craftsman, such as a potter, is 'omniscient' with regard to his craft. This idea, which recurs in 2:63, is an answer to the objection raised in Śloka-vārttika sambandhākṣepaparihāra 79–80 that if the Lord's creativity is to be compared with the potter's, then the Lord should be perishable and have other such undesirable qualities of the potter. Rāmakaṇṭha too deals with this objection (citing Kumārila's words), in his Kiraṇavṛtti ad 3:12 (GOODALL, 1998:73, 276–7). Here in the Parākhyā Kumārila's objection has been raised after using the example of the magnet in 25c–26b.

The Mataṅga also contains an extremely problematic general statement (perhaps related to Netratantra 21:50c–51b) about there being three causes (vidyāpāda 6:99c–100b):

samavāyi tathā māyā kāryam etaj jagat sadā.*

In his Mataṅgavṛtti ad loc. Rāmakaṇṭha interprets upādānam to mean sahakārikāraṇa and samavāyi to mean the upādāna, but not, Rāmakaṇṭha points out, as Naiyāyikas conceive it.

inferred for every effect. And¹²⁹ since one [alone] cannot [alone] generate [the universe], the whole group (sāmagrī) must be what generates it.¹³⁰ And so the instigating cause [of the universe] is the creator, the supreme Lord. (29d-30)

Pratoda spoke:

The creators we see in the world who bring about effects do not do so without [using] instruments.¹³¹ And instruments used to accomplish effects are seen to be distinct [from the creator who uses them].¹³² (31)

Prakāśa spoke:

His being the cause has been established above. A creator cannot [be a creator] without instrument[s]; [but] a creator's bringing about effects is established [to be possible] (*sthitā*¹³³) also by means of an instrument that is not separate [from himself]. (32)

Just as the fierce sun with its rays is the agent that [by rising and setting] opens and closes a group of lotusses and of water-lilies, [and] it is ¹²⁹The ca here may be an oddly placed sentence-connecting particle; but it could arguably be left untranslated on the grounds that its only purpose may be to yield a pathyā.

¹³⁰This answers Pratoda's suggestion in 2:12 that karman might alone be a sufficient cause. This is problematic, however, since I am assuming that karman would be the auxiliary cause in this case, and yet it is definitely not drṣṭa (as the sahakārikāraṇa should be according to the reading accepted in the previous verse). It is possible that this consideration might have led to the text being modified in the previous verse (to yad adṛṣṭam). This too is no solution, as mentioned above, since it does not fit all instances of auxiliary cause. It does not even fit 6:6 particularly convincingly, since there the sense of nṛkarma is more likely to be 'the human effort [of enunciation]' than '[the retributive force of] men's [past] actions'.

¹³²This is to anticipate the answer that Prakāśa in fact returns, namely that the Lord contains His own instruments. Cf. Ślokavārttika sambandhākṣepaparihāra 51: nādhāreṇa vinā sṛṣṭir ūrṇanābher apiṣyate/ prāṇinām bhakṣaṇāc cāpi tasya lālā pravartate.

¹³³*ex conj.* Perhaps supplying some weaker filler, such as tv iha, would do as well.

not through instruments separate from itself that he is established [to be an agent].¹³⁴ (33)

Just as the sun (tasya) of its very nature has the power of action with respect to its tasks (tatkriyāsthita), so too the Lord (tasya) has his own capacity.¹³⁵ [the power of] action (kriyā). And this is established to be that which brings about effects. (34)

It is known by the arising of effects: since an effect cannot come about devoid of instruments [that produced it], the instrument for this [creation of the universe] is what is called His '[power of] action', [His] 'power'.¹³⁶ (35)

You may object (cet): how can this power known as 'action', which we cannot see, be understood to exist? But tell me then plainly: how do you understand the power of the faculty of your eye (tvakcakṣuṣaḥ)?¹³⁷ (36)

Not otherwise could there be the grasping of large external objects¹³⁸ by [this] tiny (svalpasya) [eye]. It is for this reason, then, that [we know ¹³⁴ ex conj. I considered accepting Dr. ACHARYA's suggestion to emend to raviś candraḥ ('Just as the sun and the moon with their rays are [respectively] the agents that [by rising and setting] open and close a group of lotusses and of water-lilies...'); but it is more likely that the transmitted khaṇṭhaḥ is or conceals a word further qualifying the sun, since, although it is a convention in poetry that the moon opens water-lilies, one agent both of opening lotusses and of closing water-lilies seems here more likely to have been intended. Cf. Mataṅgavidyāpāda 6:100c-101b:

yathārkaraśmayo dīptā nirapekṣās tapanti hi vikāśakuñcane dṛṣṭe kumudeṣv ambujeṣu ca.

One could consider emending otherwise, for instance, to ravikhagaḥ [a na-vipulā] 'the planet that is the sun', to raviḥ kheṭaḥ, or, as Dr. ISAACSON has suggested, to raviḥ khaṣṭhaḥ.

¹³⁷ Emendations to tvakcakṣuṣaḥ and to tvakcakṣuṣoḥ were also considered. The second possibility, involving a dual, is unlikely, since, in the light of the next verse, we expect really only the faculty of sight to be here referred to. In considering the first possibility, a suggestion of Dr. ACHARYA, I was supposing that tvakcakṣuḥ might be intended as a synonym of carmacakṣuḥ, 'the physical eye'. But usages of this expression (e.g., Haracaritacintāmaṇi 4:79b and Nyāyamañjarī, vol. 1, p. 271, line 1.) are of a bahuvrīhi compound with the sense 'whose eyes are of the flesh' and they are in contexts where a contrast with yogic vision is stressed.

¹³⁸ arthagraho ... vipulāḥ literally means 'large grasping of objects', but I assume that I have conveyed what is intended.

that it has] this power that is not amenable to the senses, because of inference (upapatteḥ). (37)

So too, I maintain, there is a power that is not amenable to the senses that resides in the creator. And (api) this is established in the Śaiva Siddhānta (iha) to be the power of the unseen agent of this [universe that generates] effects.¹³⁹ (38)

And this 'power of action' can be inferred by us to exist as residing in the Cause. By this He creates His effects: bodies, faculties of sense, worlds, etc.¹⁴⁰ (39)

Because He is empowered (śaktatvāt) He creates the universe of tattvas (tāttvikam sargam), together with the bodies [in them], [and] the universe of worlds (bhauvanam [sargam]) that those [bodies] use to reside in, radiant with its various composition, [and] the universe of phonemes whose parts are mantras and that gives rise to many and various fruits¹⁴¹ (40–41b)

The power by which He creates is, according to this system (iha), one; it is perceived as though separated [into many powers]. Its division is the result of the variety of its functions; it is not division at the level of the highest reality. And so His division taught in scripture is proclaimed to be one that relates to His powers.¹⁴² (41c–42)

This division of His functions is a division that relates to His powers: Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā, Raudrī, Kālī, and Kalakirā,¹⁴³ Balavikarāṇā, Pra-¹³⁹Or perhaps: 'Therefore (tat) a power [responsible for the generation] of effects is established to exist in this universe (iha), even though [its] agent is unseen.'

¹⁴⁰This triad in this order is commonly used to indicate the totality of creation. Cf., e.g., Kiraṇavṛtti 3:8.7: ...tanukaraṇabhuvanātmanaḥ pravāhānādityena...; Kiraṇavṛtti 3:9.8; 3:12.2.

¹⁴³The exact form of this name is uncertain, but it is not impossible that 2:52 is intended to support the form chosen, and that the element vi has here been omitted to give the required metrical cadence. The following names, however, have, if the text is correct, not been modified to suit the metre; but this too is not impossible, for they do not fall in the cadence of an even pāda, whose metrical pattern is least likely to be violated. In the listing to be found in the Devakoṭṭai edition (=E_D) of the Kiraṇa too (14:24–5b) the name Balavikaraṇī yields an unmetrical odd pāda, and even an unmetrical even pāda is conceded to fit in Kalavikaraṇī: vāmā jyeṣṭhā ca raudrī ca kālī kalavikaraṇī/ balavikaraṇī caiva balapramathinīti ca/ damanī sarvabhūtānām navamā ca manonmanī. But it should be observed that E_D's 14:24–5b are not likely to be original. E_D's 14:24–5 are omitted in a number of sources, and this might seem to be the result of eyeskip, since E_D's 14:24a and 14:26a are identical; but the Nepalese MSS omit only 14:24–25b and reveal that the text was probably originally intended to give a list of six powers in 14:25cd, which, when added to Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā, and Raudrī listed in 14:26a, make up its quite different list of nine. Kiraṇa 14:25cd is rather difficult to constitute, partly because it has been omitted in most sources, and so a number of the names are uncertain; in the following reconstruction I have produced a half-line the same as Mālinīvijayottara 8:65cd except for the names of the first and fourth śaktis, for the first of which I have given the form of the name as it appears in Tantrāloka 15:306a:

vibhvī jñānī kriyā vāñchā vāgīśī jvālīnī tathā

- vibhvī] conj. (cf. Tantrāloka 15:306); vibhvā N₁; vibhur D¹E_D Mālinīvijayottara • jñānī] E_D Mālinīvijayottara; jñā ≡ N₁; jñāna D¹
- vāñchā] conj.; vācā N₁D¹E_D; cecchā Mālinīvijayottara • vāgīśī] Mālinīvijayottara; vāsikhī N₁D^{1ac}; śikhinī D^{1c}; nābheśī E_D

Note, however, that the Parākhya's list of nine concords with the list of nine Rudras given, e.g., in Kiraṇa 8:131–2b (which, however, in E_D appears, as here, as a list of Śaktis rather than of Rudras). And note that other texts know both groups of nine śaktis: see, e.g., Mālinīvijayottara 8:63–6 (where too metrical rules must be flouted to incorporate our list) and Tantrāloka 8:338c–339b and 15:305–6 (Abhinavagupta resorts to āryā to obviate metrical problems).

The names of the Parākhya's list are evidently derived from elements of the Vedic VĀMADEVA mantra, the second of the five brahmamantras that appears in Taittirīyāraṇyaka, prapāṭhaka 10 (6 in the Mysore edition with Bhaṭṭabhaṣkaramiśra's commentary), anuvākas 43–7. (The Taittirīyāraṇyaka may not be the source from which they entered the Pāśupata and Śaiva cults.) The VĀMADEVA mantra is usually divided into thirteen kalās in the Śaiva Siddhānta (see, e.g., Kiraṇa 62:4c–7b, Raurava-sūtrasaṅgraha 6:2–3 and 6c–7, Raurava 'kriyāpāda' 2); but the extraction of nine śaktis from it is, as we have seen above, also to be found in the Kiraṇa and elsewhere, e.g. in the Somaśambhupaddhati (BRUNNER 1963:166–71), and became widespread enough to appear in (Rājendra Lāla Mitra's version of) "Sāyaṇa's" commentary ad Taittirīyāraṇyaka 10:43 (the Ānandāśrama Press edition of Sāyaṇa's commentary thereon, for which more MSS were used, appears to be quite unrelated). The functions of the first three of the list are discussed, quoting part of this passage of the Parākhya, by GOODALL, 1998:329–30, fn. 491. Dr. ISAACSON has pointed out to me that in the following nirvacanas of the names, wherever two nirvacanas are given, the first relates to that Śakti's cosmic function and the second relates to that Śakti's influence on men. A comparable passage (of sixteen verses) is quoted ad Siddhāntasārāvalī 4 (BGOML 17.1, pp. 46–7), in which the first eight of the list are homologised with the gross elements, the moon, sun, and the soul (the eight aspects of Śiva as aṣṭamūrti).

mathanā, Damanī and Manonmanī. (43)

The power by which [He] emits the entire threefold universe downwards,¹⁴⁴ that is here (*asmin*¹⁴⁵) taught to be Vāmā. She resides with [the form of Śiva called] Vāmadeva. (44)

Or [the name can be accounted for thus:] that contrary (vāmaḥ)—[that is to say] by its nature perverted—impulse (samārambhaḥ) which causes souls to act is this Vāmā [in as much as it is involved] in perverse activity (vāmakarmagā). (45)

The best (jyeṣṭhaḥ), [that is to say] most important impulse to act (kriyārambhaḥ), which is always aimed at the goal of men [viz. liberation], occurs in souls through Jyeṣṭhā. That power resides with [the form of Śiva called] Jyeṣṭha. (46)

Undertaking pious acts or impious ones (dharmādharmasamārambhaḥ) [depends on whether the person in question] is impelled by Jyeṣṭhā or not [impelled by] Jyeṣṭhā (*jyeṣṭhājyeṣṭhāpracoditaḥ*¹⁴⁶). Not otherwise is the highest state, which is where the highest rewards are, [possible] for the soul. (47)

That which has the power to drive away (*drāvayitum śaktā*¹⁴⁷) the disease of souls that is nescience and that is expressed by the word 'affliction' (ruk)¹⁴⁸ is the power that resides with [the form of Śiva called]

¹⁴⁴The three groups are perhaps the three divisions of the Sāṅkhyas' bhautika sarga, viz. daivayona, mānuṣayona, and tairyagyona, in each of which one of the three guṇas predominates (see Sāṅkhyakārikā 53–4). It is perhaps unlikely that the division into tāttvika, bhautika and bhāva-sarga is intended, since in the Śaiva Siddhānta bhauvana sarga is added to them, and this last has been mentioned in 2:40 (see fn. 141 on p. 180 above). But note that the Parākhyā has perhaps only spoken of three sargas (2:40–1), namely tāttvika, bhauvana and varṇaja (if we consider this last to be intended as a sarga), and so it is possible that 'threefold creation' here refers to these three.

¹⁴⁶*ex conj.* Other reconstructions are no doubt possible. Since we are dealing with a nirvacana we may expect the sense to be strained.

¹⁴⁷If M^v's śīlā were accepted, it could be treated as an aśā usage: śīlā for śīlā yasyāḥ sā.

Rudra. (48)

†She who delights in deeds of blood and weaponry† through men's fierce deeds is Raudrī, who arises in fierce deeds and resides with [the form of Śiva called] Rudra. (49)

That by which He impels to action the material cause and the auxiliary cause¹⁴⁹ is Kālī, empowered to impel. She is in the power of [the form of Śiva called] Kāla. (50)

She who, in the realm of action, is discerned in the division of time, is the impeller (kalayitrī) of men, known by the marks of time. (51)

— †[The next power, Kalakirā (?), is so called] because (... tena) she is the dispeller of the faculties (kalānām vikirā) in the scattering of the limited powers of all souls (sarvaprāṇikalākṣepe), which were clustered together (?) by their own past actions (paripiṇḍite).¹⁵⁰ [One] may discern [her] in the destruction of bodies†. (52)

†Alternatively, however (punaḥ), she is that internal scattering of the skill that is learnt in this [world] (*asmin*¹⁵¹), †because of the undertaking of other (?) actions. She is in the control of [the form of Śiva called] Kalākṣepa (*kalākṣepagā*¹⁵²). (53)

That by which the limited power of souls [in saṃsāra] (aṇūnām) is scattered about in the extensive [lower] path [of the universe and brought] in connection with bodies and [the retributive power of past] actions¹⁵³ is the Scatterer of Forces (balānām vikirā). (54)

Alternatively bala [is] †souls' knowledge and discernment that is ever increasing (uttarottaragaṃ ?)†. Because of scattering that she is [called] Balakṣepā (*sā tatḥṣepād balakṣepā*¹⁵⁴). She is in the control of [the form of Śiva called] Balakṣepa. (55)

And the power by which Śiva churns up that other force, [viz.] that of the bonds, is called the 'churner up of forces' (balānām pramathā) and ¹⁴⁹For the Parākhya's doctrine that both these are necessary for any effect see 2:29–30 above.

¹⁵¹For this use of asmin see p. lxxx.

¹⁵³Perhaps karmāṅgasambandhe should instead be taken as a locative absolute.

is in the control of [the form of Śiva called] Balapramathana. (56)

The power that churns up forces (balamanthanā) †...† is [also] that by which [Śiva] churns up the force[s] of souls by means of faints and delusions and by suddenly oppressing with sleep. (57)

That taming power by which He tames all creatures in phases of creation (srṣṭiṣu) by means of the suffering intermixed with happiness that is [the fruit of] their own [actions] is therefore the Taming Power (śaktir damanātmikā). (58)

And she is also the Taming Power (damanī) because she is that by which a soul tames (*damayan*¹⁵⁵) the elements of his body (svadeha-bhūtāni) through various torments, such as the kṛcchra and cāndrāyaṇa fasts. (59)

That power which leads the bound soul to the reality-level that is beyond mind (amanaskam) and devoid of support is taught to be the power Manonmanī that belongs to the god Manonmana.¹⁵⁶ (60)

That which suddenly (akasmāt) brings souls in this world to a state of mindlessness (unmanāvasthām) is taught in this [tantra]¹⁵⁷ to be [the ¹⁵⁵The awkwardness of having the present active participle used as a main verb could be avoided by conjecturing damayed, but it is possible that this usage is authorial, for cf. 4:22b.

¹⁵⁶Cf. the quotation in the Tantrālokaviveka ad 8:345c-353b: nayate paramaṃ sthānam unmanyā parameśvaraḥ.

¹⁵⁷For this use of asmin see p. lxxx. Unmanī brings the number of śaktis in this list up to the, I think, unwanted total of ten. In the context of nityapūjā, these nine śaktis are placed on the eight petals, with the ninth on the pericarp, of the lotus on which Sadāśiva is then enthroned. Nine is therefore standard, as is clear, e.g., from Kiraṇa 8:131-2b and 14:23-6, from Svacchanda 2:68-71b and 10:1145-6b (in the commentary on which a short passage of nirvacanas is quoted from the Ānandabhairava), from Somaśambhupaddhati 3:55f [BRUNNER, 1963:168-71], and from Trilocanaśiva's Somaśambhupaddhatiṭīkā as cited by BRUNNER 1977:593, note 17a. Note, however, that when Rudras with this group of names are listed as the regents of the ten bhuvanas of the tattva of kalā in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 9:37-42b they are, of course, ten. This is achieved there by reading Manas and Unmanas as the ninth and tenth. Here the element unmanas is suspiciously used a second time. Furthermore this verse is not cited in the Śivapūjāstavavyākhyā. For these reasons, and because she was not listed with all the others in 2:43, Unmanī's presence here is suspicious, and this verse should therefore perhaps be expunged as spurious. But it has been retained on the grounds that it is possible that Unmana and Unmanī were intended as alternative names of Manonmana and Manonmanī respectively, and that this verse therefore was to give a second nirvacana of Manonmanī, who would otherwise be exceptional in having only one. This solution would be wholly satisfactory if it were not for the two mentions of the Rudra.

power] Unmanī, who is in the control of [the form of Śiva called] Unmana. (61)

All activity is shown [to be accounted for] by this variety of the all-powerful Lord's powers. He must be omniscient, because He is omnipotent, for power to act (tat) necessarily depends on knowledge (jñāna-pūrvakam). (62)

Therefore He knows all this [universe], along with the means [to accomplish it], its parts, its fruits. Just as a creator who knows the threads and the rest [of the accoutrements necessary for making a cloth is first omniscient] with regard to these, [and then] engages in that activity [of weaving], so too the supreme Śiva in this [creation of the universe].¹⁵⁸ (63–64b)

For knowledge of those [instruments and causes] (tajjñānam) pervades (vyāpitam), with positive concomitance (sānvayam), all effects. Therefore the supreme Lord is omniscient, since He has (-yogitvāt) knowledge of all ¹⁵⁸ ex conj. ISAACSON. If the transmitted tantvādikṛt kartā were retained, we might, more awkwardly, render as follows: 'Just as a weaver or such like creator makes these [means of accomplishments, parts, fruits] the object [of his knowledge] and then engages in that activity [of making cloth], so too the supreme Śiva in this [creation of the universe].'

As observed above (ad 2:29), this is a response to the charge levelled by Kumārila in Ślokavārttika sambandhākṣepaparihāra 79–80. Sadyojyotis appears to be responding to the same charge in Nareśvaraparīkṣā 2:9–10. The beginning of Rāmakaṇṭha's Nareśvaraparīkṣāprakāśa thereon reads: kumbhakārādīnām api svakārye nirmala-jñānatā sarvajñatvaṃ svecchākāritvādy api ceśvaratvaṃ siddham eva, anyathā ghaṭādīkaraṇāsambhavād ity uktam. atha yathābhūtam tat tanukaraṇabhuvanādisambandhī sādhyam tathābhūtam na drṣṭānte drṣṭam ity ucyate. vahnnyādir api parvatasambandhī mahānasādāv adrṣṭatvāt na dhūmādīnā sādhyā iti sarvānumānābhāvaprasaṅgaḥ. nanu dhūmamātraṃ vahnimātreṇa (thus Baroda MS 1829, f. 37^v; vahnimātre KSTS Ed.) vyāptaṃ siddham eva...

'With respect to what they produce, potters and the like too are established to have faultless knowledge, [which is] omniscience, and sovereignty, which consists, among other things, in acting exactly as they wish, because otherwise it would be impossible for them to produce pots or whatever. This has been taught [above]. In objection you may say that that which is to be proved [of the Lord] is not perceived in the example in exactly the same way [as it is supposed to occur in the Lord, i.e.] connected with bodies, instruments, worlds and so forth. [In that case you would have to acknowledge that] fire belonging to a mountain too, for example, since it is not seen in, e.g., a kitchen, could not be proved by [the presence on the mountain] of smoke, and thus the consequence would be entailed that all inference would be impossible. But surely [it is in fact the case that] smoke itself [i.e. unqualified by adventitious factors] is proven to be invariably concomitant with fire itself...'

If you object that (cet) knowledge cannot be without a locus [and that the Lord is bodiless and therefore not a locus], [we rejoin that knowledge] is known from its effect. In this system (*asmin*¹⁵⁹) a thing that has a locus as well as one that is without a locus can produce an effect. (65c-66b)

Just as there is wind, namely breath, that has a locus in the body,¹⁶⁰ [and] we experience [also] wind without a locus in the sky that causes branches and such like to shake. Is not the form of the soul in its liberated state also established to be without a locus? (66c-67)

[Objection:] Now you may say that (vā) that liberated state is not well-established, since in the Veda it is dharma that is taught. Now if there is something that is of prime importance [in the Veda], then it is sacrifice and such [like rites], since they are taught to be dharma (dharma-niścayāt).¹⁶¹ (68)

[Reply:] [But] from that same [Vedic corpus] (tasmād eva) there arises the knowledge that is established in [its final portion, namely] the Vedānta. The nature that is established [to be that] of the soul (tasya) in liberation, [when it is] without support, must be the essential nature of Śiva, the Supreme soul. (69-70b)

The form of the soul is of the nature of consciousness, characterized by the powers of omniscience and omnipotence. He whose form is knowledge [i.e. the Lord] also (jñānarūpasya tasyāpi) has [this] essential nature that is omniscience and omnipotence.¹⁶² (70c-71b)

¹⁵⁹For this use of asmin see p. lxxx.

¹⁶⁰Dr. ISAACSON has pointed out to me that śarīrato here could be a corruption of śarīrago.

¹⁶¹This is a representation of Śabara's view (expressed in his commentary on Mīmāṃsāsūtra 1.1.2): tena yaḥ puruṣaṃ niḥśreyasena saṃyunakti, sa eva dharmāśabdenocyate. na kevalaṃ loke, vede 'pi "yajñena yajñam ayajanta devāḥ/ tāni dharmāṇi prathamāny āsan" iti yajatiśabdavācyaṃ eva dharmam samāmananti. (FRAUWALLNER (ed.) 1968:20).

¹⁶²B's reading suggests that M^y supported this reading of the Śivayogaratna. If the reading jñānarūpasthitasyāpi were preferred, we might translate: '[The Lord] too, who has been established to be knowledge, has [this] essential nature that is omniscience and omnipotence'.

Note that the Śataratnollekhinī (ad Śataratnasāṅgraha 8, p. 16; quoted below in fn. 169 on p. 188) appears to quote Parākhya 2:70c-71b (reading differently in 70d) to support the assertion that Śiva's omnipotence and omniscience are natural whereas those of liberated souls are not. (How it supports this assertion is not clear to me, unless it is intended to do so by deliberately contrasting rūpam with svarūpam.) For the

By scripture too [we know God and the fact that He is] omniscient (sarvajñah), because [we] are shown [in scripture] the greatness of his qualities [such as omniscience]. [Objection:] But between two things that make each other known, there must be the fault of circularity. (71c–72b)¹⁶³

[Reply:] [But] scripture exists as that which makes Him known; its creator is Śiva. Now between a creator and that which makes Him known there is no fault of circularity.¹⁶⁴ (72c–73b) conception that the soul's sentient nature consists of the powers of knowledge and action see fn. 319 on p. 233. The formulation here is similar to 2:15ab in Bhaṭṭa Bhāskara's commentary on the Śivasūtras: caitanya ātmano rūpaṃ siddhaṃ jñānakriyātmakam.

¹⁶³Perhaps this is another conscious echo of the Ślokavārttika (cf. fn. 46 on p. 152 above): sambandhākṣepaparihāra 60 reads:

asīṣṭvāpi hy asau brūyād ātmaśvāyaprasādhanāt.*

(This is the form in which the verse is quoted in the Mataṅgavṛtti ad vidyāpāda 3:4–6b and in Kiraṇavṛtti 3:8.6–7; the edition reads tadvacanenaśāṃ.)

¹⁶⁴The argument seems not wholly convincing to me. Cf. the Mataṅgavṛtti ad vidyāpāda 3:30ab (quoted in the apparatus to Parākhya 3:56) on p. 68, in which we should probably read with the Kashmirian MS against BHATT:

*tasmīṃś cāgame pañcamantratanur īśvaraḥ paṭhyata itīśvarasiddhiḥ.
na cāpītaretarāśrayadoṣaḥ prāgukto 'tra, yato 'vagatikāraakatvād evāgamasyātra prāmāṇyam. aprāmāṇyaśaṅkā tv īśvaraprayuktatvena pratikṣipyata ity avirodhaḥ.*

• paṭhyata itīśvarasiddhiḥ] Kashmirian MSS; paṭhyate iti tata īśvarasiddhiḥ BHATT • prāgukto 'tra, yato 'vagatikāraakatvād evāgamasyātra prāmāṇyam] Poona MS and BHATT's Kashmirian MSS [except that the latter are reported as beginning with prāguktatrayato]; īśvarasiddhir āgamapratipādyatvād eva. āgamasyātra BHATT

'And in that scripture we read of the Lord whose body is five mantras, and thus the [existence of] the Lord is established. Nor is there the fault of circularity that has been mentioned above here [in this chapter: ad vidyāpāda 3:4–6b, p. 50], since scripture is authoritative [as a means of knowledge] with respect to Him simply for the reason that it causes understanding. [And] as for (tu) the suspicion that it is not authoritative, that is refuted by the fact of its having being uttered by the Lord. Thus there is no contradiction [in our position].'

¹⁶⁵Perhaps one could consider altering the text to yad drṣṭam drṣṭasambaddhe tat syāl līgaṃ viniścītam: 'A thing that is directly perceived may be determined to be an inferential mark [that allows one to assume the existence] (līgaṃ) of something connected with the seen thing.' The following verses (2:74–7) emphasize that direct

If [something is] wholly proved by one means of knowledge,¹⁶⁶ then what is the point of having it proved by a number of means of knowledge? (74)

What (yad vastu) is proved by this [one proof], even though it is [only] one [proof], is still proved.¹⁶⁷ Nor is it the case in this world that establishing the existence of things (vastusaṁsthā) must be achieved in all cases by direct perception (dr̥ṣṭena). (75)

It is for this reason (ataḥ) that things that are distant, obscured by darkness, or hidden, or [for some other reason not directly perceptible]¹⁶⁸ can be established to exist. If this were not so, then [simply] because of their not being directly perceived their non-existence would be proven. So give up this stubborn insistence upon directly perceived objects [as though direct perception were necessary to establish their existence]. (76)

Moreover (punaḥ), can the supreme [Lord], who has been proved to be beyond the apprehension of the senses, be a directly perceived object? And so by a small amount of reasoning His knowledge in all things is proven. (77)

He in whom there is that omnipotence (aiśvaryam) that consists of [the unlimited powers of] knowledge and action and that existed without having had a creator (*dhātrapūrvakam*¹⁶⁹) is here in this system (atra) to perception is not the only means of knowledge.

¹⁶⁷Alternatively tena could be taken as a conjunction: 'Therefore what is proved even by [only] one proof is still proved.'

¹⁶⁸One would expect vyavadhāna to mean 'concealment' or 'that which conceals', but we may assume that it means 'that which is concealed' here, for though vyavahita would unambiguously have conveyed the required meaning, it would here be unmetrical. Conditions that prevent things from being directly perceptible are listed in 4:4-5 below. The locus classicus for the treatment of this topic is Sāṅkhyakārikā 7; cf. also Mataṅgavidyāpāda 6:56 and commentary.

¹⁶⁹Following the Śātaratnollekhinī, which read dātrapūrvakam, we would translate 'that existed without having had someone bestow it'. The verse appears as the eighth in the Śātaratnasāṅgraha and is introduced by the following commentary in the Śātaratnollekhinī (p. 16): evaṃlakṣaṇapramāṇābhyāṃ vastusiddhir iti nyāyena pramāṇasiddhasya pater asādhāraṇadharmā-(em.; dhama Ed.)-rūpaṃ lakṣaṇaṃ parākhyasūtreṇāha. It is followed by this exposition (pp. 16-17): yasya dṛkkriyātmakaṃ jñāna-kriyāśvarūpaṃ aiśvaryaṃ īśvaratvaṃ dātrapūrvakaṃ pūrvaṃ na vidyate dātā yasya tad dātrapūrvakaṃ: pūrvaṃ na kenāpi dattaṃ, svābhāvikam ity arthaḥ. sa śaktidvaya-

be understood to be the Lord (īśvaraḥ), all-powerful (prabhuḥ), equipped of two powers. (78)

He is to be understood to be the Lord (īśvaraḥ) on the strength of conventional usage of the word (rūḍhitāḥ), and conventional usage is determined by the people. Since[, if the only criterion for determining meaning were yoga, the word īśvara] might indicate other [souls] too (anyeṣām api deśitvād), it is this conventional usage (rūḍhir eṣā) that determines that it applies to the Lord (maheśvare).¹⁷⁰ (79)

Even though there are hands on other creatures, 'the one with a hand' (karī) is [by conventional usage] only an elephant. Are not white water-lilies and other [plant]s here in this world (asmin) seen to belong among things that have their origin in mud (pañkajātiṣu)?¹⁷¹ (80)

Nevertheless this conventional usage is established [by which the word pañkaja is used] only of the lotus (pañkajasyaiva). So too a conventional usage has been determined [by which the word īśvara is used] only of the Lord (īśasyaiva), it being [also] the case that He exercises power (īśitayā).¹⁷² (81)

¹⁷⁰One might consider emending 79c to anyeṣām api ceśatvād and translating 'Since other [souls] too are also endowed with power...'.¹⁷¹

If conventional usage (rūḍhiḥ) were otherwise [i.e. not requiring that the word be at least to some extent appropriate by yoga], then the undesirable corollary would result (prasajyate) that it would be baseless.¹⁷³

†And the conventional usage (sāpi) [of this word īśvara] is such that it is used only [of the one who is thus [viz. the Lord] (tathārūpasya), and so this (tadāyaṃ) is how this name is to be analysed (nāmnī vigrahaḥ)†.¹⁷⁴ (82)

¹⁷²Some would apply the term yogarūḍhi, since there is both etymological and conventional justification for the usage.

¹⁷⁴The text and therefore also the translation of this verse are far from certain. The expression vigraha in the sense of analysis is usually used of analysis of the members of compounds; perhaps it here refers rather to the Lord's body, which the following verses discuss.

Note that in the context in which the immediately following verses (Parākhya 2:83–6b ≈ Pauṣkara 8:29c–32) are placed in the Pauṣkara they follow on immediately from two other verses adapted from another part of our text, namely Parākhya 3:9–10 (≈ Pauṣkara 8:27c–29b), and so the first of them (Parākhya 2:83) is there taken to be a justification for the Lord's being called sakala. What precedes them here in the Parākhya has been a discussion of the name īśvara, which is the sakala form of the Lord. The sequence of ideas in the two texts is thus probably the same, but it is much clearer in the Pauṣkara. Umāpati's commentary on Pauṣkara 8:28c–30 reads as follows:—

sa prabhuḥ sadāśiva upadeśakartṛtve praṇavādibhyaḥ madhyamādivṛtṭyā śāstropadeśaracanāyām itarakāryeṣv iva sarvātmanā na niṣkalaḥ kintu yathākathañcit sakalaḥ kila sakala iva bhavati. evaṃ tarhi śivo 'py asmadādivat kiṃ sakalaḥ? nety āha sākalyam iti. tasya śivasya yādṛśāt sākalyād upadeṣṭṛtvaṃ bhavati tādṛśaṃ sākalyaṃ vakṣyāmīty arthaḥ. na caivam api yādṛśaṃ tādṛśaṃ vā sākalyam. kimarthaṃ śivena parigṛhyate? na tāvat svārtham, avāptasakalakāmatvāt. nāpi parārthaṃ, karmādinaiva tadupapatteḥ. nāpi līlayā, bālādivad asamikṣyakāritāprasāṅgād iti. tata āha sarvārambha iti. yad yasmāt kāraṇāc chivasya sarvasyāpy ārambhaḥ narārthaṃ paśuprayojanāya. na ca karmaṇā tadupapattīḥ, tasyācetanatvena cetanādhiṣṭhānaṃ vinā kāryatvāsambhavāt. ataḥ paśuprayojanasiddhaye paramakāruṇikasya śivasya tantrasyoktopadeśakartṛtvāya sākalyaparigraha iti bhāvaḥ. nijā sahaajā pūrṇā sakalāvayavaparipūrṇā. yair avayavaiḥ sampūrṇā tān evāvayavān āha sampūrṇeti. sadyojātavāmadevāghoratatpuruṣātmakair īśānayuktaiḥ pañcabhir mantrair avayavair yā paripūrṇā parameṣṭhinaḥ sadāśivasya sā tādṛśī tanur ity arthaḥ.

Jñānaprakāśa's commentary on Pauṣkara 8:27c–33b is silent about the verses that correspond to Parākhya 2:83–5a (unless the remark śeṣaṃ sugamam refers to this portion of text) and so is not quoted here, but in fn. 180 on p. 192 below.

Because in all His undertakings [He acts] for the benefit of souls, the Lord has His own, full body.¹⁷⁵ This body (sā) is full (pūrṇā)¹⁷⁶ with [His] five mantras SADYO[JĀTA], VĀMA[DEVA], †AGHORA and TATPURUṢA†.¹⁷⁷ (83)

With these mantras, together with ĪŚ[ĀN]A, [is made up] the body of the Supreme. This Lord, who has ĪŚ[ĀN]A for His head, TATPURUṢA for His mouth, [A]GHORA for His heart, VĀMA[DEVA] for His genitals,¹⁷⁸ and SADYO[JĀTA] for His form, is taught to be composed of parts (sakalaḥ).¹⁷⁹ (84–5b)

¹⁷⁷ Although the text here is cruxed on the grounds that the exact wording cannot satisfactorily be reconstructed, it is clear that we require names of these last two mantras. The last syllables of the verse could be emended to -naraḥ, which would give us the last, but this would leave us with no solution for AGHORA. Besides it is not certain that what the Paṣkara now transmits might not have been closer to the original, particularly since in our text as it now stands, the word mantraiḥ in the next pāda (84a) might be regarded as an unnecessary recapitulation. Laying aside for a moment metrical considerations, it is perhaps not impossible that AGHORA should be conveyed by anagha, for aghora appears sometimes to be glossed to mean 'destroying agha', e.g. in Madhyārjuna's Siddhāntadīpikā (IFP MS T. 112, pp. 179–180 and T. 284, p. 118): ...yad vā aghaśabdenātra pāpasamūhaḥ. uktañ ca śarvokte "aghaṃ samastaṃ smaraṇād alaṃ naśyati tatkaṣaṇāt" (T. 284; naśyanti lakṣaṇāt T. 112) aghaṃ pāpasamūhas syād (T. 112; °samūhasyad T. 284) alaṃ paryāptam iṣyate" iti. uktañ ca vyomavyāpistotre [verse 21] "doṣavihīnam aghoraṃ doṣakṣayakṛc ca yasya bhaktānām/hṛdayan tatsadbhāvo namo 'stu tasmai tv aghoraḥṛdayāya". [doṣavihīnam aghoraṃ is the reading of Göttingen MS Schrader 121 (verso of 3rd folio), a manuscript of the Vyomavyāpistava; IFP MS T. 112 reads doṣahīnam ghoraṃ and T. 284 reads doṣavihīnam ghoraṃ (both being unmetrical).]

Perhaps TATPURUṢA could then be conveyed not by nara, which would be metrically problematic, but by ānava, which would yield the minimally emended reading sadyo-vāmānaghānavaiḥ.

¹⁷⁸ That guhya does not refer to the anus is made clear by 3:74b.

His being composed of parts (sākalyaṃ) is not ultimately real, as it is with a[n ordinary] soul (yathātmanaḥ), [but] constructed (kalpanīyam). (85cd)¹⁸⁰

hṛdayaḥ prabhūḥ/ ucyate vāmaguhyoktyā sadyomūrtiś ca śāsane (thus Kashmirian MSS; sadyomūrtiḥ sthitā prṥthak BHATT). Śrīkaṇṭha could be paraphrasing the Mataṅga or the Parākhyā in Ratnatrayaparīkṣā 281c–282: īśānamūrdhā puṃvaktro daśadigbāhumaṇḍalaḥ/ aghorahrdayo vāmaguhyo jātatanūjjvalaḥ/ pravṛttimān ayaṃ devaḥ sakalaḥ sarvapāvanaḥ. Cf. also Parākhyā 3:74 below. The Siddhāntadīpikā of Madhyārjuna twice attributes part of our passage to the Kālottara: on p. 111 of IFP MS T. 284 we read uktaṃ ca śrīmatkālottare—'īśāmūrdhā sa puṃvaktro gho[ra]hṛd vāmaguhyakaḥ/ sadyomūrtir itīśānamūrdhāyetyādibhir yutaḥ' iti. The first of these half-lines reappears on p. 126, prefaced by uktaṃ ca kālottare and followed by sadyaḥ sarvāṅgasiddhiḥ syāt iti.

Umāpati's treatment is different (from commentary on Paṇḍara 8:31–2b [≈Parākhyā 2:84c–85]): ... evaṃ ca tasya sadāśivātmanaḥ paśc ivopadeṣṭṛtvasiddhaye arthataḥ śiraḥpāṇyādimattayā sākalyaṃ na kalpanīyaṃ mantrātmakasākalyenaivopapatter bad-dharūpātmakasākalyaṃ na tasyābhyupagantavyam ata eva ca sadāśivaḥ sakalanīṣkala iti tanreṣu ucyate. Note that Umāpati is explicit that it is Sadāśiva, who is Sakalanīṣkala, that has his body made up of these mantras; but in our text it seems rather to be the Sakala form, Īśvara, that is spoken of, as in the Kiraṇa (see Kiraṇa 3:16–21) and the Ratnatrayaparīkṣā (Ratnatrayaparīkṣā 281c–282, quoted in the previous footnote). In the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 4:18c–30) this mantra-body is again dealt with at the level of Sadāśiva (although this fourth chapter, as declared in its first verse, is an account of the Lord as adhikārin, the adhikāra level is not in the Mataṅga, as in other texts, homologised with Īśvara, but with Sadāśiva, as is implicitly clear, e.g., from 4:54–5). Not all accounts of the Lord's mantra-body make clear whether they understand it to be that of the Lord's Sakala or Sakalanīṣkala form (see, e.g., Mrgendravidyāpāda 3); but the Paṇḍara is explicit that the body is Sadāśiva's at an earlier stage of the text (Pauṣkara 1:54–5), and this, no doubt, accounts for Umāpati's position here. The earlier passage of the Pauṣkara does not just contradict this passage in this detail, but in one other too: Pauṣkara 1:56ab teaches that ĪŚĀNA is not the Lord's head (as here in Parākhya 2:84c [= Pauṣkara 8:31a]), but his diadem: Īśānaśekharaḥ sā [scil. mūrtiḥ] ca puṣṭvaktrā ghorahr̥tsthalā. That the topic has been covered in the Pauṣkara before chapter 8 and with discrepancies strengthens the hypothesis (for which see the discussion in GOODALL 2001a:329–30, the essentials of which are reproduced in the annotation to chapter 6, in particular in fn. 654 on p. 326 below) that the eighth chapter of the Pauṣkara, just under half of which consists of verses culled from the Parākhya, is an interpolation.

¹⁸¹*ex conj.* Once again I have preferred what M^Y transmits over the reading of the Pauṣkara, on the grounds that the latter is likely to be a secondary modification made for the sake of clarity. Once again my decision may be mistaken. This is the point where our text ceases to run parallel to that of the Pauṣkara, which here reads (Pauṣkara 8:32c–33b):

na ca śāstrapraṇetṛtvam tenāyaṃ sakalaḥ sthitaḥ*

'Otherwise He could not be worshipped, since He would lack skin, bone, etc. Nor could He be the composer of scripture, and so He is established to be Sakala.' Jñānaprakāśa's commentary (quoted in fn. 180 on p. 192 above) is brief and uncertain, but implies a natural interpretation of this unit. Umāpati ad loc. has this to say: yasmāt kāraṇād anyathā sarvātmanā niṣkaḷatve sati asmadādivat sakalatve vā tasya sadāśivasya sādhakair arcanam pūjā na sambhavati, śāstrapraṇetṛtvam śāstropadeṣṭṛtvam ca na sambhavati. dvitīye carmāsthyādivivarjanam [scil. iti pāde?] ādivipadena saptadhātuparigrahaḥ. vivarjanam rāhityam ca sambhavati. asminn arthe uttara-tāpanīyopaniṣadvacanam asti.

'Since otherwise, [i.e.] if Sadāśiva were wholly formless or wholly embodied in the way that we are, He could not be worshipped (pūjā = arcanam) by sādhakas, [and] His teaching scripture (śāstropadeṣṭṛtvam = śāstrapraṇetṛtvam) would also (ca) be impossible. In the second [verse-quarter] the word ādi indicates [that one is to supply the rest of] the seven bodily elements. And He would be devoid (rāhityam = vivarjanam) [of those too]. There is a teaching in the Uttaratāpanīyopaniṣat to this effect.'

I have also considered emending M^Y's reading to sarvathāṅgavivarjitaḥ, 'being altogether devoid of a body'. What motivated me to do so was the consideration that the position of the Kiraṇa (3:22–23b) appears to be that the supreme, bodiless Lord is unapproachable by worship or yoga of any kind; but 2:95–6 below suggest that the author of the Parākhya may have held a different position. And even in the Kiraṇa, although worship and yoga may not enable the soul to reach, in any sense, the supreme Lord, Kiraṇa 3:15 is probably conceding that it is possible for the soul to do so (the purport of the verse is debatable). Cf. also Mokṣakārikā 109–11, which Rāmakaṇṭha in his Mokṣakārikāvṛtti identifies as being a commentary on Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 4:42c–43, and Tattvasaṅgraha 28–9. In these last passages (perhaps not in that of the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha), 'seeing' the Lord is possible directly by means of the soul's power, once it has purified by initiation, without any mediation by the instruments

a body. [Therefore] this body of that pure [Lord] is fashioned out of pure mantras. (86)

Therefore this contrivance of a body [is adopted] for the sake of worship (upacāranimittāḥ);¹⁸² since worship is a necessary part of enjoined rites, it must be adopted for the sake of attaining their fruits. (87)

The fruit is achieved by the rites, and those rites are enjoined by Śiva. And since that [Śiva-principle] is sovereignty (aiśvarya), consisting of powers of knowledge and action extending to all things, therefore (tat) since that (asya) rests above (uparivartitvāt), in the way that heads do (mūrdhānām iva),¹⁸³ the [mantra] ĪŚĀNA stands as the head of beings that are endowed with sovereignty that consists in the powers of knowledge and action [and] that are sentient because of the power of the supreme (paraśaktisacetasām)¹⁸⁴, and therefore He is known as the one with ĪŚA as His head (īśamūrdhakāḥ).¹⁸⁵ (88–90b).

that derive from matter, since, as Mokṣakārikā 106 makes explicit,

*antaḥkaraṇavṛttir yā bodhākhyā sā maheśvaram
na prakāśayituṃ śaktā pāśatvān nigaḍādivat.*

'The activity of the internal organs known as 'knowing' cannot illuminate the Lord because, like fetters and such, they are bonds.'

Thus the point of our verse as now interpreted is that some few people would be able to worship him even without the body of mantras, but that that body makes it possible for 'all' to do so. But one could instead interpret: 'Otherwise He could not be worshipped by anybody, being without a body.'

¹⁸²The sense 'figurative usage', though we might expect it in a discussion of Śiva's body (cf. Parākhya 2:42 and Kiraṇa 3:13), seems not to be appropriate here.

¹⁸⁴*ex conj.* Assuming that the syllables that are transmitted are correct and correctly placed (which may not be the case) and that no lines of text are missing, there seem few short syllables that would be appropriate. pra- and vi- might both do, but (except where Pracetas is used as a name) both pracetas and vicetas seem not common outside Vedic language. sa- and su- seem both weak solutions, but not impossible. Also conceivable would be to take paraśaktiḥ as a nominative in apposition with īśānaḥ in 90a and so to supply <<s tu>> or <<ḥ sa->>.

¹⁸⁵Note that this and the following nirvacanas analyse not the names of the mantras (ĪŚĀNA, TATPURUṢA, AGHORA, VĀMADEVA, and SADYOJĀTA), but the five related names of the Lord listed in 2:84c–85b. It is also the names of the Lord, not those of the five brahmamantras, that are analysed in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 4:18c–30 and in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 3:9–13. The mantras can be transformed for nyāsa into similar names (oṃ hoṃ īśānamūrdhāya namaḥ, oṃ hem tatpuruṣavaktrāya namaḥ, oṃ huṃ

Since it (tat) cleans away (punāti) nescience, [and] since (yat) the [word] mouth (vaktram) expresses revelation (vyaktivācakam)—it reveals through its power Śivahood—therefore He is taught to have PURUṢA for His mouth (pumvaktraḥ). (90c–91b)

Alternatively, He has [the mantra TAT]PURUṢA on His face †taccāstram†¹⁸⁶ and therefore He has PURUṢA for His mouth. (91cd)

His essential nature (sadbhāvaḥ), [that is His] heart is non-terrible (aghorah) [and therefore] peaceful, and that is why because of His essential nature the supreme Lord is one whose heart is AGHORA. (92)

†Alternatively†, He is held to have GHORA as His heart (ghorahr̥t) †through mantras or through aghoras†. That which is lovely (vāmam), [viz.] the state of liberation is hidden (rahasyam = guhya); since that is so for Him (?), or because the path to what is vāma is hidden, His private aghorahr̥dayāya namaḥ, oṃ hiṃ vāmadevaguhyāya namaḥ, oṃ haṃ sadyojātamūrtaye namaḥ, e.g. in the rite of sakalikaraṇa as described by Aghoraśiva in the Kriyākramadyotikā, p. 24. These same datives were incorporated into the 81-word Saiddhāntika mālāmantra known as the VYOMAVYĀPIN and are accordingly analysed in Raurava-sūtrasaṅgraha 10 (verses 27–37), which treats the whole VYOMAVYĀPIN, and in verses 18–23 of the Vyomavyāpistava, a work of ninety-one āryā verses attributed to Rāma-kaṇṭha (IFP MSS T. 128, pp. 22–5, T. 434, pp. 293–7, and T. 112, pp. 270–348).

¹⁸⁶One might consider emending to tacchāstre, ‘in His scripture’. Cf. Mataṅgavidyā-pāda 4:22c–23b:

pumāṃs tatra sthito yasmāt tasmāt pumvaktra iṣyate.*

• pumāṃs tatra] Kashmirian MSS; pumān vaktre BHATT

Rāmakaṇṭha's Mataṅgavṛtti thereon reads: ...vaktram api tat calacchaktimayaṃ iti. pūrvaṃ hi samavetaśaktyabhiprāyeṇa vyākhyātam. adhunā parigrahavartīśaktyabhiprāyeṇeti bhedaḥ. tathā hi—caladrūpā pariṇatidharminī śaktiḥ mahāmāyākhyā parigrahavartinī bhagavataḥ; tanmayaṃ calacchaktisvabhāvam eva. na tu kūṭasthanityam. tad vaktram iva śabdakāraṇatvāt. vyāpakam ca sarvasvakāryāvadhi-vyāpter ity uktam. tataś cokaṭaḥ pumān vaktre parigraharūpe mahāmāyātmani yasmāt sthitaḥ tasmād asau pumvaktro bhagavān.

‘And that ‘mouth’ is made up of mobile power. Now above [the name] was expounded with the intention of referring to the power that inheres [in Him]; there is a difference in that [it is] now [explained] with the intention of referring to the power that He uses as an assistant. To explain, [what is meant is] the mobile—[that is to say] subject to transformation—power known as mahāmāyā that serves as an accomplice to the Lord. [His ‘mouth’] is made up of that; its nature is this mobile power. It is not eternally unchanging. It is, as it were, [His] ‘mouth’ because it is the cause of sound. It has been taught that it is all-pervading because it pervades as far as to include all its own effects. And so, since the Pumān resides in the ‘mouth’, which is His accomplice and which is mahāmāyā, therefore the Lord is said to be pumvaktra.’

parts are VĀMA (tenāyaṃ vāmaguhyakaḥ). (93c–94b)

Since He immediately (tatkṣaṇataḥ = sadyaḥ) creates bodies (mūrtiḥ) for souls, or [because His] form is immediately [present in front] of Yogis,¹⁸⁷ He is taught to be SADYOMŪRTI. (94c–95b)

By the use of ritual gestures, diagrams, the mantras that are His limbs (mudrāmaṇḍalamantrāṅgaiḥ), by focussing the mind, concentration and yoga (dhāraṇādhyānayogataḥ) that Supreme, peaceful (śāntaḥ) [Lord] is worshipped by those who desire the fruits of supernatural powers and of liberation.¹⁸⁸ (95c–96b)

[It is] that same [Lord who] is worshipped residing in the body [made up] of His mantras; He is the Supreme Śiva. (96cd)

Therefore Śiva is established in scripture (śāstre) to be [at the same time] in two [forms]: Sakala, Niṣkala.¹⁸⁹ (97ab)

He who is the cause of the maintenance, creation, and destruction [of the universe] and of compassion is the Lord with office (so 'dhikārī) in this sakala state,¹⁹⁰ made up of the parts [of the mantras that are His limbs].¹⁹¹ (97c–98b)

¹⁸⁷Cf. Mṛgendravidyāpāda 3:13:

sadyo 'nūnāṃ mūrtayaḥ sambhavanti yasyecchātas tena sadyobhīdhānaḥ sadyo mūrtir yogināṃ vā vidhatte sadyomūrtiḥ kṛtyaśaighryān na mūrteḥ.

Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha comments thus on the second half (Devakōṭṭai ed., p. 139): yad vā yogināṃ tattatsamādhībhājāṃ sadyas tatksaṇaṃ mūrtir vidhatte. proktavan mantra-mayasvamūrtisadr̥ṣiṃ tanuṃ sampādayatīty acirāt svasamādhivyañjakatvāt sadyo-mūrtitvam. na tu śighrasaṅjātasvadehatvād ity arthaḥ. We might therefore emend to yogināṃ mūrtiḥ and understand kurute from the previous line: 'or [because] He at once [creates] forms [similar to His own] for yogins'.

¹⁸⁸In Kiraṇa 3:20 these means are enumerated as ways of knowing only the Sakala Lord. It is possible that this is not in contradiction with the Kiraṇa, since it may be understood to mean that the supreme Lord can be worshipped by way of worshipping the Sakala Lord.

¹⁸⁹This appears to me to be a reference to Śiva's Sakalanīṣkala form, homologised below (99a) with Śiva as bhogin. Cf. the expressions dvisvabhāvaḥ and dvisvabhāvagataḥ used of Sadāśiva in Kiraṇa 3:14c and 3:21a respectively.

¹⁹¹The kalās are the thirty-eight divisions of the brahmamantras. Cf. Kiraṇa 3:16c–18b and commentary and translation ad loc.

He reveals their office to the others, to the Rudras and such. Figuratively He is [known as] the Lord with office (adhikārī), the Lord in enjoyment (bhogī), and the Lord in resorption (layī). (98c–99b)

The beginningless compassion upon bound souls that is established [to have been bestowed by Him] because of His being the Lord (patibhāvataḥ) [is possible] through the teaching of the injunctions of His scripture (tacchāstravidhicodanāt) through the connection between ācāryas and their pupils.¹⁹² Not otherwise can the state that is in Him [viz. Śivahood] (tadgato bhāvaḥ) [be attained] or that mercy of the guru. (99c–100)

[You may object that] that [state of] grace accomplished in the soul by means of His power as having existed in potential beforehand (satkārya-sādhitaḥ) [surely] comes about at random, [or] because of [Śiva's] hatred [of others], [or] because of [His] affection induced by propitiating Śiva (śivārāadhanabhāvataḥ).¹⁹³ (101)

[We reply that] Śivahood (tadbhāvaḥ) cannot be caused by those [factors]; it must come about because of a fall of His power (tacchaktipātaḥ). The linguistic usage [here of 'fall'] (pravṛtṭiḥ śabdagā)¹⁹⁴ is figurative (bhaktiā), just as in the case of saying 'karāṇa' to mean feet and such like (pādādikaraṇoktivat). (102)

¹⁹³The text here introduces a ubiquitous and fundamental charge raised against theist systems, that of God's arbitrariness in his favouring or not favouring souls. Cf. Kiraṇa 4:1–4, in which, as here below (Parākhya 2:109–10), the image of the impartial sun awakening lotuses is used as a comparison. (The same image is to be found in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 9:8, but without the impartiality of the sun being made explicit.) When the issue (of arbitrariness) is addressed in the Pauṣkara, we find the use of the term nairghṛṇya (2:54); it seems to me possible that this is a conscious echo of Brahmasūtra 2.1.11.34 (vaiṣamyānairghṛṇye...).

¹⁹⁴This may seem a strange expression, the -gā corresponding to a genitive ending (see p.lxxx above); it seems to me conceivable that the author of the Parākhya was here consciously recasting Kiraṇa 5:3–4 (of which I quote here 3abc and 4cd):

upacāreṇa śabdānām pravṛttir iha dṛśyate
yathā pumān vibhur gantā [...]
evaṃ śaktinipāto 'pi procyate sopacārataḥ.

The text of the final pāda that probably underlies the various readings in all the South Indian sources is bhāktāḥ proktaḥ śivāgame.

For because of the fall of that [power of His] there arises fear, [fear] born of being connected with worldly existence.¹⁹⁵ The fall is the awakening of that [fear]; it has the form of a differentiation of worldly existence (saṃsāarakalanātmakaḥ).¹⁹⁶ (103)

Discriminating (paricchidya) worldly existence, the soul (saḥ), once [thus] set on the path [taught] by the guru (guruvartmasthaḥ),¹⁹⁷ seeks the means that will grant liberation from it, and then engages in [pursuing] that [means]. (104)

The activity (pravṛttiḥ) of [such] souls is in the control of that [power of His] (tadvaśā); [she] is [therefore] necessarily their controller (tanniyāmikā). Awakened [then] by His grace, they become devoid of desire for worldly existence (bhavanti bhavaniḥspṛhāḥ). (105)

Those who are fit come to awakening. [They are] fit [because of the descent of His grace(?), and] not for any other reason. Or else [if there were some other reason] He would be subject to attachment and hatred; and those [do] not [exist] for one who is without impurity.¹⁹⁸ (106)

For God, who is the locus of [the power of] knowledge, neither attachment nor hatred [are possible]. Since the causes of those faults of passion and such are according to this system (atra) by His nature not in Him (stasya), therefore Śiva is devoid of them. (107–8b)

¹⁹⁵But perhaps, as Dr. ISAACSON has suggested (letter of 21.viii.2001), bhayaṃ saṃsārayogajaṃ could be interpreted to mean 'fear of connection with worldly existence'.

¹⁹⁶This and the following verse express the same nexus of ideas as Kiraṇa 5:5–6b:

nipāto bhayado yadvad vastunaḥ sahasā bhavet tadvac chaktinipāto 'pi prokto bhavabhayapradah tasmād anyatra yāty eva tathātmā deśikaṃ prati.

Compare also Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 1:17–18:

tannipātāt kṣaraty asya malaṃ saṃsārakāraṇam kṣiṇe tasmin yiyāsā syāt paraṃ niḥśreyasaṃ prati sa deśikaṃ anuprāpya dīkṣāvicchinnabandhanaḥ prayāti śivasāyujyaṃ nirmalo niranuplavaḥ.

And cf. Pauṣkara 4:38–41.

¹⁹⁷Or one might interpret 'set on his way towards a guru'.

[But, you might say,] if these are not [attributes] of Śiva (śarvasya), then how can souls have [in some cases] knowledge and [in other cases] nescience? (108cd)

He is constantly (avasthitah) the same in power (samaśaktiḥ) in the matter of awakening (vikāsataḥ) for all [souls], just as the sun is in every respect (sarvataḥ) the same in character (samalakṣaṇaḥ) [in the matter of causing to bloom (vikāsataḥ)] for all lotuses. (109)

The Lord too, pure with His powers, remains (varṭate) the same towards [all] souls. Some cause must be understood for [His] causing to descend [upon souls] knowledge or ignorance (bodhābodhanipātane);¹⁹⁹ now you may suggest (cet) good birth (*śubhā jātir*²⁰⁰) or good actions (dharma vā), or extraordinary rites (samutkr̥ṣṭā kriyāpi vā). (110–111b)

[We reply that] birth or excellence of good actions cannot be the cause, nor auspicious rites, because with these [there are cases of] deviation [i.e. cases where the result does not follow upon the supposed cause]; and so they are not causes. (111c–112b)

And the soul's fitness [for salvific grace] is in the seed [i.e. in karman],²⁰¹ and that [fitness] is [therefore] in accordance with [that] unequal

²⁰¹The expression is ambiguous; although I have assumed that bīja refers here to karman, I am aware that it is conceivable that it might refer instead to mala, and that the text may therefore be referring in the next verse to the maturation of impurity (malaparipāka). This would be exceptional, for, as I have observed (GOODALL 1998:xxxiii–xxxvi), no demonstrably early scripture can be said unmistakably to refer to this doctrine. The doctrine is attributed to Sadyojyotis and followed by the exegetes of the school, but the first scriptural text to refer to it may be, as I have suggested (ibid., fn. 80), the Pauṣkara in 4:37. Mālinīvijayottara 1:42, as here, uses the ambiguous expression yogyatā:

evam asyātmanaḥ kāle kasmim̐ścid yogyatāvaśāt
śaivī sambadhyate śaktiḥ śāntā muktiphalapradā.

It may be regarded as curious that the text should make no reference to malaparipāka, but it is certainly curious that the philosophically investigative Parākhya does not mention karmasāmya, the doctrine mentioned in Kiraṇa 1:20c–21 and expounded at length in Kiraṇa 5, according to which (pace Rāmakaṇṭha) a salvific descent of divine grace (śaktipāta) occurs when a soul's capacity to experience is blocked by the

[karman] (viṣamānugā). (112cd)

The conditions [of souls are] various because of the [various degrees of] ripening of that [karman]; like a doctor, the Lord (saḥ) accordingly links each particular soul (*yasmin nare ... tasmin*²⁰²) with that means [that is a descent of His grace] (enam upāyam). (113)

Knowing that [means], He is intent upon effecting separation (viśleṣa-karaṇe paraḥ)²⁰³ from the stains that result from contact [with the world] (samparkadoṣāṇām). His means towards [accomplishing] that [separation] (tadupāyaḥ) is that of kalā and the others [of the six paths];²⁰⁴ †[it is accomplished] through a ritual which depends upon fire.²⁰⁵ (114)

Because, being naturally devoid of attachment, He bestows compassion on bound souls, the Lord is the one who sets this [means of initiation] in motion (tatprayoktā) for all bound souls, according to this system (iha).²⁰⁶ (115) simultaneous ripening of two equally powerful past actions. The Parākhya appears to give us no clear account of what must precede śaktipāta (though the possibility cannot be excluded that the topic is treated in a lost chapter), even though it elsewhere shows evidence of having been influenced by the Kiraṇa (see p. lv above).

²⁰³ ex conj. Usually para has this sense only at the end of a compound. It may be wrong to assume that it carries this sense here.

²⁰⁴ I am assuming this to be a reference to the six initiatory paths (Svāyambhuva-sūtrasaṅgraha 4:2):

tattvādhvā ca padādhvā ca varṇādhvā bhuvanātmakaḥ mantrātmakaḥ kalādhvā ca viśaty ekaṃ śivaṃ padam.

Since otherwise [the universe would be] engulfed in darkness, like the universe deprived of the sun, therefore God, the Lord of bound souls [is] accordingly [proven to be] beginningless. (116)

He bestows grace on all, He is at peace, He is the awakener of the overlords of the mantras (vidyāvidyeśabodhakaḥ). These overlords of the mantras (vidyāvidyeśvarāḥ) are eight. Below [the level of the tattva of pure] knowledge. (vidyādhaḥ) they are emperors (cakravartināḥ).²⁰⁷ (117)

Ananta [is so called because he] is of infinitive valour (ananta-vīryātmā); Sūkṣma has subtle power of action as his body (sūkṣmakriyātanuḥ) (?);²⁰⁸ Śivottama is just like Śiva; and Ekadṛk is intent upon the one knowledge (ekadṛkparaḥ). (118)

Ekarudra †[is] that [one] Rudra (?)†; Trimūrti is taught to have three bodies (tritanuḥ smṛtaḥ); Śrīkaṇṭha †... †; Śikhaṇḍin has a pure heart for his crest (śuddhahṛcchikhaḥ) (?). (119)

Although each of these has only one [good] quality and Śiva has all [good] qualities, nevertheless they are pure, and so they are invested with offices.²⁰⁹ (120)

Devoid [themselves] of the dirt of primal matter, they accomplish within a word: e.g. pat ma for padma, and ut bhava for udbhava), to yield °kṛt yataḥ, and this having been misunderstood by a subsequent scribe.

²⁰⁷Cf. Mālinīvijayottara 2:18c–19b:

sa sisṛkṣur jagat sṛṣṭer ādāv eva nijecchayā vijñānakevalān aṣṭau bodhayāmāsa pudgalān.

And cf. Mokṣakārikā 72c–73b:

niṣkalān sakalān aṣṭau sargādāv icchayā patiḥ mantreśvarān anantādīn anugṛhṇāti pudgalān.

²⁰⁸Perhaps, as Dr. ISAACSON has suggested to me, the °tanu might here be being used as a metrically expedient synonym of °rūpa/°ātma: 'who has subtle power of action as his nature'.

²⁰⁹I have assumed here that adhikārapade sthitāḥ means no more than adhikāra-vantaḥ (cf. 3:61). But it is possible that the text refers to the level of the pure universe equivalent to īśvaratattva, in which the Lord is involved in the universe. We may recall that laya, bhoga and adhikāra are the names of the highest tattvas in the Mataṅga (see, e.g., vidyāpāda 2:14). We might therefore translate 'they are situated at the level of adhikāra'.

In other texts the hierarchy of these Vidyēśvaras is emphasised, Ananta being the highest and Śikhaṇḍin the lowest (see, e.g., Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 2:13, Mataṅgavidyāpāda 5:15, Pauṣkara 4:54).

[the creation and administration of] the sphere below [i.e. of the universe evolved of māyā].²¹⁰ Because [the dirt of primal matter] has to be impelled [by them], they are not in its power (na vaśās tasya), just as snakes are not in the power of [their own] poison.²¹¹ (121)

Because they perform the duties appropriate to their station (sthānādhikāra-kāritvāt), they do this †bhinnakāraṇāt†. They are all equal in power of action to Śiva (śivatulyabalāḥ sarve), but they are souls subject to the Lord (kiṃ tu te seśvarāṇavaḥ).²¹² (122)

They perform their office in due order, impelled by His power. Their great office is termed the five-fold function (pañcakṛtyavilakṣitaḥ).²¹³ (123)

It consists of creation, compassion, destruction, maintenance, and obscuration. Since they perform [this five-fold office] as here described (tathārūpam), they are therefore taught to be office-bearers (adhikāriṇaḥ). (124)

Pratoda spoke:

If Śiva be the creator of the universe, then what use has He of office-²¹⁰One could consider emending nivartayanti to nirvartayanti, but the two verbs are so often confused in usage that it is impossible to tell which usage was authorial. The same applies to Mataṅgavidyāpāda 5:12cd (quoted in the apparatus); here BHATT prints nivartayaty (which is shared by the early Nepalese MS) and records no variation in the manuscripts he consulted.

²¹¹The same image is used of Ananta's relationship to the impure universe in Kiraṇa 4:8c-9b.

²¹³*ex conj.* ISAACSON (letter of 27.viii.2001). Also possible would be emendation to pañcakṛtyopalakṣitaḥ; the transmitted text is perhaps improbably awkward.

It is consistent with its supposed lateness (see GOODALL, 1998:lxiv) that the Parākhya uses here the developed terminology. I am aware of only one other, again relatively late, Siddhānta that uses the term: Mrgendravidyāpāda 3:8cd reads tadvapuḥ pañcabhir mantraiḥ pañcakṛtyopayogibhiḥ. Note that here in the Parākhya, as in the locus classicus in Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 1:15ab, it is the Vidyēśvaras to whom the five functions are assigned. It is possible, as DAGENS and BARAZER-BILLORET have suggested (2000:xxxvii-xxxix and 500) that the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha did not intend to refer to the five functions; but it is plain, as they also mention, that the later exegetical tradition interpreted the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha to do so. The argument of DAGENS and BARAZER-BILLORET that the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha probably does not refer to the five functions in this verse since it does not refer to them elsewhere seems to me not particularly strong: the Parākhya too does not refer to their being five elsewhere and the Parākhya too elsewhere gives a list of only four (2:97cd). (For my interpretation of Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 1:15ab see GOODALL 1998:173.)

bearers? If it be established that they bear office (teṣāṃ sthite 'dhikāritve), then it cannot be said that power [is the Lord's]. (125)

Prakāśa spoke:

If He acted Himself, then He would incur censure from all and be thought low. Without these [office-bearers] the Lord's effulgence would not shine through the whole universe (sarvādhvani). (126)

His power is raised up in the universe (mārgē) without support (*nirālabhā*²¹⁴), like the multitude of stars. It is these [office-bearers], filled with Śiva's power, who agitate primal matter. (127)

These mantras²¹⁵ and overlords of mantras (vidyāvidyāmaheśvarāḥ) are capable of all tasks. They are all invested with duty to perform these (tatra te 'dhikṛtāḥ).²¹⁶ They have attained to the level of īśvara. That reality level (tat tattvam), which is situated above the reality level of [pure] knowledge (vidyātattvordhvasaṁsthitam) has now been dealt with (saṁsiddham) in this scripture (iha). (128)

He, the first (ādyah), has been taught who is known by means of the pure wisdom that 'falls' when there is contact with His power, who is the creator of the means to attain the fruit that is liberation (mokṣaphala-sādhanaheṭuḥ),²¹⁷ whose distinctive sign is the [texts of] reflection that are the rays that issue from the crest-jewel fixed to the high tip of the crown upon the head that is [the tattva of pure] knowledge.²¹⁸ (129)

Thus the second chapter, elucidating thoughts about the topic of the Lord, in the great tantra called the Supreme.

PARĀKHYATANTRA CHAPTER III

Knowledge (vidyā) [means] that which is copious because of the descent of knowledge and which is the certainty of the [one] true authoritative teacher (sadāptaguruniścayā).²¹⁹ Knowledge [is also that] which, because it enters into mantras, accomplishes what they must perform.²²⁰ (1)

At creation the Lord God, who is the cause of all causes, awakened Lord Ananta and the other Vidyeśas for the sake of liberating [all souls].²²¹ (2)

Awakened by His power, acting by pure means, these awaken[ed] Gauta and others (gautādīn), and those awaken[ed] Bhava and others.²²² (3)

Bhava and others [awakened] yet others, until [knowledge] reached Vīra, Vīrabhadra, the Lord of Umā (umesānam). Then the gods obtained [it]. (4)

From them the Ṛṣis obtained [it], and from them the best of men. Whoever caused its transmission in this tradition (*asmin*²²³), those men are 'transmitters' (avatārakāḥ). (5)

They are held to be divine and not divine in this system (asmin). They are established to be lords (nāthatvena vyavasthitāḥ). They are ²¹⁹This translation assumes that this is a non-bahuvrīhi compound inflected as a bahuvrīhi, for which see p. lxxxii above. Alternatively we could interpret it 'whose certainty [comes] from the true authoritative teacher'. Details in the interpretation of every part of the verse are uncertain.

²²⁰Like 1:15 and the first verses of the other chapters, this verse sets the agenda for the rest of the chapter: the transmission of scripture is treated in 3:2–19, its authoritativeness is the subject of 3:20–56; the origin of mantras is discussed in 3:57–79.

²²¹Cf. Mālinīvijayottara 2:18c–19b and Mokṣakārikā 72c–73b quoted in fn. 207 on p. 201 above. For kāraṇa used as a masculine to describe Śiva, see 6:5b, and Kiraṇa 6:1.

²²²These names are unfamiliar to me.

²²³For this use of asmin here and in the following verse, see p. lxxx. The anacolouthic use of the singular in the protasis and plural in the apodosis has not been emended away, for it might be original. For the hiatus between ca and the initial vocalic r see p. lxxxiii above.

gods (gīrvāṇāḥ) and sages (munayo 'pi ca) freed from attachment and hatred. His teaching, taught by them, is to be received (grāhyam) [and] is established as scripture (āgamatve pratiṣṭhitam).²²⁴ (6)

Pratoda spoke:

Earlier you taught that Śiva is without form, devoid of the faculty of speech. He is not capable of composing scripture (śāstrakarane). He is established not to be endowed with power to act (sakalaḥ)²²⁵ at the level of ultimate truth (arthataḥ). (7)

[And] these Rudras Ananta and others, they are awakeners of other Rudras. If it be established that they are awakeners, then what need is there [for them] of His power? (8)

Prakāśa spoke:

Even though God is without form, all the [necessary] arrangement of syllables etc. [that constitutes composition of scripture] takes place, just as though it were the product of a body, by means of the power that is His will (svecchāsāmarthyayogataḥ). (9)

But, [you may object,] if He imparts teaching, then must not this omnipotent Lord [after all] be endowed with form (sakalaḥ)? [We reply

²²⁴These verses (3:1–6) are the Parākhyā's treatment of the stock theme of tantrāvātāra. Other tantras (e.g. Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 3) give an account of the lineage of their particular transmission, or of the particular lineages of transmission of the Śiva- and Rudra-bhedas (e.g. Kiraṇa 10); the Parākhyā's account, however, is of the transmission of the entirety of knowledge—what Trilocanaśiva classifies as a mahaughakramalakṣaṇaśāstrāvātāra (Siddhāntasamuccaya IFP MS T. 284, pp. 128–9 [=A]; IFP MS T. 206, p. 58 [=B]; GOML MS R 14394, pp. 1–2):

Some of this is also to be found in Madhyārjuna's Siddhāntadīpikā, IFP T. 284, p. 107; but it is clear from other acknowledged borrowings [e.g. on p. 102] that the Siddhāntasamuccaya is its source. Cf. also the Śivajñānabodhasaṅgrahabhāṣya of Śivāgrayogin, p. 6.

²²⁵Other interpretations of this label at this point are of course possible.

that] this 'being endowed with form' (sākalyaṃ tat) was spoken of in this way above in a figurative sense. (10)

Because of His own very nature (ātmasvarūpeṇa) He performs this awakening (pratibodhaṃ) by means of His own power (svaśaktiṭaḥ). This awakening knowledge (bodhaḥ) is known of because of its effect, [namely] the sequence of descent of the scriptures. (11)

Since it is the case that what is to be accomplished is to be achieved by some means (sādhanaṭ sādhyasiddhiṭaḥ), so, in transmission too (avatāre 'pi), this [awakening knowledge] is known to come step by step from the source by means of the light of Śiva's power (śivaśaktiprakāśeṇa). (12)

Just like any thing that comes from a great distance [and that must nevertheless have had an original starting point], this [awakening knowledge] cannot spread (na yāti) devoid of a root (chinnamūlaḥ). Therefore Śiva, the Supreme soul, is its creating cause.²²⁶ (13)

And that [awakening knowledge] too, being filled with His power (tacchaktiṣaṃviṣṭaḥ), expounds that [same] truth (tam artham).²²⁷ [And so] that [too] is—indirectly by this chain of intermediaries (pāramparyakrameṇaiva)—the cause of [further] transmission (avatārasya). (14)

Then (atho) [there takes place] a contraction of all the scriptures by a particular [process of] shrinking (hrāsaṃviśeṣataḥ),²²⁸ since [only] by this ²²⁶The slightly unusual collocation hetukartṛ is paralleled in Kiraṇa 7:4 and Tantrāloka 8:402.

²²⁸The 'shrinking' is not arbitrary, since that would involve losing important parts of the original knowledge. The theme of scripture being revised into shorter and shorter scriptures for the sake of short-lived and limited mortals recurs in many tantras, e.g., Sārdhatriśatikālottara 1:1–4, Svacchanda 1:5–7, Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 10:103–6 and the beginning of the Sarvajñānottara (some of which is quoted by GOODALL 1998:lx, fn. 145). These [above-mentioned sages] have reached the further shore [of the ocean] of scripture, hundreds and thousands of them. From them a certain amount [from] amongst this [scriptural knowledge] has come down to the foremost of men. Mortals are known to shrinking does its power (tadvīryam) come within the range of understanding of gods and sages (gīrvāṇamunidṛksthitaṃ). (15)

This contraction that is taught by summarising teachers (*saṃhāraka-gurūditāḥ*²²⁹) is such that the essence from the root—that is to say the collection of the things that are essential (sāravastuparigrahaḥ)—can be understood [from it] (saṃjñeyāḥ). (16)

And for [the sake of] men this has come down to the earth from Śiva's 'mouth' (śivavaktrataḥ), [so called] in this system (iha) because it reveals (vyañjanāt) all scriptures (sarvaśāstrāṇām) and because it saves (trāṇāt) all souls. (17)

By the word 'mouth' [here is expressed] His power, because that is the cause of revealing and saving; not otherwise is His activity that is made up of phonemes, sentences and words [i.e. His authorship of scripture] possible. (18)

In this [activity] (tatra)²³⁰ it is He alone, the Supreme Lord, because of His power, who is taught to be the speaker. His scripture (tadāgamaḥ) is in such a form as has been summarised by those [summarising teachers]. (19)

How are we to know that these, who have not [themselves] experienced [the truth], have authoritativeness? [We reply:] just as it has been taught that the Lord has it, so [too] these have authoritativeness. (20)

They are taught to be authorities (āptāḥ proktāḥ), not [merely] ordinary gods, such as Brahmā, [and] not [just] ordinary men; [they are] special persons (kecit) who expound the topics [of the tantras] (padārtha-pratipādakāḥ). They are not deceivers (pratārakāḥ), [but] ones who are in every respect endowed with qualities of goodness.²³¹ (21) be short-lived, of small strength and small intellect. That is why it has been expressed in [the form of] a résumé (?) and revealed to men.'

²³⁰Or perhaps this might rather be rendered 'Of the [teachers and transmitters of the tantra]'.
²³¹By punctuating this verse differently we could arrive at different interpretations, e.g., 'Authoritative persons are not ordinary; [they are] like Brahmā and the gods. They are not ordinary men; they are special persons who expound the topics [of the tantras]. Perhaps one could also consider conjecturing pravaktāro (in place of the transmitted pratārako) and translating: 'Teachers [of tantras] endowed with qualities of goodness are not to be found everywhere'.

Pratoda spoke:

Since [this] teaching (vacah) is of men, it is not an authority; it is uncertain. What is enjoined by [Vedic] injunction (codanācoditam) is an authoritative means of knowledge (mānam) because this is not of men.²³² (22)

Prakāśa spoke:

Tell me plainly: by which means of knowledge among the six means of knowledge [that you acknowledge]²³³ is it determined that this [Vedic revelation] is not of men (na pauraṣam)? (23)

If this [fact of the Veda's being not of men] were perceived by direct perception, then the person by whom it were perceived would be seen. And [yet] such a person is not seen in this world, therefore this is not to be known by means of direct perception (*tena dṛṣṭyā na gamyate*²³⁴). (24)

And since we perceive no special nature of the composition of phonemes and so forth [in the Veda, as compared with the composition of phonemes etc. in ordinary speech], its being an effect, which [is a feature that] belongs to the various kinds [of such composition], such as words, sentences etc. (padavākyādibhedagam), must necessarily be inferred.²³⁵ (25)

As for that differentiating characteristic (yo viśeṣaḥ) in (?) Vedic revelation (śravaṇānugaḥ) that [results] from its division into arthavāda and the rest [of the categories of Mīmāṃsaka exegesis], is that not also ²³²Dr. Kei KATAOKA's conjecture here is a diagnostic one: the wording of the original cannot be known; but his conjecture conveys the sense that we expect. Human utterances are not reliable (Ślokavārttika, codanāsūtra 144ab): sarvadā cāpi puruṣaḥ prāyeṇānṛtavādinaḥ.

²³⁵Cf. Rāmakaṇṭha's often repeated (with slight variations) formula racanā kartāraṃ na vyabhicarati (Kiraṇavṛtti 1:12.7; Mataṅgavṛtti ad vidyāpāda 1:30c–33b, p. 18; Mokṣakārikāvṛtti ad 147c–148b). The formula is reminiscent of Pārthasārathimīśra's words in his exposition of Ślokavārttika, vedanīyatādhikaraṇa 1ab (vacanāntara-sādharmyāt kartuḥ sāmānyasamplave): ...kiñ ca, racanādhīnā padānāṃ vākyatāpattiḥ; na ca racayitur abhāve racanā sambhavati: ato 'vaśyam āśrayaṇīyo vedānāṃ kartā. And cf. Pramāṇavārttikasavṛtti ad 243, p. 123 (to which Dr. KATAOKA (letter of 19.x.2001) has drawn my attention): [Buddhist:] na cātra laukikavaidikayoḥ svabhāvabhedam paśyāmaḥ... [Mīmāṃsaka:] nanu vedāvedayos tattvalakṣaṇo 'sty eva viśeṣaḥ.

Or [we might argue that] such a differentiating characteristic is found in the mass of knowledge [that is the Veda, but only] for the reason that eulogies are presented in it which have deities as their subject.²³⁶ (27)

And [you argue that] no creator of it is remembered to have existed, [and that] therefore it is taught to be not of men. [We reply: in that case] it must undesirably follow that (prasajyate) such things as tanks and wells would not be effects [since one does not remember their creators].²³⁷ (28)

But in this case (vātra), do we not know²³⁸ the dying out of the family of the creator of that [tank or well or the like] to be an evident [truth] (bhāsagaḥ); because forgetting [the creators of] other things [is possible]; [but] it is impossible of [the creators of] knowledge or the like?²³⁹ (29)

Even though it is impossible [to forget a creator] for things that are [in any case] beginningless (anādivastūnām), such as [Vedic] injunctions

²³⁶The point, if this interpretation of the verse as a statement of the Siddhānta is correct, would be that what distinguishes the Veda from other texts is simply its being full of praises of deities, a distinguishing characteristic that is not enough to block the inference of its being an effect. One could consider instead treating this verse as a statement of a Mīmāṃsaka pūrvapakṣa: 'Or [you might say that] there is such a differentiating characteristic in the mass of knowledge [that is the Veda], since there is found in it eulogy of deities'. But this seems less plausible, because the transition between 3:27 and 3:28ab would then be less smooth and both would be expressing arguments of the pūrvapakṣa even though only the objection of 3:28ab seems to be answered in what follows.

²³⁷The example probably derives from the Śābarabhāṣya ad 1.1.5, where the topic is the eternality of the connection between word and meaning (FRAUWALLNER 1968:42-4): kathaṃ punar idam avagamyate 'apauruṣeya eṣa sambandhaḥ' iti? puruṣasya sambandhur abhāvāt. kathaṃ sambandhā nāsti? pratyakṣasya pramāṇasyābhāvāt, tatpūrvakatvāc cetareṣāṃ. nanu ciravṛttatvāt pratyakṣasyāviśayo bhaved idānītanānām. na hi ciravṛttaḥ san na smaryeta. na ca himavadādiṣu kūpārāmādivad asmarāṇaṃ bhavitum arhati. puruṣaviyogo hi teṣu bhavati deśotsādena kulotsādena vā. na tu śabdārthavyavahāraviyogaḥ puruṣāṇām asti. syād etat: sambandhamātravyavahāriṇo niṣprajyānaṃ kartṛsmaraṇaṃ anādivyamāṇāḥ puruṣā vismareyur iti. tan na; yadi hi puruṣaḥ kṛtvā sambandhaṃ vyavahārayet, vyavahārakāle 'vaśyaṃ smartavyo bhavet. sampratipattau hi kartṛvyavahartror arthaḥ siddhyati, na vipratipattau. na hi vṛddhiśabdena apāṇiner vyavahārataḥ ādaicaḥ pratiyeran, pāṇinikṛtim ananumanyamānasya vā. tathā makāreṇa piṅgalasya na sarvagurus trikaḥ pratiyeta, piṅgalakṛtim ananumanyamānasya vā.

²³⁹In the Śābarabhāṣya the examples of Pāṇini and Piṅgala are adduced, for which see fn. 237 on p. 210 above.

(vidhyādīnām), it would follow (prāpyate) that some part [at least] of the statements [that make up the Veda] must have been authored by men [because they contain historical references] (puruṣokto 'mśo vacasām), since [those parts] cannot be [explained as just] eulogy (astuteḥ).²⁴⁰ (30)

Or perhaps a statement [produced] in one man (narāntare) might be unworldly (alaukikaṃ) for another.²⁴¹ [The Mīmāṃsaka might reply:] but uncultivated men (asaṃskṛtānām) cannot have [authored] such a special teaching [as the Veda]. (31)

[We reply:] and yet (ca) [although that may be so now], at another time [long ago] such a restriction need not obviously have applied. Because of [the Veda's] being distinguished by such features as having composition (racanādiviśiṣṭatvāt), it follows that it is an effect (kāryatvam upapadyate). (32)

For these statements [of the Veda] certainty [with respect to their authoritativeness] (niscayaḥ) is established (sthitāḥ) in the same way as it is for statements of smṛti-literature. On the other hand (vā) you have taught that these [statements of smṛti] have authority in as much as they have the Veda as their source. (33)

And everything that arises [including the Veda, since we have proved that it is an effect] must have a source, and so (tena) this teaching [that is the Veda] is not to be understood by [the means of knowledge that is] inference (anumānataḥ) to be not of men (apauruṣam). (34)

Nor would analogy, which depends on a cognition of similarity (sādṛśyapratyayānugā), be [applicable] there. If there is some quality of something [in something else], then the means of knowledge that is analogy can be applied. Therefore analogy would not be [applicable] to statements of the Veda [if they are] such [as you conceive them to be] (vedavākye tathāvidhe). (35)

And if (vā) you wish [to use] arthāpatti, since language (śabde) is established (sthitā) to be eternal, then let man be that which reveals it (tadvyañjakāḥ). [But] in that case [by this 'revealing'] (tathā) this act of ²⁴⁰Note that the constitution and interpretation of this passage are extremely tentative. Prakāśa's point appears to be that of the Naiyāyika: in the last pāda he preempts the Mīmāṃsaka's response to the suggestion that the Veda has authored passages containing historical references (namely the contention that such passages are arthavāda) by asserting (with no reason adduced, but presumably because he believes the historical references to be undeniable) that one cannot class such passages as arthavāda.

²⁴¹Once again the text and interpretation are not secure. For the usage narāntare, cf. 3:46a below, and 14:99d and the annotation ad loc.

composition is performed [though passing under another name].²⁴² (36)

The proof of this [existing eternally] cannot be achieved by [the means of knowledge called] abhāva, since He [the creator] exists (tasya bhāvaḥ) by His own nature (svabhāvataḥ).²⁴³ Nor can the eternality [of the Veda] be known from śabda, because it is [part of] the same vākya (tulyavākya-taḥ).²⁴⁴ (37)

Pratoda spoke:

True statements of Vedic injunction (tathyaṃ yac codanāvākyaṃ) that teach such things as the Agnihotra²⁴⁵ are not non-authoritative in [any of the] three ways [in which something may be non-authoritative]²⁴⁶ (tasya ... nāprāmāṇyaṃ tridhā sthitam) since understanding arises [as a result of them] (jñānasamutpattau).²⁴⁷ (38)

²⁴²I assume that identifying vyañjanā with racanā is the step in the argument that is here intended, and that the awkwardly compressed syntax is authorial. Perhaps one might instead translate: 'And if you wish [to use] arthāpatti, even though language is established to be eternal, you must allow that man is its 'revealer' [when he enunciates phonemes], and that this 'composition' [of the phonemes into arrangements that we know as texts] is accomplished in the same way [viz. by men].' The structure of the Mīmāṃsakas' arthāpatti would be: the Veda is eternal and unauthored since one cannot account for its existence in any other way (anyathā anupapattyā). Prakāśa's intention is to suggest such another way in which its existence can be accounted for and thereby demonstrate the inapplicability of arthāpatti.

²⁴⁴The suffix -taḥ is again treated as though it were -tvāt (cf. parokṣataḥ in 3:40d below). The reason adduced for śabda not being applicable is the problem of circularity (the Veda declaring itself to be eternal).

²⁴⁷Instead of taking the tasya as a correlative to yat, one might understand tathyaṃ

Since a human teaching rests upon the understanding of the person who wishes to make something known (bodhakapratyayāśritam), it does not serve to make known [dharma] (abodhāya): such [human] sentences (tadvākyam) cannot [both] be true and teach that dharma (taddharma-codakam) [viz. the Agnihotra etc.].²⁴⁸ (39)

Prakāśa spoke:

Among the three grounds for non-authoritativeness that you have named (uddiṣṭaḥ) above (*purā*²⁴⁹), is there not doubt (sandehaḥ) because of its object [svarga] (tadarthasya) being beyond the sphere of the senses (*parokṣataḥ*²⁵⁰)? (40)

[It is] just like the knowledge which is possible (yad bhavet) with respect to fire (agnyarthe) [and] that has as its object the universal [fire, i.e. fire in general] (sāmānyaviṣayam), or [like] the cognition of a possibility (sambhavadpratyayo vā); it cannot here have universal application (atranāśau sārvaatriko bhavet).²⁵¹ (41)

Since there are exceptions [where it does not hold true] (vyabhicārāt), it is not an authoritative means of knowledge (pramāṇam no). [You might raise the following objection:] Is it not the case that this [phenomenon of exceptions] is so even of [things that are generally accepted as] authoritative means of knowledge (pramāṇeṣv api) ? But if [as you Mīmāṃsakas hold] it is of itself that something is an authoritative means of knowledge to be the predicate of a sentence with an omitted correlative corresponding to yat: 'Statements of Vedic injunction that teach such things as the Agnihotra are true; it being the case that understanding arises [because of them], they are not non-authoritative in [any of the] three ways.'

²⁴⁸The second half-line might instead be interpreted as a statement about the Veda: 'Statements of this [Veda] do not fail to produce cognition [about dharma]; they are true and they enjoin dharma.' If this interpretation were accepted, then we might take the first half-line as follows: 'Because [it is only] human teaching [that] rests upon the understanding of the person who wishes to make something known, ...'. But perhaps it could also be read with what precedes it.

²⁴⁹One would rather expect this not to refer to the immediately preceding question, and yet Pratoda has not otherwise referred to this group of three. Perhaps, therefore, we should understand 'that you [Mīmāṃsakas] have taught before'. The entire chapter is curious in its implicit acknowledgement that Mīmāṃsaka views predate the tantra, so perhaps an explicit acknowledgement of Mīmāṃsaka works (with the word purā) is not impossible. Those who are very uncomfortable with purā might consider emending either to 'dhunā or to punaḥ, both of which are palaeographically close.

²⁵¹Is the sense of this last phrase: 'it is subject to exceptions (vyabhicārī)'?

(svata eva pramāṇatve),²⁵² then that means of knowledge [should by itself be the necessary and sufficient] cause [of correct knowledge].²⁵³ (42)

Then, for the same reason[?] (taddhetunā), [it would follow that] the adducing of a logical ground would be pointless (hetūpādānavaiarthyam). [But] it is not just of itself alone that [the means of knowledge called] scripture (śabdasya) is possessed of its function of according with [and thereby causing one to understand(?)]²⁵⁴ its meaning (vṛttir arthānugāminī). (43)

If, on the other hand (vā), you hold²⁵⁵ that its function of according with [and thereby causing one to understand(?)] its meaning [operates in the same way] as [the same function] in a lamp, [then reflect that] in that case too [the lamp functions in] dependence upon someone using it (yojakāpekṣā): it is the same for language (tadvad eva padādikā)²⁵⁶. (44)

Something which causes to know (jñāpakam) does not of itself, devoid of knowledge (jñānavarjitam), have the power of causing knowledge (jñāpane śaktam). Therefore it cannot be said that an authoritative means of knowledge is of itself [authoritative]. It (tat) is not certain beyond doubt (aniścitam). (45)

This teaching (vākyam etat), which does not change (nānyathāsthitam) when it is in another place (deśāntaragatam) is proven, †...†.²⁵⁷ (46)

²⁵³There could, in other words, be no possibility of vyabhicāra.

²⁵⁴The awkwardness of this formulation reflects my difficulty with the Sanskrit: the form is not causative, but the context in which the parallel expression (which is also not causative in form) occurs in the next verse suggests to me that a causative sense is required. I had accordingly first translated 'its function of causing one to understand', assuming that this was a further instance of a simplex used with the sense of a causative (cf. 6:21b and 6:61d), but such an interpretation would be semantically problematic too: 'understand' appears not to be an attested sense of anu-gam.

²⁵⁶It is not clear to me exactly how this should be interpreted: padādikā could either be taken to be agreeing with (an understood) vṛttiḥ—'so too [the function] that belongs to words and other such [features of language]'—or with apekṣā—'so too there is [a dependency] that belongs to words and other such [features of language]'. In each case the 'that belongs to' would have to be expressed by the -ka, and this is perhaps not plausible. One should also consider the possibility suggested to me by Dr. ISAACSON (letter of 1.x.2001) that padādikā is an error for padādi-ke: 'so too in words and so forth [viz. in language].'

²⁵⁷*ex conj.* The point of the passage as a whole appears to be to emphasise that

Otherwise it could not [be taught] in brief (saṅkṣepāt) or, on the other hand, at length (punar vistarato 'pi vā). And yet (kiṃ tu) His teachers (tadgurubhiḥ), endowed with knowledge (prājñaiḥ), have established the truth, [setting it forth] together with reasoning (yuktisaṃhitāḥ) [in various scriptures]. (47)

Thus whatever particular teaching of a [particular] sage (gurūktā yā viśeṣoktiḥ) there might be that [looks as though it] is contradictory (parasparavirodhinī) because of a division of sentences [within it] that is other [than what was intended(?)]—[that teaching in fact] relates to the truths established by Him (tatsiddhavastugā). (48)

†In the same way an abbreviation of rites (kriyopasaṃhāraḥ) accomplishes its purpose (siddhārthaḥ). That [abbreviation] derives from the [system of] rites [originally taught by Śiva]. Just as [in Vedic religious practice] the rituals taught by different branches of the Veda [are valid] (śākhāntaroktakarmeṇa), so too [such an abbreviation of rites] in which the sequence [of actions] is accompanied by [appropriate] mantras is established [to be effective] (siddho 'ṇugakramaḥ)†. ²⁵⁸ (49)

And (api) since He has been said (yenoktaḥ) by the statements of all educated authoritative persons (sarvaśiṣṭāptavākyena) to be omniscient, He understands the relation between the goal and the means of attaining it, [and] He understands the union with the highest knowledge (uttara-jñānayogavit). ²⁵⁹ (50) authoritative means of knowledge are authoritative because they satisfy conditions of truth rather than, as for the Mīmāṃsaka opponents, because whatever is authoritative must of itself be automatically authoritative without depending on anything outside itself. In the next verse it appears that a connection is to be made with this fact (that things are authoritative because they measure up to a reality outside themselves) and the fact that Śaiva scripture consists of many redactions by various sages of what Śiva taught. It is possible that in the second half of this verse a transition was intended from the subject of the Veda to Śaiva scripture. Emendation of this half-verse, which, as transmitted, is unmetrical, could perhaps be considered to tat siddham tantrarūpāṇām pramāṇānām yathāsthitaḥ: 'This is established [for Vedic revelation] in the same way as it is established for the authorities that have the form of tantras.' Or instead perhaps tat siddham tantrarūpāṇām pramāṇām nānyathāsthiteḥ (where pramāṇām would be a genitive plural of pramā): 'This is proven for the authorities that are tantras [too], since they are established to be not [essentially] different.'

²⁵⁸ The syntax of this sentence is odd, but we have seen other instances of statements involving comparisons that seem anacoluthic. The interpretation allowed in this text of the syllable ga appears, as we have seen elsewhere (see introduction, p. lxxxi), to be very wide.

²⁵⁹ Other interpretations of the last compound seem possible. The awkwardly placed

He is the omniscient one in whom all distinctions have their rest. †[Even] the distinction that is [apparently] without resting point [?] (yo 'navasthānaḥ), since it moves [?] (yato gantā) it must come to rest (viśramet)†. (51)

This [sort of] internal resting (so 'ntaraviśrāmaḥ) [can be] directly perceived (dṛṣṭaḥ) in the flood of rivers [once entered] in the water of the ocean.²⁶⁰ † The supreme Lord... †.²⁶¹ (52)

That which is composed by Him (tatpraṇītam) [and] that which expresses His meaning (tadarthasya vācakam) [are said to be] Śiva's teaching (śivabhāṣitam). This is to be understood from [their] agreement (saṁvādāt) [with each other], for they cannot be devoid of a root source.²⁶² (53)

That is certain with respect to what is not directly perceived (adrṣṭārthe), just as is the case with the moon, sun, planets and such.²⁶³ Having seen what is manifest in [this] world, we can infer it[s existence] also when [that thing is] beyond the range of our senses (parokṣe 'pi). (54)

[That which establishes] the authority of direct perception and the others [of the valid means of knowledge that are dependent on perception] is [their] application (vyāpāraḥ) in the functioning of the world (lokaśaṁsthītau); heaven (svargaḥ) and liberation are not within their scope, since those are beyond the range of the senses. (55)

His teaching is the one authority; it is that which overrides all [the tu has not been translated because, whether primary or a secondary insertion, its only purpose must be to avoid a hiatus.

²⁶⁰ ex conj. The interpretation is uncertain. The use of antara^o with the sense of antaḥ is probably possible in this sort of literature. Note that Rāmakaṇṭha assumes the reverse (antaḥ with the sense of antara) in his interpretation of Kiraṇa 2:9.

²⁶¹ Perhaps the text could be emended to tadvaj jñānaviśiṣṭo 'pi viśrāntaḥ paramēśvaraḥ: 'In the same way the supreme Lord too is endowed with [all] knowledge, being rested in by [all knowledge].'

²⁶² ex conj. No doubt other reconstructions are possible. Moreover other interpretations of this rather tentative reconstruction are possible, e.g.: 'That which is composed by Him and expresses His meaning [is said to be] Śiva's teaching; this [i.e. that something is Śiva's teaching] is [to be] understood from [its] agreement [with other works that are recognised to be Śiva's teaching]; [it is not improper to make such an inference] since nothing can be devoid of a root source.'

others].²⁶⁴ Therefore the teaching of the authoritative person [viz. Śiva] is to be accepted wherever, with respect to whatever subject and however it occurs. (56)

Therefore one must accept [the existence of] the lords who are Rudrāṇus (rudrāṇunāyakāḥ)²⁶⁵ on the authority of His teaching. By the will of the Lord (īśvarecchāvaśāt) seven crores [of mantras] became manifest in [the reality level of pure] knowledge (vidyāyām). (57)

Seeing this terrible creation, overrun with troubles and pains (duḥkha-kleśair upadrutām), they take counsel among themselves (*sampradhārya mithaḥ*²⁶⁶), †tasmin† and certain (?) [among them] (tathānyāś ca), ready to enter a Śaiva body (praveṣṭum śāṅkarīm tanum/ samudyatāḥ),²⁶⁷ full ²⁶⁴Or perhaps 'His teaching is the one authority; it is that which determines all things [seen and unseen]'. The close parallel to this that appears in the Pauṣkara (7:63ab) is unaccountably garbled in the Adyar edition (where it reads, nonsensically, ekaṃ pramāṇam ekaṃ tadvākyam śreyonidhiḥ sadā). The form quoted (in the apparatus) is that of the Chidambaram edition (which is also the form in which Jñānaprakāśa quotes it towards the beginning of his Śivāgamādimāhātmyasaṅgraha (IFP T. 372, p. 1194)). The passage of the Pauṣkara in which this unit occurs is clearly related to that in which it occurs in the Mataṅga: Pauṣkara 7:61cd, 62d and 63ab are the same, respectively, as Mataṅgavidyāpāda 3:18cd, 3:19b and 3:20ab. Once again (see introduction, p. liii) the Mataṅga and the Pauṣkara display their common allegiance to the Pārameśvara division of scripture. It is conceivable that the Parākhya has drawn here on the original Pauṣkara-Pārameśvara, in which a similar line probably occurred. It is even possible that the passage of the original Pauṣkara-Pārameśvara is actually what is cited by Umacigīśāṅkaraśāstrin in his Brahmasūtraśāṅkarīvṛtti (pp. 35–6), though it is possible that the quotation is from the South Indian Pauṣkara:

yathā sā śāṅkareṇoktā tathāpi śrutir āstikā pramāṇaṃ sutarām āptatama eva maheśvaraḥ suprasannendriyagrāmaḥ sarvajñaḥ sarvagocaraḥ pakṣapātavinirmukto yathārthagrāhakaḥ sadā avyayaḥ paripūrṇaś ca svatantraḥ paśupāśahā pramāṇam ekaṃ tadvākyam tathyaṃ śreyaskaram sadā.iti.*

²⁶⁵This compound could of course be analysed variously. Compare Mataṅgavidyāpāda 7:3ab: rudrāṇavo mahābhāgā mantrāṇāṃ saptakoṭayaḥ. Rāmakāṇṭha, in his commentary thereon, understands rudrāṇavaḥ to be in apposition to saptakoṭayaḥ: ye caite proktāḥ, te na vidyeśāḥ... api tu tā etā mantrāṇāṃ saptakoṭayaḥ. In our context too it seems likely that it is the seven crores of mantras that are meant.

²⁶⁷That this enjambement is intended here is suggested to me by Mataṅgavidyāpāda 7:9ab, for which see fn. 270 on p. 219 below.

of longing, their minds fixed on the will to go to the supreme state (param padaṃ yiyāsāsiddhacetaskāḥ), speak to him [viz. Ananta] with determinate thought (savikalpāḥ).²⁶⁸ (58–9)

'How can we go to that [supreme] state? Ananta is blocking us.'²⁶⁹ Then the magnanimous (mahātmanā) Ananta, the overlord of the lords of the mantras (vidyeśanāthena), in the position of his own office (svādhikārapadasthena) himself thought (saṅkalpya manasā) [the following]: (60c–61b)

'Because of their duties (svādhikārāt) how can these [vidyās] enter the imperishable state (acyutaṃ padam)?' (61cd)

The overlord of the lords of mantras divided off half [of them] for the sake of maintenance [of the universe] (sthitihetutaḥ).²⁷⁰ (62ab)

²⁷⁰ The number of mantras being seven crore is universal. It is also typical that only half of this number are actually employed in the tasks of the impure universe. Other tantras differ about what happens to the other half, and the account here is unfortunately corrupt, so that it is not easy to determine what the Parākhyā teaches. According to Tattvasaṅgraha 32–5 and to Mrgendravidyāpāda 4:7–8 (quoted below in fn. 277 on p. 220 below), half the mantras are involved in the initiation of beings in the pure universe. Such initiation does not require an ācārya as a locus (adhikaraṇa). They accomplish this immediately after creation and are then liberated. The other half are employed for the initiation and such of beings in the impure universe. They are liberated once they have performed these tasks only at the end of a cycle of creation. The account of the Mataṅga could perhaps be reconciled with this, but its treatment of the subject is very different: according to Mataṅgavidyāpāda 7:6–14 as interpreted by Rāmakaṇṭha, the mantras see and become disenchanted with impure creation and desire to become liberated (as here in the Parākhyā and in Rāmakaṇṭha's Mokṣakārikā-vṛtti ad Mokṣakārikā 88–9). Ananta, at Śiva's bidding holds them back from this, and so they approach Ananta and ask why it is that he holds them back, since they have performed the tasks which had up to then been given them. Ananta allows the purest (śobhanāḥ) to attain liberation after bearing office for just a day(?)—a detail that Rāmakaṇṭha's commentary overlooks—but the remaining half he invests with offices after they have first discussed among themselves who is suited to go where. Since

Since (yasmāt) the attainment of omniscience (jñānaprāptiḥ), which is known as the attainment of self (ātmalābhākhyā), and which is its revelation (tadvyaktiḥ), [being that] in which there is the 'arising' of one's own [innate] qualities of sentience (svacaitanyaguṇodayā), comes about through initiation [which is in turn accomplished] by means of knowledge (vidyādvāreṇa)—as is also (ca) the attainment of the [eight supernatural] accomplishments of making oneself tiny and so forth (aṇimādi-guṇānām) by those who aim to attain that (tatsādhakātmanām)²⁷¹—

this difficult portion (Mataṅgavidyāpāda 7:8–14 and commentary) is in some respects parallel to what we have here, I quote it below:

²⁷¹For this otiose use of ātman at the ends of words, cf. the Mataṅga, in which it is commonly employed (see p. liv). A translation such as 'mantra-practitioners' (for sādhaka) would leave the tat unaccounted for. But even with the flatter interpreta-

therefore (tena) mantras are known as (smṛtāḥ) 'knowledges' (vidyāḥ), [because of their being] connected with the power that is the meaning of the verbal root [$\sqrt{\text{vid}}$].²⁷² (62c–64b)

The seven crores that have been spoken of [were spoken of] with the intention of mentioning the principal among them: since the grace is infinite and those on whom grace is to be bestowed are infinite, they too are therefore taught to be infinite, having various designations²⁷³—«and among these» they are of two kinds: vidyās and the others are mantras²⁷⁴—since interaction would be impossible [with them] if they were without designations. (64c–66b)

A means with these as instruments (tatsādhanopāyaḥ) has been created by the omniscient [Lord] for the sake of the goal (arthahetutaḥ).²⁷⁵ The goal is called nirvāṇa in this [system] (asmin); it is established (sthitāḥ) to have the cessation [of bondage] as the way to achieve it (nivṛttiprakramāḥ).²⁷⁶ (66c–67b)

That half [of the mantras],²⁷⁷ having accomplished its duties, turns

tion that has been accepted, it seems probable that the text is alluding here to the fundamental Śaiva dichotomy between mokṣa, which is the goal of the mumukṣu, and bhoga/siddhi, which is the intermediate goal (before attaining full liberation) of the power-seeking sādhaka or bubhukṣu.

²⁷⁴It is not here made explicit here what the distinction is between these. Sometimes both terms appear to be used generically, but where the two terms are distinguished as sub-groups among 'mantras', it is possible that the difference is only one of gender, the mantras being the ones with masculine names and the vidyās being ones with feminine names. It is probable that this is how the terms are used in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 7, e.g. in verse 30.

²⁷⁵Others might prefer to assume śādhanaopāya to be a fixed compound meaning 'means to attainment' and to interpret this half-line to mean: 'Therefore (tat), for the sake of the goal, the omniscient Lord has created a means of attainment.'

²⁷⁶Perhaps prakrama should be interpreted differently.

²⁷⁷*ex conj.* It is a guess that half of the mantras are again being referred to here. Cf. Mṛgendravidyāpāda 4:7–8: prayoktṛdehasāpekṣaṁ tad ardhāṁ akhile 'dhvani/ kṛtvādhikāraṁ sthityante śivaṁ viśati seśvaram/ vinādhikaraṇānyat pradhānavikṛter

aside from duties (adhikāraparāṇimukham) and, «becoming²⁷⁸» equal to Śiva, it is spoken of as [being] in the body of Śaṅkara.²⁷⁹ His body is of the form of [powers of] knowledge and action (dṛkkriyārūpā); that [half] has that nature (tatsvarūpeṇa tat sthitam). (67c-68)

They shine having that nature (tatsvarūpasthitam bhāti) [having] come down [into impure creation] after having, as it were, 'taken counsel'.²⁸⁰ Their 'taking counsel' (sampradhāraṇam) must take place (sthitam) in the path of matter (prakṛter vartmani). (69)

And these vidyās that are given responsibility (adhiropitāḥ) for the cutting of bonds are not of matter (prākṛtāḥ). †The purpose for which a body is constituted [for them] is the same as that [for which] a body is taken by the Lord†.²⁸¹ (70)

Therefore it is figuratively that this 'taking counsel' (sampradhāraṇam) of the soul(?)²⁸² is spoken of. (71ab)

Having seen creation, which is made up of troubles, they all, it seems (kila), become disenchanted (viraktāḥ).²⁸³ (71cd)

This has been expounded in this [tantra] for the sake of encouraging dispassion in souls (pumvirāgapravṛttyartham). They are employed adhaḥ/ kṛtvādhikāram īśeṣṭam apaiti svādhvasaṃhṛtau.

²⁷⁸ ex conj. ACHARYA.

²⁸¹ If this is the sense, this verse makes the point that they do not have bodies produced by karman, māyā and so forth, but a kind of subtle-matter body that they take on at will for fulfilling their tasks. It does not have material (prākṛta) faculties of sense and action.

But perhaps artham is once again an error for ardham and the purport is quite different.

²⁸² Should be perhaps emend to ātmanām and assume that this refers to the mantrasouls?

²⁸³ This disenchantment of the mantras upon their first contact with impure creation is spoken of also in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 7:6-7.

as office-bearers (*niyuktā*²⁸⁴ adhikāritve) by means of the relation between that which expresses and that which is expressed (vācyavācaka-yogataḥ).²⁸⁵ (72)

Now mantras have been taught. They are numberless. They came forth from the body of Śiva. They express no other meaning [than Śiva?].²⁸⁶ (73)

ĪŚĀNA was revealed (vyaktaḥ) from the head (kāt), VAKTRA [viz. TATPURUṢA] from the face, GHORA from the heart, GUHA [viz. VĀMA-DEVA] from the penis (dhvajāt),²⁸⁷ AJA [viz. SADYOJĀTA] from the two feet. SARVĀTMAN again from the heart, SUŚIVA from the head, JVĀLINĪ arose from the top-knot (cūlikodbhavā), PIṄGALA from all the limbs, ²⁸⁴ ex conj. It is possible however that the transmitted niyuktam is intended to agree with ardham.

²⁸⁵ Presumably what is meant is that mantras function in their offices by means of the same relation that connects word and meaning.

²⁸⁶ It is possible that what is intended is that this particular group of central mantras that is enumerated in the following verses express Śiva.

²⁸⁷ I assume that this is intended in this way; Dr. ISAACSON (letter of 5.x.2001) has pointed out to me that dhvajāgre is so used in the Buddhist Kālacakratāntra (5:57c) and supported by the gloss liṅgamukhe in the Vimalaprabhā on this verse. As for the correlations, they are the same, except for that of SADYOJĀTA, with those of Parākhya 2:84-5.

GHORĀSTRA was born from the right hand.²⁸⁸ (74–5)

From the two shoulders (bāhuśṛṅgadvayāt) [came] ĪŚĀ;²⁸⁹ the oth-

²⁸⁸ After the five brahmamantras, these are the names of the śivāṅgamantras. In the paddhati literature we do not encounter these names, but instead HṚDAYA, ŚIRAS, ŚIKHĀ, KAVACA, and ASTRA, and, of course, synonyms of these. The Parākhyā's names are however shared by the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha (7:19–22) and by the Mataṅga (kriyāpāda 1:63c–64b), in which they are explicitly identified with the more usual names (vidyāpāda 7:27–28b):

sarvātmā hṛdayaṃ mukhyaṃ suśivākhyam śiraḥ prabhoḥ jvālīnī śikhā jñeyā kavacaṃ piṅgalaṃ mahat śivāstraṃ ca mahādīptam agnījvālākulaṃ param

The name AGHORĀSTRA does not appear in this account of the Mataṅga, but it does in Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 7:22a. Both in this passage of the Parākhyā and in the above quoted passage of the Mataṅga NETRA is omitted. It is omitted also in the Mālinīvijayottara (3:61–5) and appears to be omitted again (corruption in the text means that this cannot be determined with certainty) when the aṅga mantras are again listed in Parākhyā 6:32–3. It is included, however, when the mantras are raised in chapter 7 of the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha, but it is then referred to as NETRA and given no special name (7:3 and 23). In the Sārdhatrīśatikālottara it is not an independent mantra, but the anusvāra that is placed at the top of the other mantras (1:10ab): anusvāro bhaven netraṃ sarveṣāṃ copari sthitaḥ.

Some of the names given here by the Parākhyā are names that are given elsewhere to another group of aṅgamantras called the vidyāṅgamantras. Thus, as BRUNNER explains (1986:118), SARVĀTMAN, BRAHMAŚIRAS, JVĀLINĪ, PIṅGALA, and PĀŚUPATĀSTRA appear as the vidyāṅgamantras of Bhairava in Svacchanda 1:60c–65b, and these are distinct from the aṅgamantras of the niṣkala deity given in Svacchanda 1:71. But, as we have observed above, the Parākhyā's names are given to the śivāṅgamantras in Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 7 and in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 7:27–28b. The names of the vidyāṅgamantras in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 7:16c–18 (and kriyāpāda 1:111c–114) are instead VIDYĀDHIPĀ, BRAHMAŚIRAS, RUDRĀNĪ, PURUṢTUTA, and PĀŚUPATĀSTRA.

Moreover some tantras, as BRUNNER observes (1986:120–1) do not teach a group of vidyāṅgamantras separate from the śivāṅgamantras (e.g. the Kiraṇa and the Sārdhatrīśatikālottara), and the Parākhyā appears to belong to this category.

The history of the development of these mantras and their terminology would be difficult to disentangle: as BRUNNER observes (1986:121): 'Tel ouvrage, qui semblait avoir soigneusement distingué les deux groupes, les confond ensuite, comme s'il oubliait ses résolutions. Bref, la confusion est totale et semble même, à première vue, désespérée.' It is perhaps just worth remarking that among the Saiddhāntika sources that BRUNNER consults for her discussion of the topic (listed 1998:117, fn. 101), only one, the Mataṅga, belongs to the corpus of tantras known to the tenth-century Kashmirian exegetes. This is not to say that the distinction is unknown in early Siddhāntatantras other than the Mataṅga, for the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha clearly distinguishes the two groups (e.g. 14:18–21 and 16:24), though it seems only to teach the formation of one, namely the śivāṅgamantras (in chapter 7).

²⁸⁹ I am not certain which mantra is here referred to. Assuming that the name is not ers²⁹⁰ were generated forth from [His] hairs. Thus these arose from the corrupt, all that is clear is that a female mantra is intended. Possible candidates are a GĀYATRĪ, who is raised before NETRA and after the other aṅgas in Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 7:22, or perhaps the eighty-one-syllabled VYOMAVYĀPIN, who, though usually masculine, is feminine in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 7:31–34b, a passage that follows closely upon the above quoted list of śivāṅgamantras. Most likely, perhaps, is that it refers to the GĀYATRĪ om taṃ maheśāya vidmahe vāgviśuddhāya dhīmahe taṃ naḥ śiṣaḥ pracodayāt. (Thus, as SANDERSON (*1994) observes, Niśvāsa guhyasūtra [15:232] f. 109^v, line 4, except that we there find no (an instance of frozen sandhi) for naḥ.)

SANDERSON (*1994) observes that '[a]n inner circuit comprising at least the Brahmas and the Śiva-auxiliaries is taught in all the Siddhāntas but one.' The exception is the Dviśatikālottara, which, at the beginning of its fourth chapter, teaches 'a maṇḍala populated only by Śiva (the mūlamantraḥ) and five of the Śiva-auxiliaries'. [The one omitted is NETRA.] SANDERSON goes on to observe that the GĀYATRĪ is included in the inner circuit of the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha (14:21), the Niśvāsa mūlasūtra (2:3bcd [f. 19^v, line 2]: navātmānaṃ tato'pari/ pañcabrahmasamāyuktaṃ sāṅgaṃ gāyatri-saṃyutaṃ) and the Sarvajñānottara (Nepalese MS f. 7^r). In the case of the Sarvajñānottara, the first āvaraṇa actually contains four aṅgamantras (excluding NETRA and ASTRA) placed in the cardinal directions, and a second āvaraṇa is formed with ASTRA in the cardinal directions and GĀYATRĪ in the intermediate ones:

āgneyyāṃ hṛdayaṃ nya<<sya>> īśānyān tu śiro nyaset
nairṛtyāṃ tu śikhān dadyād vāyavyāṃ kavacaṃ nyaset astraṃ diśāsu sarvāsu dvitīyāvaraṇe sthitam pūrvād ārabhya mantrajño gāyatrīm vidīśāsu tu.

- kavacaṃ] em.; kavace MS
- mantrajño gāyatrīm] em.; mantrajñāḥ gāyatrī MS

²⁹⁰Which are these 'others'? It is conceivable that the vidyāṅgamantras are intended: Rāmakaṇṭha observes in his Mataṅgavṛtti ad vidyāpāda 7:16c–19b that though the Mataṅga regards these as part of the throne, other tantras say that they too make up part of Śiva's body: ...saṃhitāntareṣu tu śivāṅgabrahmavad vidyāṅgānām api śiva-tanutvam uktam. Otherwise the text is referring to other circuits (āvaraṇa) of the yāga, which vary somewhat in different Siddhāntas. Those of the Somaśambhupaddhati are tabulated by BRUNNER 1963, Appendice VIII. SANDERSON (*1994) points out that the Sārdhatriśatikālottara (7:6c–10b) has the Lokapālas and their weapons as its outer circuits; the Niśvāsa mūlasūtra (2:9–10, f. 19^v) and the Mataṅga (kriyāpāda 5:50–71 and 3:83c–91) have the Vidyēśvaras, the Lokapālas, and their weapons; the Kiraṇa (25:7–12 and 27:5c–6b) and the Bṛhatkālottara (13:102c–103) have the Vidyēśvaras, the Gaṇeśvaras, the Lokapālas, and their weapons; and the Mṛgendra (kriyāpāda 3:20–26b) and the Sarvajñānottara (f. 7^r–7^v) have the same without the weapons of the Lokapālas. (In the case of the Sarvajñānottara the Vidyēśvaras, Gaṇeśvaras, Lokapālas form the third, fourth and fifth āvaraṇas respectively.)

SANDERSON (*1994) further observes that additional outer circuits are found in the Śaivism of the Kashmirian manuals, to substantiate which he quotes from Takṣaka-varta's Nityādisaṅgrahābhīdhānapaddhati (f. 63), which in turn cites the authority of a Nandīśvarāvātāra-Niḥśvāsa in 9000 verses.

body of Śiva. [His] body is characterised by their power (tacchakti-lakṣaṇaḥ). (76)

What is called his mantric body (yad aṅgaṃ khyāpyate māntraṃ) is the power of the supreme Lord (sā śaktiḥ pārameśvarī). This power of His is accepted to be [His] body (aṅgasammatā) because it performs His tasks (tatkāryakartṛtvāt). (77)

Thus the mantras (vidyāḥ) are said figuratively (bhaktiyogataḥ) to have 'arisen' (samutpannāḥ). Where they have office that is called the vidyātattva. Their scope is knowledge (vivekaviṣayāḥ)—no others [are such] (nānyāḥ)—they are pure; they reside in the pure path.²⁹¹ (78)

Thus the coming into being of the collection of mantras capable of granting all rewards (sakalaphalārho mantracakraṇācāraḥ),²⁹² as well as the particular place from which they come forth, called 'pure knowledge' (śuddhavidyābhidhānam), has been taught in this [tantra], [that is to say the place from] where these shakings of the matrix [that is māyā] (te yonikampāḥ) [come forth] produced by the pure instruments [that are the mantras].²⁹³ (79)

Thus the third chapter, expounding the topic of vidyā, in the great tantra called the Supreme.

²⁹¹ ex conj. This last line as I have emended it is not convincing to me. Instead of nānyāḥ (for the transmitted nānyā), perhaps nānā or vidyāḥ would be better. The passage is comparable to Mataṅgavidyāpāda 7:3c–4b:

*viveko yat suśuddhānāṃ mantrāṇāṃ sarvatomukhaḥ
vivekāt tatsvarūpeṇa vidyātattvam ataḥ smṛtam*

Rāmakaṇṭha's commentary thereon is as follows: yad yasmāt tasmin vidyātattve sthitānāṃ mantrāṇāṃ vivekaḥ sarvatomukhaḥ sarvajñatvaṃ bhavati. śuddhānāṃ iti nivṛttāśuddhīnāṃ. ataś ca samālānāṃ vijñānakevalināṃ (thus Poona MS, f. 135^r; samālānāṃ vijñānāṃ vijñānakevalināṃ BHATT) satāṃ mantrāṇāṃ apy adhikāra iti siddham. ato vivekāt samānād dhetoḥ tena mantrasvarūpeṇa saha tad vidyātattvam ucyate. tattvadīkṣāyāṃ mantraiḥ saha etat tattvaṃ śodhyam ity arthaḥ.

²⁹² Of course sakalaphalārhaḥ agrees in gender and number with °pracāraḥ, but I assume that it is intended to qualify mantracakra.

²⁹³ This last pāda may well not be interpreted properly. One rather expects the concluding verse to refer forward to the topic about to be treated in the following chapter, so perhaps we might understand instead: '[there now follows an account of] where these shakings of the matrix that are produced by the pure instruments [that are the mantras take place]'.

PARĀKHYATANTRA CHAPTER IV

Prakāśa spoke:

Māyā is subtle, stable, without form, all-pervading, the locus of sentient beings,²⁹⁴ shakeable by parts of the Lord's power (īśaśaktikalākṣobhyā), [and] with a range from kalā [down to] earth (kalādikṣitigocarā).²⁹⁵ (1)

This tattva is called 'the thicket' (gahanam); [it is] large (mahat), the locus of various Rudras, the support of various worlds and studded with all [manner of] powers (khacitaṃ sarvaśaktibhiḥ). (2)

Pratoda spoke:

This tattva of Māyā is taught, we are told (kila), to be the cause of kalā and the rest [of the tattvas of the impure universe]. [But] this is not a cause, nor an effect, since we cannot perceive [its] true nature (svarūpānupalabdhitā). (3)

Prakāśa spoke:

Indeed the impossibility [of a given thing's existence] need not [be concluded] from the fact of that thing not being perceived. When something is [extremely] distant, [extremely] close,²⁹⁶ when the senses fail, when ²⁹⁴Note that cetanāśrayā, though not a bahuvrīhi, is made a feminine adjective agreeing with māyā. I have rejected the possibility of emending to cetanāśrayaḥ, making it, as we would expect in standard Sanskrit, a masculine noun in apposition to māyā, because this anomalous usage appears to be a feature of the style of the Parākhya: see introduction, p. lxxxii.

²⁹⁵This string of epithets, in rather less detail than those of 1:15 and 2:1, sets the agenda for discussion in the chapter: māyā is subtle (4-7); she is required to be the stable cause of the elements (8-16); she is formless and all-pervading (17-19); she is the resort of sentient beings (20-1 and 156-7); she has to be shaken by the Lord (22-4); the emanation and the character of her evolutes from kalā down to earth are the subject of the remainder of the chapter.

²⁹⁶I assume that these conditions that prevent perception are intended to be those of the Sāṅkhyas enumerated in Sāṅkhyakārikā 7:

saukṣmyād vyavadhānād abhībhavāt samānābhīhārāc ca*

The Parākhya's list, however, has only seven elements, instead of eight. I am assuming that mano'navasthānāt is omitted, and that the Parākhya's atirohaṇe is intended there is something in between [the thing and the sense organ], when the object is overpowered [by something else] (atirohaṇe), when [the object is enveloped as part of] a conglomeration, when [the object is] extremely subtle, then there is no perception of the object (naivārthasyopalambhanam).²⁹⁷ Since that tattva is extremely subtle,²⁹⁸ it is therefore not perceived. (4-5)

And what is extremely subtle can be known through what it does (kriyāgamyam); by our perceiving [less] subtle effects (sūkṣmakāryopalabdhitāḥ)²⁹⁹ we infer from [this] fact, in accordance with probability (yathāsambhavato 'rthataḥ), that there must be a material cause (upādānam) of that [body of effects]. (6)

It has been established before by scripture, therefore this [tattva of māyā] is taught to be proven to be thus. Nevertheless, if reasoning is to be given (yadi sā vācyā yuktiḥ), it will still (kiṃ tu) be based upon that [scripture] (tadāśrayā).³⁰⁰ (7) to correspond to abhibhavāt (which Vācaspatimiśra illustrates ad loc. with the following example: yathāhani saurībhīr bhābhīr abhibhūtaṃ grahanakṣatramanḍalaṃ na paśyati) and the Parākhya's saṃāhāre is intended to correspond to saṃānābhīhārāt (which Vācaspatimiśra illustrates ad loc. with this example: yathā toyadavimuktān udabindūn jalāśaye na paśyati).

It is possible that akṣabhaṅge is intended to cover both what the Sāṅkhyakārikā refers to with indriyaghātāt as well as what it refers to with mano'navasthānāt. It seems that the interpretation of this last term is in any case not uniform. Vācaspatimiśra, whose examples of these factors do not otherwise contradict those of the Yuktidīpikā, illustrates it thus: yathā kāmādyupaplutamanāḥ sphītāloka madhyavartinam indriya-sannikṛṣṭam apy artham apaśyati (if we accept SRINIVASAN's text, in which he allows the main verb to be prefaced by a privative a, for which see SRINIVASAN 1967:42). In the Yuktidīpikā, however, which gives only one-word illustrations of the kinds of objects that can exist and not be perceived as a result of the various factors listed, we read: tatrātidūrāt tāvat tadyathā proḍḍīnasya śakuneḥ; atisāmīpyād añjanaprabhṛtīnām; indriyaghātāc chabdādīnām; mano'navasthānāc chakṛtādīnām... Whereas for Vācaspatimiśra it is emotion that clouds the mind, the idea here might be that fast-moving things, such as chariots, can be unseen because the mind cannot focus on them.

²⁹⁹ If we retained the transmitted text of 6b, perhaps the first half of the verse could be interpreted as follows: 'Extremely subtle things are inferred from their actions; [less] subtle things from perceiving their effects.' But could this make sense?

³⁰⁰ If this is really the intended rhetorical structure, then the particles are misleading. Perhaps I have misunderstood the text here, and perhaps it is corrupt. Cf. the odd use of kiṃ tu in 4:113.

First of all (tāvat) there are the gross elements; their causes are the subtle elements (mātrās taddhetutām gatāḥ); ahaṅkāra is the cause of those and of the senses, as effects.³⁰¹ (8)

Its cause is the intellect (buddhiḥ), [and of that the cause is] the mind (manah), [and of that the cause is the tattva] of the guṇas. Of that [the cause is] unmanifest [secondary matter] (avyaktam), and of that [the cause is the tattva of] limited power to act (kalā). Of that [limited power to act] are born rāga and limited knowledge (rāgavidye dve). Limited power to act and time (kalākālau) are born [directly] from the matrix [viz. māyā].³⁰² (9)

[All] this is taught to be a body of gross effects (etat kāryaṃ mahat proktam), each with a further cause beyond it (uttarottarakāraṇam). It is established that this māyā, which is the [ultimate] material of this, can be inferred [from it].³⁰³ (10)

A creator cannot create without a material cause, since in every creation (srṣṭau srṣṭau ca) a truly existing effect (satkāryam)³⁰⁴ has a cause (sakāraṇam). Therefore a material cause is required. (11)

If that [material cause] were not enduring (sthiram)³⁰⁵, then from what could these effects arise? Seeing where, for whom and how these bodies [of ours] are accomplished, we establish that there must be (sthi-

³⁰¹I am assuming that kāryataḥ is used as though it were equivalent to kāryatvena: see introduction, p. lxxxii.

³⁰²Observe that niyati is not mentioned here even though it is counted as a tattva later in the text (5:152a), just as it appears not to be mentioned in Svāyambhuvasūtra-saṅgraha 2:9a (tasmāt kālakale) even though it occurs later in that text (Svāyambhuvasūtra-saṅgraha 4:27). In his Svāyambhuvavṛtti ad 2:9 Sadyojyotis accordingly interprets kālakale to mean kāla, kalā, and niyati: kalā ca kalā cety ekaśeṣaḥ. kālaś ca kalā ca kālakale. tatraikaḥ kalāśabdo niyatim abhidhatte, dvitīyas tu kalām eva. katham kalāśabdo niyatim abhidhatte? yataḥ sāpi kalayati prerayatīti niyatīḥ, karmaphalabhojakatvena. It is conceivable that the same is intended here and that we should interpret, 'Time and the [two] factors that impel [viz. kalā and niyati] are born from māyā.' Even if one takes the view that Sadyojyotis's interpretation is a sophistic distortion, it is evident that it was later accepted as unproblematic: note that Rāmakaṇṭha, when he quotes Svāyambhuvasūtra-saṅgraha 2:9a in his Kiraṇavṛtti ad 4:22c–23 evidently presupposes Sadyojyotis's interpretation without mentioning that he does so.

³⁰⁴This does not appear here to allude to the position that an effect preexists in its cause (a position which the text does accept, for see 1:66–7), but is instead, I think, merely intended to exclude the illusory 'effects' which some models of creation of the universe might allow.

³⁰⁵It is of course possible that this is an error for sthitam.

tam) an appropriate material cause (tathādānakāraṇaṃ kāraṇam)³⁰⁶ for that person there. Impelled by the Lord by means of [His] power, it generates its effects. (12–13)

Now (tu) its effects are subtle, beginning with limited power to act (kalādikam), [and] gross, ending with earth (dharāntakam). [This body of effects] is inferred (anumīyate) to be connected, in accordance with [the retributive force of each individual's] own past actions (svakarmataḥ), in this body. (14)

And the effect is dependent on its cause (kāraṇāyattam), and that cause is called māyā. Since it 'creates' (māti) all effects, it is called the tattva of māyā.³⁰⁷ (15)

This too is well established in scripture; and scripture is taught by Śiva. He is the creator, proven to be beginningless; māyā is the material cause. (16)

This cause has to be all-pervading; it rests pervading [its] effects, even though it is formless, because of its power (tadvīryāt). It is bodiless [and none the less can produce effects], like the tattva of time.³⁰⁸ (17)

³⁰⁷One could conceivably also interpret 'since all effects are contained [in it]...' This is how Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha uses māti when he gives a nirvacana of māyā introducing his quotation of Parākhya 4:19 (for which see apparatus): māty asyāṃ śaktyātmanā pralaye sarvaṃ jagat sṛṣṭau vyaktiṃ yāti māyā, yathoktaṃ śrīmatasaurabheye... (Devakōṭṭai edition p. 67). The Parākhya verse that he quotes does not obviously give the etymology that Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha makes, and it would be rather forced to read it in. Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha has to find an etymology of māyā because he is glossing a verse of the Mṛgendra (vidyāpāda 2:7) in which the four bonds (mala, rodhaśakti, karman, and māyā) are listed with names that are supposed to express their natures:

pāśajālaṃ samāsenā dharmā nāmnaiva kīrtitāḥ.*

The nirvacana that Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha gives is to be found elsewhere too, for cf. the following verse quoted in pariccheda 4 of the Śaivāgamaparibhāṣāmāñjarī, p. 87:

māti yatra jagat suptau sṛṣṭvā vā yāti sā tataḥ māyā tena samākhyātā tattvam uktaṃ gurūttamaiḥ.

But in our verse no word expresses that the kāraka relation is one of adhikaraṇa, no connection is suggested between the syllable yā and the verb yāti, and the context emphasises rather māyā's creative role: it is unlikely, therefore, that the nirvacana given by Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha is here intended.

³⁰⁸This is a stock example of a bodiless entity that is responsible for effects. Cf.,

It is the locus of all effects, just as the sky (suravartmavat) [is the locus] of the planets. At the time of a great resorption [of the universe] (mahākṣaye) its effects exist merged in it (tallīnāni) as potentials (śaktirūpāṇi). They become manifest with their own forms at its creation by His will.³⁰⁹ And the arising of effects [takes place] everywhere because of the all pervading cause that is Śiva.³¹⁰ (18–19)

Since in a great resorption [of the universe] (mahākṣaye) there is no other lower tattva than that [of māyā], those bound souls who are merged in māyātattva are called akala, 'devoid of kalā'. They are subject to the bond of innate impurity (malināḥ), their bodies are dissolved (mūrcchitākārāḥ), they are without power to act (niṣkriyāḥ), they are *pralayākala*s.³¹¹ (20) for example, Kiraṇa 3:10. But it is conceivable that the intended sense is rather: '... though it is formless... like the bodiless entity time'.

³¹⁰It may seem odd that the ablative is used of what is not a material (upādāna) cause but an instigating (nimitta) cause; but cf. Kiraṇa 1:16ab: tasyāśuddhasya sambandhaṃ samāyāti śivāt kalā. It is, however, also conceivable that śivāt is intended to qualify [māyā]-kāraṇāt as 'auspicious'; but it is more usual to see māyā described as aśivā (e.g. Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 2:8b, Mṛgendravidyāpāda 9:2a), or to see the attribute so placed that sandhi makes it impossible to judge whether śivā or aśivā is intended, e.g. South Indian Pauṣkara 3:2b and Mālinīvijayottara 1:26c, for a discussion of which see SANDERSON 1992:300ff.

(yāvat tatpakvatā tanoḥ).³¹² The souls, [still] subtle,³¹³ drawn by this³¹⁴ become turned towards experience (bhogāyābhimukhāḥ sthitāḥ). (21)

The Lord, using His powers (svaśaktiḥ),³¹⁵ shakes³¹⁶ her for the sake of [generating] bodies for them. Her becoming turned towards [the production of her] effects is [her] 'shaking', [which is brought about] by [the Lord's] shaking (kṣobhena). (22)

Once it is shaken, those souls are cast into this [saṃsāra in different places] according to [the retributive force of] their past actions. [We speak figuratively of] their 'being cast' (teṣāṃ kṣepaḥ) because they are placed in bodies (aṅganikṣepāt)³¹⁷ for the sake of revealing their power of consciousness (caitanyavyaktihetutaḥ). (23)

Cast into worlds where they can experience [the fruits of their past actions], they experience their own rewards (svabhogān anubhuñjate). The Lord first causes to evolve kalā, which is the [primary] means for enabling their experience.³¹⁸ Then that [kalā], being by the will of Śiva then engaged (āyuktā) in the creation of that [means to experience] (tatsṛṣṭau) for [souls], who lack the means [to create it for themselves] (vinimittānām), effects a slight (kiñcit) opening up of the power of knowledge for those [souls] whose consciousness is enveloped by impurity (ajñānāvṛtacetasām).³¹⁹ (24–5)

³¹²Of course the wording might allow the reverse: 'until [their] body becomes ready for them'; but it seems more likely that the souls should be said to ripen rather than their bodies, since the bodies do not yet exist. Since there is no verb in the second quarter, some might prefer to emend to an accusative (tatpakvatām) governed by yāvat.

³¹³Perhaps what is meant by this is that they still have no gross body.

³¹⁴Assuming an aiśa double sandhi of ākrṣṭāḥ + aṇavaḥ. The referent of the tena is not clear. Could it perhaps be kalātattva?

³¹⁵One could understand svaśaktiḥ to refer to the powers of māyā and take it in conjunction with the following tatkāryābhimukhībhāvaḥ.

³¹⁶Note the aiśa usage of the present participle kṣobhayan apparently as though it were a main verb (cf. 2:59c).

³¹⁸Tryambakaśambhu, whose reading is unfortunately corrupt in the crucial place, evidently understands that Śiva causes a partial revelation of a soul's karman (IFP T. 1102, pp. 20–1): atha tasyāśuddhasya māyīyakarmabhogārthaṃ śivād iti śivenānujñāto bhagavān anantesabhaṭṭārako māyāṃ vikṣobhya kāryābhimukhīṃ (conj. ISAACSON [letter of 22.x.2001]; vikṣobha kāryābhimukhāṃ MS) kṛtvā tadaiva kiñcit karmavyaktim utpādayati. tad uktaṃ parākhye 'tadbhogasādhanaṃ pūrvaṃ vyanaktīśaḥ †kalonnataḥ' iti tatas tenābhivyaktena karmaṇā kāryābhimukhamāyayā (conj.; kārye 'bhimukhamāyayā MS) sahātmano yaḥ sambandhas tasmāt sambandhād utpadyate kalā.

³¹⁹ex conj. For ajñāna as a synonym of mala see 4:162c below, Kiraṇa 2:19c–20

She is not directly perceptible (alakṣyā sā)³²⁰ because she is extremely subtle, like the faculty of touch, which [in spite of being imperceptible] is conjoined with [every part of] the body. [Through her] consciousness (saṃjñā) arises (bhavet) to a small degree (manāk) for the soul (tasya), just as [it does] for someone who has fainted (mūrcchitāṇoḥ) [when they are aroused] by water.³²¹ (26)

†Just as a man with fever (agnimān)†, becoming gradually released from the fever (śanair agnyaviruddhaḥ san) †by such means as the application of ceya (?)†,³²² is able [once more] to eat food, so too the soul, (quoted in fn. 464 on p. 276 below) and Mālinīvijayottara 1:23c (= Tantrāloka 1:23a). Note that when I translate kalā, I use the expression 'limited power to act', but it is common, when speaking of the first function of kalā, to talk of its enlivening of consciousness (caitanya yodbalana), cf., for example, Kiraṇa 1:16, Kiraṇavṛtti 4:28.3, Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 1:10, and Haravijaya 6:126. This may seem odd, but note that in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 2:5ab the soul's innate sentience (caitanya) is said to consist both in the power of knowledge and in the power of action: caitanyaṃ dṛkkriyārūpaṃ tad asty ātmani sarvadā. The same notion is expressed in the Parākhya in 2:70cd above and also in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 6:33cd: anenaivānumānena citir jñānakriyātmikā. Cf. also Paṣkara 5:3c–4a:

³²¹ I assume that the addition of aṇu at the end of the compound adds no shade of meaning. It is comparable to the ātman frequently added in the same position in verses of the Mataṅga, for which see introduction, p. liv. But perhaps, as Dr. DEZSŐ has suggested to me, we should consider emendation to mūrcchitānām: 'for people who faint'.

³²² The first half-line is hypometrical as transmitted. My translation assumes the correction of °bhir naraṃ to °bhir naraḥ, but since the verse as a whole is obscure, I have not incorporated this conjecture into the text. It is possible that some substance or remedy known to āyurveda is referred to here. It is uncertain to me whether agni can refer to fever.

But it is very possible that the verse once conveyed a quite different image, one similar to that found in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 9:28:

tathāṇuḥ kalayāviddho bhogañ chaknoti vāsītum.*

'Just as a clay vessel, once heated in the fire, is capable of holding the exudation of the Palāśa tree [thus Rāmakaṇṭha's gloss of jatu in the Mataṅgavṛtti ad loc.], so too the soul, once penetrated by kalā, is capable of taking aboard (?) experiences.'

Here the last pāda is essentially the same as our 4:28b, and it is possible that vāsītum is a corruption for vāñchitum or vice versa.

by being joined with kalā and the rest [of the evolutes of māyā], becomes able to desire experience. (27–28b)

[Kalā] has always (?) the form of the [limited] power of agency of souls;³²³ she increases their strength (tatsāmarthyopabṛṃhikā). (28)

And just as a medicinal herb,³²⁴ [though it is itself] insentient, because of its power [enlivens consciousness] in one who is tormented by poison, so too, in the [process of the] soul's attaining of a revelation of its [innate power of] consciousness, an instrument must necessarily be made, [and that instrument is:] kalā. [Only] then, when he has had his activity enlivened by kalā (kalodbalitavṛttikaḥ),³²⁵ does the soul (asau) become extroverted towards the objects of experience (viṣayānveṣī). (29)

Only in such a one [whose faculties have been enlivened by kalā] (tatraiva) does another instrument arise from kalā: limited power of knowledge (vidyā).³²⁶ When joined with [this] other instrument he becomes slightly fitter [for experience] (manāg yogyaḥ) and discriminates (vivecayet).³²⁷ (30)

Pratoda spoke:

Discrimination is [ordinarily] understood to be connected with the [faculty called] buddhi [and takes place] always [only] when objects have ³²³ Assuming that karṭṛrūpā is intended as an equivalent of karṭṛtvarūpā.

³²⁵ The use of the expression udbalita in connection with kalā is widespread (see, e.g., Mataṅgavidyāpāda 10:17c and the passages referred to in fn. 319 on p. 233 above).

³²⁶ The word karāṇa is here and in verse 35 pointedly used three times to refer to vidyā, for in other Śaiva literature (e.g. Tattvasaṅgraha 12, Tantrāloka 9:183, Mataṅgavṛtti ad vidyāpāda 10:4cd, all of which are cited in GOODALL 1998:206, fn. 138) vidyā is said to be the supreme instrument (param karāṇam).

³²⁷ There is a certain awkwardness in the bald use of yogyaḥ without some further qualification. One might therefore consider emending vivecayet to vivecane: '...he becomes to a small extent (manāk) capable of discrimination'.

It is possible that some text is missing from this passage, for note that in the above presentation of kalā, the verse that is quoted in the Bhogakārikāvṛtti 100c–101b is missing: uktaṃ ca śrīmatparākhyaḍau

karṭṛśaktiṃ vyanakty asya kalāsyātaḥ prayojikā tataḥ kalāsamāyukto bhoge 'ṇuḥ karṭṛkārakaḥ.

TORELLA (1998:62) suggests, supposing the verse to belong to the Parākhya, which indeed it might have, that it may be the earliest instance in which a kāraka-model, calqued from grammar, is used to explain the operation of the kañcukas.

been perceived. It cannot be connected with limited power of knowledge (vidyāyāḥ),³²⁸ since it is buddhi that illuminates itself and other

This is a stock objection on Sāṅkhya lines (cf. Mṛgendravidyāpāda 11:9ab and its answer in 11:14–15a, as well as the following passages, mentioned by TORELLA 1998:55, fn. 2: Mataṅgavidyāpāda 10:5 and 19, Tattvasaṅgraha 14–16, Bhogakārikā 93c–98b, Tattvapraśaṅga 47). In taking over the Sāṅkhya conception of a tripartite internal organ of ‘thought’ and at the same time adding above that in the evolutionary scale a tattva vidyā the Saiddhāntikas have to justify that these things fulfil different functions. As TORELLA (1998:55) observes, the kaṇcukas (kalā, vidyā, rāga, kāla, and niyati form ‘a foreign body with respect to the Sāṅkhya basis of tattvas...’, and further they give ‘the impression of doubles, having an uncertain status, so much so that not only all the Śaiva philosophers but also some of the Śaiva scriptures themselves feel bound to answer the objections they already foresaw in the opponents’ minds and to highlight the specificity, for example, of rāga ‘Attachment’ and vidyā ‘Science’ with respect to their seeming doubles avairāgya and buddhi.’

According to the Sāṅkhyakārikā (second half of 37), it is the buddhi that is responsible for discriminating between prakṛti and the soul: saiva ca viśiṇaṣṭi punaḥ pradhānapuruṣāntaraṃ sūkṣmam. The Śaiva justification for having vidyā as well is that buddhi cannot examine itself and therefore the soul must have a further instrument. See Sadyojyotiś’s argumentation in the Bhogakārikā (93c–98b):

ato 'sti karaṇaṃ vidyā buddhibodhāvivecinī

‘Without an instrument an agent is not known to act with respect to an object. Therefore there must exist an instrument: vidyā, which discriminates among the awarenesses of the intellect. [Objection:] the soul’s (tasya) intellect is like a lamp that illuminates itself and others: [thus] the soul has an instrument; what will he do with vidyā? [Response:] A lamp can be an instrument for the soul in perceiving stumps and such like external objects, but for perceiving the lamp the faculty of sight [is necessary as a further instrument]. We must accept that the same is the case for the intellect too [i.e. to grasp that too we require a further instrument]. For that [intellect], being itself not separate [from what it illuminates] (aviviktā) because of its being made up of the three guṇas, is not itself capable of displaying itself distinctly (vivekena) when it has taken on the form of external objects. And so vidyā, which is beyond the guṇas and separate (viviktā), is capable of displaying distinctly (vivekataḥ) the objects of experience (vedyaṃ) for the soul. There is no need to be excessively niggardly in this [viz. in acknowledging the existence of this 'extra' tattva vidyā].

The argument here in the Parākhya, though less clearly stated, runs along similar lines. Like Sadyojyotis's opponent in 94cd, Pratoda here points out in 4:31d that buddhi illuminates itself and other things; as in Sadyojyotis's response, here in 4:34 Prakāśa teaches that buddhi cannot take on the form of the object and then perform any operation of discriminating upon itself as having the form of that object. Why does Sadyojyotis make a point of emphasizing the contrast between buddhi being permeated by the guṇas and vidyā being above the guṇas? Presumably the answer is that, as we have seen above, viveka in the Sāṅkhya context is the salvific discrimination between soul, which is beyond the guṇas, and prakṛti, which is permeated by them: an entity which is of the guṇas should not be capable of serving as an instrument of seeing beyond them. But for Rāmakaṇṭha and other Saiddhāntikas, the viveka that is now assigned to vidyā rather than to the buddhi cannot have the same soteriological function. It seems rather to be a term that covers experiencing the various modes of knowing (discerning, remembering, etc) that the buddhi presents to it. See Rāmakaṇṭha's remarks in his Mataṅgavṛtti ad vidyāpāda 10:5: ... kiṃ ca sarvasya bhogabhogyādivyavahārasya aṅgaṃ buddhiḥ, adhyavasāyātmakatvāt. tasya ālīṅgane samvedane saiva [scil. vidyā] kṣamā bhavati. etad uktaṃ bhavati: adhyavasāyasmṛtipratibhādipratyaya-bhedabhinnaḥ buddhir api yayā vedyate 'sā vidyā tat paraṃ karaṇam' [Tattvasaṅgraha 12d]. yataḥ prakṛtisambandhinyā buddheḥ na tathā svātmānam eva grāhyatāpannam karaṇatvena ālīṅgane kṣamatvam, grāhyatvena bahiraṅgatvāt. iti vidyāsiddhiḥ. (Another passage in which Rāmakaṇṭha distinguishes the function of vidyā and buddhi is Kiraṇavṛtti 1:17.10–12, where we should remove a wrong 'emendation', for the text there should read vinivṛttamalasyāpi hi puṃsaḥ smṛtipratibhāvikaḥ pādivakṣyamāṇa-buddhivṛttyātmakārthasaṃvittau avāśyaṃ karaṇāntareṇa bhavitavyaṃ...) Cf. also the Śivatanuśāstra as cited in Tantrāloka 9:210ab: sukhaduḥkhasaṃvidam yā vivinakti paśor vibhāgena.

An early source that we may assume to have inspired Sadyojyotis's above-cited deliberations in the Bhogakārikā (and so those of others too) is the passage introducing kalā and vidyā and the immediately following tattvas in the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha (1:7–10a). This should probably be reconstituted on the basis of the testimony of M^Y, which was not collated for the edition of the beginning of the text (up to 4:41), and for which I am obliged to rely here on its apograph MS B 776 (ff. 27^v–28^r):

Prakāśa spoke:

First of all (tāvat)³²⁹ the perception of an object (arthālocanam)³³⁰ approaches the soul's (tasya) gateway [made up] of the [three internal] instruments (karaṇadvāram āśritam).³³¹ The cause for the setting in motion(?) of that [perception(?)] is the mind (manas); its [viz. the mind's] volition (tatsaṃkalpaḥ) takes place for one who [by means of the buddhi] discerns (adhyavasyataḥ). And for this [person] the object is located in the buddhi. The mind is [then] capable of conceptual constructions of it (tadvikalpe).³³² Buddhi (dhīḥ) presents (arpayet) the object to the

Partly because I constitute the text differently from the edition, my understanding of this passage differs in almost every respect from that offered by DAGENS and BARAZER-BILLORET (2000:499–500). I would interpret it, tentatively, as follows:

He [viz. Ananta] caused kalā to arise that is appropriate [to the soul] and that accompanies the soul [through saṃsāra]. Linked with this [kalā] the soul attains experience born of [i.e. consisting of] happiness and unhappiness. And [then he caused to arise] a further [instrument] (parām), vidyā, which makes [the soul] aware of the tattvas and of karman, which consists of merit and [demerit]. It is she] who causes souls to discriminate all the things that are good and bad. And [then he caused to arise] rāga, which impassions, whose nature is pleasure in the objects of the senses. Once He had caused prakṛti to arise out of this 'shaking', he created out of [the tattva] guṇa [all] the instruments and effects, beginning with [the instrument] buddhi.

³²⁹ ex conj. ISAACSON.

³³⁰ ex conj. ālocana has been preferred to locana because it is the term used in this context in Sāṅkhyakārikā 28 and, speaking of prediscursive awareness, in Ślokavārttika pratyakṣasūtra 112.

³³¹ ex conj. This appears to have been adopted as a technical term from the Mataṅga (or a related source), for see Mataṅgavidyāpāda 18:83:

bhūtaye bhūtanāthena nirmitaṃ karaṇaṃ tridhā.*

Cf. also Mataṅgavidyāpāda 18:86 and Mataṅgavidyāpāda 10:7 (quoted in the next footnote). Whether it was really intended as a technical term in the Mataṅga is perhaps open to doubt: note that kalā is also so characterised earlier in the text (vidyāpāda 9:16cd): sukhaduḥkhopabhogasya dvāram etat sadā citeḥ.

³³² 4:32d–33b seem problematic syntactically and surprising from the point of view of content and we should perhaps assume them to be corrupt or missing some text. In Sāṅkhya accounts we expect all three internal organs to be accounted for, the buddhi being responsible for discernment (adhyavasāya), ahaṅkāra for appropriation (abhimāna), knower [viz. the soul] (jñātre), [and] he [then] discriminates (vivekas tasya) by means of vidyā. (32–3)

Coloured by the object (artharaktā satī), the buddhi can be perceived as having the object's form (upalabhyā tadākṛtiḥ). Like a lamp whose and the manas for volition (saṅkalpa): ... mahato 'dhyavasāyo 'haṃkārasyābhimānaḥ saṅkalpo manaso vṛttiḥ... (thus Vācaspatimiśra ad Sāṅkhyakārikā 29). Cf. prose units 37–40 (the last of which is actually an orphaned half-line of anuṣṭubh) of Sarvajñānottara 3 in the edition of Tanjore:

sa eva manasā yukta indriyaiḥ saha yujyate.

It may seem surprising that the Sarvajñānottara contains prose, particularly to those familiar with its text only from the other (also partial) editions of Devakoṭṭai 1923 and Adyar 1998. As I have demonstrated (GOODALL, forthcoming B), these two editions are fundamentally unreliable and completely mislead the reader earlier in the text (their first chapter contains a distortive interpolation composed of 20 verses culled from the Sūtasamhitā on the subject of the rôle of dīkṣā); their text of this passage is in verse, whereas that of all the MSS I have been able to consult, as well as that of the in every respect more reliable Tanjore edition of 1933, is in prose. (For a further quotation from this prose passage, see fn. 348 on p. 245 below.)

Even with the help of Rāmakaṇṭha's Mataṅgavṛtti I am unfortunately not able to arrive at a satisfactory translation of this passage. Cf. also Mataṅgavidyāpāda 18:90c–91b:

grhīto 'rtho 'bhimānena khyātir adhyavasāyinī
nivedayati vidyāyā vidyayā vindate pumān.

[illuminated] objects are [both] itself and other things, it is [itself] the object of another instrument (karaṇāntaragocarā).³³³ (34)

An instrument [can be] dependent on an[other] instrument, just as in battle an elephant [uses its] trunk, [which uses] weapons.³³⁴ Therefore, because of [the evidence of] discrimination (vivekena), [we know that] vidyā must be a further instrument [that we exercise] upon what can be known (*jñeye*³³⁵). (35)

Otherwise there could then be no extroversion towards external objects (viṣayānveśaḥ) and [no] slight [capacity for] discrimination (vivekaś ca manāk). And then experience [would] plainly [be impossible] for the soul, and he would then lack the power to be liberated (na ca moktuṃ balaṃ tadā),³³⁶ because all the rest of the tattvas are subordinate [to vidyā] (śeṣatattvagunībhāvāt), just as a crane or such like [water bird] in the water [depends] on a [submerged] rock.³³⁷ (36)

³³⁵*ex conj.* The transmitted jñeyam is perhaps just possible, but awkward in conjunction with syāt: 'vidyā should (syāt) be understood to be (jñeyam) another instrument'.

³³⁶*ex conj.* Retaining what is transmitted and adding (with B) an accusative ending to bhoga might also be considered: 'And then the soul would plainly not have the power to experience his experience'. But in that case the second tadā becomes problematic. One might also consider emending to na ca bhoktuṃ balāntaram: 'and there is no other power [that enables one] to experience'.

³³⁷*ex conj.* I am far from certain that this is the intended image. If it is, then the syntax is problematic, for we must assume ellipse of a main verb such as adhiṣṭhati (with bakādiḥ as its subject) to account for the accusative śilām.

Among those [other tattvas] rāga binds the soul. It arises from kalā. The coarse [worldly] passion (rāgaḥ) that is directed at external objects (arthaviśayaḥ) is nourished by [this] subtle [principle called] rāga (sūkṣma-rāgopabṛṃhitāḥ).³³⁸ (37)

Infected by the subtle rāga (sūkṣmarāgoparaktaḥ), the coarse [passion] is to be known as its effect (sthūlas tatkāryalakṣitaḥ). This rāga of the soul is powerful, like red dye (kaṣāyaḥ) in a garment.³³⁹ [It is that] by which there then arises in the soul (asya) a slight tendency to lust (manāg laulyam) after external objects. (38)

Pratoda spoke:

Why not let the soul [just] have (astu tasya) the same attachment (yo rāgaḥ saḥ) that we [ordinarily] feel in this world (iha) towards external objects (viśayeṣu), since there would be no contradiction [if one were to adopt this position] (avirodhataḥ)?³⁴⁰ [And] the attachment that we

³³⁸The relatively sophisticated account of rāga given in these two verses (4:37–8)—sophisticated by comparison with what is offered in the Kiraṇa (1:17 and 3:1–5), Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha (1:10–12) and Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha (1:9ab)—is similar, even in its vocabulary, to that of the Mataṅga in vidyāpāda 11:5–7b:

yenoparakto laulyena rāgī samupalakṣyate sati tasmīn pradhānātmā sthūlas taṃ prati yuyjate ekībhūtas tataḥ paścād balavān jāyate kṣaṇāt yenābhībhūto bāhyeṣu pratyayeṣv anurajyate tenāyaṃ sukhadaḥ proktaḥ tadvīryeṇopabṛṃhitāḥ

'As a result of which [scil. subtle rāga] the soul becomes tainted (uparaktaḥ) by desire (laulyena) and is characterised as "im-passioned" (rāgī). When that [subtle rāga] is present, then the coarse [rāga] that is of the nature of secondary matter (pradhānātmā) is conjoined with the soul (taṃ prati). Once united [i.e. once the coarse rāga has joined the subtle], it then becomes straight away powerful. When the soul is overcome by it (yenābhībhūtaḥ), he is attracted to external sense objects. Therefore (tena) it is this [coarse rāga], once it is strengthened with the power of that [subtle rāga], that is taught to be that which bestows pleasurable [and painful] experience.' Rāmakaṇṭha's interpretation, particularly of 11:6cd, is evidently different, but it is not entirely clear to me. The interpretation of the anonymous commentary on the Mataṅga printed as an anubandha is different again: yena prākṛtarūpeṇa abhībhūtaḥ sa sa rāgo bāhyeṣu pratyayeṣu srakcandanavanitādiguṇagrahaṇabuddhiṣu anurajyate atiprītido bhavati.

³³⁹This image for rāga and the soul is used also in the Śivatanuśāstra as quoted in Tantrāloka 9:210cd: rāgaś ca kalātattvāc chucivastrakaṣāyavat samutpannaḥ.

³⁴⁰As we saw above with vidyā, the text must attempt to explain why there should be need of a kañcuka rāga when we already have other lower entities that might serve its function, in particular avairāgya, which is one of the eight qualities of the buddhi (cf. fn. 328 on p. 235 above) and which is sometimes referred to with the label rāga (e.g. in Mrgendravidyāpāda 10:24d).

observe towards even contrary things (viruddheṣv api) [must be just] exceedingly pronounced [attachment].³⁴¹ (39)

The sun (bhāsvān) spoke:³⁴²

Attachment comes about as a result of the accumulation of [the retributive force of past] actions (karmāśayaśāt); it does not come about for something 'contrary'.³⁴³ It is rather that (punaḥ) the same kind of karman has to be experienced as is determined to exist. (40)

And [the retributive force of] past action that the bound soul has to experience is of two kinds: dharma and adharma. There is attachment that is linked to dharma (dharmānubandhako rāgaḥ), and, different from it, there is attachment that is connected to adharma (tadanyo 'dharma-saṁśrayaḥ). (41)

Through the attachment that is the result of dharma the soul enjoys pleasure; he has sorrow from the [attachment that results from the] opposite of dharma (duḥkham asya vidharmataḥ). It is as a result of the destruction of that [karman] (tatksayāt... nimittāt) that the soul can become dispassionate (sa virajyeta), not from virāga.³⁴⁴ (42)

³⁴¹ ex conj. It is possible that nirniṭaḥ is rather an error for niścitaḥ, which is then an invitation for the use of that word in Prakāśa's reply. The question is not satisfactorily interpretable to me, and it is not clear how Prakāśa's reply deals with it. Nor have I been able to find a parallel account that appears to deal with the same concerns about rāga. In the more detailed discussions of rāga elsewhere, we commonly encounter four themes: 1) the distinction between coarse rāga (abhilāṣa) and subtle rāga (rāgatattva, abhilāṣahetu) [e.g. Kiraṇa 3:1-5 and, pregnantly, in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 10:11]; 2) the distinction between rāgatattva and avairāgya, one of the eight buddhidharmas [e.g. Tattvapraśāsa 48 and Mṛgendravidyāpāda 11:15 and commentary]; 3) the argument that we cannot appeal to external objects themselves as the causes of attachment, because that would entail that no person could ever become dispassionate [e.g. Tattvasaṅgraha 10 and Mṛgendravidyāpāda 11:15 and commentary; and 4) the assertion that we cannot appeal to other factors, such as māyā or karman, to account for attraction [e.g. Tattvasaṅgrahaṭīkā ad 10]. (More passages bearing on the treatment of rāga are adduced by TORELLA (1998:63ff).) But I cannot see how the second part of Pratoda's question might fit into any of these familiar discussions. The account of the Mataṅga too, which seems similar to ours up to this question of Pratoda's, appears thereafter to be of little help.

³⁴² This is the only instance in M' where Prakāśa is identified with the sun, but see introduction p. xl.

³⁴³ ex conj. ACHARYA. The conjecture is tentative.

³⁴⁴ What I assume is meant here is that, of the two kinds of rāga, the positive one that is the result of dharma can also be termed virāga, which, in this particular instance, is therefore not merely the absence of rāga, but a positive entity that is itself a kind of rāga. (Cf. Yogasūtras 2:7 and 2:8: sukhānuśayī rāgaḥ and duḥkhānuśayī dveṣaḥ.) True

Since this positive attachment (virāgaḥ), as well as [the other, negative] attachment (rāga eva vā) are caused by past action, how then (kasmāt) can a soul who is stained [by them] (raktaḥ) become dispassionate (virajyeta)? [True] dispassion [is surely possible only] of one who is without [any kind of] attachment (viraktasya virāgatā),³⁴⁵ because these two are dependent on past action (karmāyattau). Therefore this attachment resides in each individual's past actions. These three 'cuirasses' rest together in the subtle body.³⁴⁶ (43–4)

[The powers that are his self] are [partially] revealed when he is joined with a foetus (garbhasaṃyoge) once he has in due order (kramāt) been impelled (kalitaḥ) by the tattva of time (kālena). And time too is [a dispassion, a revulsion towards all that is worldly, is therefore something that comes about when one has neither the rāga that is the result of adharma nor that which is the result of dharma (here and in 4:43b confusingly referred to as virāga, even though virāgatā in 4:43d appears actually to refer to true revulsion towards all that is worldly).³⁴⁵ The sense is, I think, rāgarahitasyaiva virāgaḥ, where we must understand virāga in its more usual sense of dispassion, such as we find, e.g. in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 10:12, Mataṅgavidyāpāda 17:75, 78, 147, etc. If the interpretation offered is correct, the idea is certainly clumsily expressed.

³⁴⁶ As a term for the subtle body sūkṣmaliṅga does not appear to be common in Śaiva texts, but it is occasionally used, e.g. in Tryambakaśambhu's Kiraṇavivṛti ad 2:10 (IFP MS T.No. 1102, p. 36). As TORELLA points out (1998:58), kalā, vidyā, and rāga form a special inner group among the five kañcukas, such that these three alone are sometimes referred to with the term kañcuka even where the existence also of kāla and niyati is acknowledged (as here). Cf., for example, Mataṅgavidyāpāda 11:33c–34b, 12:1, 12:25, and 14:2. In the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha they are the only kañcukas, as we have seen in Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 1:7–9 (quoted in fn. 328 on p. 236 above), which is confirmed by 10:98–101. Accordingly they appear also to be the only three in the Śivatanuśāstra (as cited in Tantrāloka 9:208c–12b), for that text may well closely have followed the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha (see fn. 104 on p. lx above). Jayaratha ad loc., following the lead given by Abhinavagupta in his avatārikā in Tantrāloka 9:206ab, asserts that the Śivatanuśāstra too knows six kañcukas (including māyā as the sixth), arguing that kāla and niyati are not mentioned not because they are held not to exist but because they are purified (in initiation) when one purifies the other three, and to this effect he quotes a prose statement that he attributes to the Ruruvṛtti, and which therefore may have belonged to a lost section of Sadyojyotis's commentary on the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha (see introduction, p. lx): kalādibhir eva śuddhais tac chuddham draṣṭavyam ity abhiprāyato 'nābhidhānaṃ nābhāvāt. (It would not be surprising to find Sadyojyotis reading these missing tattvas into the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha, for, as we have seen (fn. 302 on p. 229), he reads them into Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 2:9.) In fact the Śivatanuśāstra does appear to refer to three other entities as kañcukas (in Tantrāloka 9:208ab), but these are mala, māyā, and Śiva (by which is presumably meant his nirodhaśakti).

constitutive part] in the subtle body (sūkṣmadehasthaḥ). It is known (lakṣyate) through its having characterising signs (liṅgayogataḥ). (45)

Those signs are such [cognitions] as 'second', going up to 'aeon' (tuṭyādyam... mahākālpāvasānakam).³⁴⁷ They cause one to infer time (kālasya gamakaṃ tat), since time is that which 'divides' (kalayitā). (46)

³⁴⁷When quoted in the Mataṅgavṛtti ad vidyāpāda 12:25–17b the line begins with udājyaṃ, of which I can make no sense. I assume therefore that this is no more than an accidental corruption that can be partly explained away by palaeography: in Śāradā script the graphs for tu and ṭa can be confusingly similar to those for u and dā. Cf. Rāmakaṇṭha's Kiraṇavṛtti ad 1:18cd and cf. towards the beginning of the kālaprakaraṇa (1.6.68) in the Praśastapāda-bhāṣya: kṣaṇalavanimeṣakāṣṭhākālāmuhūrtayāmāhorātrārddhamāsamāsartvayanasamvatsarayugakalpamanvantarapralayamahāpralayavyavahārahetuḥ.

The smallest division mentioned is the tuṭi (or truṭi; but see GOODALL 1998:lxix for a defence of the other orthography) also in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 10:14ab, Mataṅgavidyāpāda 25:12c–13b, Mālinīvijayottara 1:29cd and Niśvāsa guhyasūtra 7:23, f. 62^v.

the female seed (sa-raktam), becomes a kalala.³⁴⁸ The kalala [next ³⁴⁸This is the smallest form of the embryo. According to a quotation in the Abhidharmakośabhāṣya ad 3:19abc (p. 130), there are five stages:

kalalaṃ prathamam bhavati kalalāj jāyate 'rbudaḥ arbudāj jāyate peśī peśīto jāyate ghaṇaḥ ghanāt praśākhā jāyante keśaromanakhādayaḥ.

This has the appearance of a Sanskrit rendering of a non-Sanskrit verse (note that bhavati renders it unmetrical), and indeed it corresponds to a portion of the Yakkha-samyutta (Samyuttanikāya X 1,3) quoted in SUNESON's useful article on embryological terminology (1991:112):

*pathamaṃ kalalaṃ hoti kalalā hoti abbudaṃ
abbudā jāyate peśī peśī nibbattati ghano ghanā pasākhā jāyanti kesā lomā nakhāni ca.*

The earliest non-Buddhist classification that SUNESON quotes (1991:111) is that of Mahābhārata 12.308:116–17:

*bindunyāsādayo 'vasthāḥ śukraśoṇitasambhavāḥ
yāsām eva nipātena kalalaṃ nāma jāyate kalalād arbudotpattiḥ peśī cāpy arbudodbhavā peśyās tv aṅgābhinirvṛttir nakharomāṇi cāṅgataḥ.*

A number of variant accounts that use overlapping terminology are to be found (see, e.g., Bhāgavatapurāṇa 3.31:2–3, and for others see SUNESON 1991). But the first three stages of the above quoted lists are common to a number of early sources. (One demonstrably early Purāṇic account that was not accessible to SUNESON is that of Ur-Skandapurāṇa 176:7c–10.)

In the classification that the Parākhyā appears to be using, the second stage is called budbuda and the third māṃsapeśī. Admittedly 4:47d as transmitted in M^y reads māse peśītvam āgatam; but māṃsapeśī appears to be the terminology of both versions of the Sarvajñānottara, for which see below. The same confusion (māse for māṃsa^o) is to be found in the secondary verse account given in the Devakoṭṭai edition of the Sarvajñānottara that has replaced the original prose, for 3:28d–30b of the Devakoṭṭai edition reads as follows:

pañcarātreṇa kalalaṃ budbudākārātāṃ vrajet budbudaṃ saptarātreṇa māse peśī bhavet punaḥ dvisaptāhād bhavet peśī raktamāṃsac citā dṛḍhā.*

In the Parākhyā it is merely probable that māse has to be corrected to māṃsa^o, but in this just quoted passage it seems to me certain that it must (the Adyar edition has, however, reproduced māse): I understand the passage to say that a kalala comes about in one day, a budbuda in five, a māṃsapeśī in seven, and that this same peśī [viz. the māṃsapeśī] becomes 'firm' in two weeks. I mention this because SUNESON (1991:113), when discussing the last two of the above half-lines (reading māṃsapeśī bhavet punaḥ and raktamāṃsacitā) as they appear quoted in the Śabdakalpadrūma from the text of the Sukhabodha (which he describes as 'a late unpublished comprehensive medical kośa work probably composed in 1568 by a certain Vaidyarāja') interprets them as explaining māṃsapeśī and peśī to be two different stages, the first 'covering the period from the 8th to the 14th day', and the second, i.e. peśī, taking 'the fourth position in the series, usually designated ghana'. This interpretation is not borne out by the context offered by the Devakoṭṭai version of the Sarvajñānottara. Furthermore SUNESON (1991:109) characterises māṃsapeśī as a new term 'probably coming into use during the 16th century'. The evidence of the Parākhya and of the primary prose passage of the Sarvajñānottara that is quoted below shows that the term is several centuries older. (Dr. ISAACSON, in a letter of 2.xii.2001, has pointed out to me that there is also the evidence of Candrānanda's commentary on Vaiśeṣikasūtra 5.2.19.) It seems that peśī and māṃsapeśī appear as alternative designations of the third stage, just as (as SUNESON observes, 1991:111, fn. 10) arbuda and budbuda do of the second stage.

The text-units numbered 19–30 in the original prose passage of the third chapter of the Sarvajñānottara appear thus in the Tanjore edition:

ekarātroṣitaṃ kalalaṃ; pañcarātreṇa budbudam saptarātreṇa māṃsapeśī sambhavati dvisaptarātreṇa māṃsapinḍākṛtir bhavati māsād abhyantare bāhur aṃso jāyate māsadvayena hastapādāṅguṣṭhādayo jāyante tribhir māsair jarāyusnāyutvaṃmarmāṇi bhavanti caturbhir māsair vaṃśapṛṣṭhe udaraṃ kaṭiś ca bhavanti pañcabhir māsaiḥ śīrolalāṭakarṇanāsā bhavanti ṣaḍbhir māsaiś chidrāṇi bhavanti saptabhir māsaiḥ śarīrasya vyaktir bhavati aṣṭabhir māsaiḥ pūrṇākṛtir bhavati navabhir māsaiḥ samāyuktacetano bhavati.

This prose section has in the Devakoṭṭai edition of the Sarvajñānottara (and in the Adyar edition that, in spite of its claim to be based on MSS, plainly derives from the Devakoṭṭai edition) been entirely replaced by the secondary verse passage from which we have quoted above and in which all but the first three stages differ (bhūtātmaprakaraṇa 3:28ff). In this the Devakoṭṭai and Adyar editions diverge from all the other sources of the Sarvajñānottara that I have been able to consult, including the early Nepalese MS (in which only the tail end of this prose portion survives) and the MSS of the twelfth-century Sarvajñānottaravṛtti of Aghoraśiva. Their diverging texts rejoin each other with what is the second half of 3:44 in the Devakoṭṭai edition and the second half of 3:43 in the Tanjore edition. (For a further quotation from this passage see fn. 332 on p. 238 above.) Note that this passage provides much earlier evidence of māṃsapinḍa being used to designate a stage in the embryonic development than the Kṛṣṇacaritranāṭaka, the eighteenth-century Nepalese drama to which SUNESON refers (1991:119–20).

Some Śaiva sources name only the first two stages, the kalala and the budbuda: Mataṅgavidyāpāda 19:26ff, Vāyupurāṇa I.14:17 (quoted by SUNESON 1991:112), and Tryambakaśambhu's Kiraṇavivṛti ad 1:18 (IFP MS T.1102, p. 23). (The latter two give the rarer form kalana for kalala.)

Note that though the terminology of the first three stages is shared by a wide range becomes] bubble-shaped (budbudākāram), [then] it becomes a māmsa-peṣī. (47)

It next becomes complete, equipped with [all its] major and subsidiary limbs (aṅgapratyaṅgasambaddham). In its rising, its perduring, its perishing, it is this time that is what impels it (sa kālaḥ kalanātmakaḥ). (48)

Just as [time] is said to be connected with the foetus, so too it is to be understood to be connected from the beginning [i.e. beginninglessly, independent of particular embodiments]. Not otherwise can the three [modes of time] (nānyathā tritayam), which exist before [the soul is linked to] the foetus (garbhapūrvakam),³⁴⁹ be connected with the soul (tasya yujyate). (49)

Past time, future time, as well as the time that is now passing, (yaḥ kālo vartamāno 'pi)³⁵⁰ are connected. Without time [the soul] could not be conceived of as †having any part (?) of action, subtle or gross (sūkṣma-sthūlakriyāṃśakaḥ)†.³⁵¹ (50) of texts (either arbuda or budbuda quite likely arose because of error out of the other, and peṣī and māmsapeṣī are, as we have seen, in origin probably the same), it is not just their sequence and the amount of time that each phase lasts that varies enormously. Thus in the Aṣṭāṅgaḥṛdaya, śārīrasthāna 1:49cd, we read: dvitīye māsi kalalād ghaṇaḥ peśy athavārbudam. For a brief discussion of these terms in the medical tradition, according to which the peṣī is the form taken by the female embryo and the arbuda that taken by the male, see SUNESON 1991:113–14.

³⁴⁹Or perhaps we should interpret ‘which depend [for their operation on the soul] on the foetus’. Both interpretations seem conceivable to me. On the one hand the text might be asserting that the bound soul is connected with time independently of its being linked to a particular embodiment—unless souls are connected with, i.e. subject to, time, they could not come to be embodied at all; the very fact that at some point in time a foetus starts to arise means a difference for the soul between an earlier state and a state in which the foetus first arises. In this case it is not only within the states of the foetus that we see temporal differentiation. On the other hand the text might be stressing that time does not actually act upon a particular soul unless that soul is embodied. Cf. the end of Sadyojyotiś’s Svāyambhuvavṛtti ad 1:10, justifying that the tantra there mentions the first three kañcukas but not time or niyati: kālaniyatyoś ca pravṛttaprayojakatvād atrāgrahaṇam. kālo hi pravṛttam eva puruṣaṃ truṭyādibhiḥ kalayati. niyatir api pravṛttam eva yatra karmaphalaṃ tatra niyamayatīti. I have chosen to assume that the text asserts that time is connected with bound souls even when they are not embodied on the grounds that the other possibility appears to conflict with the only interpretation of 4:50cd that seems conceivable.

³⁵⁰This is a slightly laboured formulation; but it would be over-interpreting to suggest that it is intended to hint at the problem that present time is sometimes said to be unknowable (for which cf. Mataṅgavidyāpāda 12:7c–14b).

³⁵¹This follows the suggestion of Dr. ISAACSON (letter of 2.xii.2001), which makes Binding fate (niyati) is to be understood [to be so-called] because of the compulsion [that she exerts] (niyamāt). She is that which binds to the bound soul [the fruits of his particular] past actions. She is empowered to bind for [all] three [modes of time]. Not otherwise is [this] binding held to be. (51)

Pratoda spoke:

In binding past actions [to particular souls] since past action itself [can be] the agent of binding (karma eva niyāmakam), [determining] what [action] (yat) [accrues] to whom (yasmin), how large it is (yāvat), and in what way, what is the purpose [then] of [positing this imperceptible entity] niyati?³⁵² (52)

Prakāśa spoke:

If binding were to be produced [as an effect] of past action, then let intellection too be an effect of past action (dhiṣaṇā tarhi karmajā). If the revelation of the power of consciousness (cidvyaktiḥ) were to be produced by past action, then what need would there be of the mind?³⁵³ (53)

Then it would [in turn] obtain that the eyes and other senses were pointless (akṣāṇām cakṣurādīnām vaiyarthyam).³⁵⁴ Therefore that which sense if 4:49cd indeed makes the point that bound souls must be subjected to time regardless of whether they are embodied. Here kriyāṃśa might refer to degrees of manifestation of kriyāśakti, the soul's power of action. Rāmakaṇṭha refers to coarse and subtle degrees of revelation of the power of action in his Tattvatrayanirṇayavṛtti ad verse 6: ...dīkṣādīnā...asya...kriyāśakteḥ sthūlasūkṣmaparabhedenā vyaktatvād... (f. 109^r).

I had earlier emended gamyah to garbhaḥ and translated: 'The foetus cannot be without time...'. This might fit with the other interpretation of 4:49, but it would probably rule out the above interpretation of 4:50d.

³⁵²This is a stock objection. Cf. Mṛgendravidyāpāda 10:15:

*śasādhanaśya bhogasya karmatantratayā jaguḥ
kecin niyāmakam karma yad anyad atiricyate*

'They say that experience, as well as the means [of experience], are in the control of [the retributive force of] past actions. Some hold [this retributive force of] past actions to be that which determines [which fruits accrue to whom]; as for that other [entity that is postulated to perform this function, niyati], it is superfluous.'

³⁵³There are a number of ways in which this could be interpreted. The word dhiṣaṇā one would expect to refer to buddhi (as below in 4:74b) or to its functions and cidvyakti to refer to what is done by either kalā or vidyā rather than by the manas. Thus one could understand 4:53b to refer to a different corollary from 4:53cd, or one could assume that 4:53bcd all refers to the same corollary. Fortunately this interpretative decision cannot affect the argument, for which see the next footnote.

³⁵⁴As commonly in defences of the existence of the kañcukas, the argument (here binds a soul's past action [to himself] (tatkarmaṇaḥ...yat tu niyāmakam) is taught to be a tattva.³⁵⁵ (54)

That on which the controlling power (niyāmikā śaktiḥ) †that is in time as well as in niyati†³⁵⁶ acts is in this system (atra) [known as] the tattva of the [bound] soul (pauruṣaṁ tattvaṁ); it 'fills' the path of creation below it (adhomārgāvapūrakam).³⁵⁷ (55) implicit) is that each imperceptible entity in the tattvakrama actually accounts for a different known effect, and that if one were to heap a number of these effects on to one imperceptible entity, then there would be no reason to stop the reductionism, and the absurd consequence would be that even the existence of the sense-faculties, which are not directly perceptible, could not be defended. Cf. Rāmakaṇṭha's elegant expression of the principle in Kiraṇavṛtti 1:17.6-8: na hi yat kāryāntarānyathānupapattyā saṁsiddhasattākam atyantātīndriyaṁ vastu tat kāryāntarakāraṇatvena śakyam adhyavasātum anekendriyādikāraṇāntarakṣipter apy abhāvaprasaṅgāt. 'For some utterly transcendental entity whose existence has been established on the grounds that one particular effect cannot otherwise be accounted for cannot be claimed as the cause of another; for if it could, one would have to admit that there is also no need to postulate any other cause, including the various sense-faculties.'

³⁵⁵Here tatkarmaṇaḥ is taken as a compound, but one could split it and take the tat as the correlative to the following yat: 'What binds past action, that is taught to be a tattva'. A more natural word-order would then be: yat tu niyāmakaṁ karmaṇaḥ, tat tattvaṁ proktam.

These two verses (4:53-4) are comparable to the refutation of the same objection in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 10:16-17:

bhogo 'rthaḥ sarvatattvānāṁ so 'pi karmanibandhanaḥ karmaivāstu śārīrādi tataḥ sarvaṁ apārthakam atha dehādisāpekṣaṁ tat pumarthaprasādhakam tato niyatisāpekṣaṁ astu karma niyāmakam

³⁵⁷A nirvacana of puruṣa is implied; hence this choice of words. Cf. Mataṅgavidyāpāda 14:3-4b:

*yasmāt pradhānam utkaṇṭhād āpūrayati bhāvitaḥ
tasmāt pumbhāvasāmarthyāt pañcāvayavalakṣitaḥ puṣṇāti prakṛtiṁ yasmāt tasmāt puruṣa ucyate*

In his Mataṅgavṛtti ad loc. Rāmakaṇṭha interprets this as follows: utkaṇṭhā vidyate kāryatvena yasya, asau utkaṇṭhaḥ rāgaḥ, tasmān nimittāt. yataś ca puṁs-tattvamalasāmarthyena bhāvitaḥ kalādipañcatattvayukta eva pradhānaṁ bhogya- tvena āpūrayati; prakṛtiṁ ca puṣṇāti tato 'pi nimittāt sa eva puṁstattvaṁ ity ucyate. The same nirvacana is perhaps intended to be implied in Mṛgendra 10:18:

This is taught to be the place of the [eight] yogins,³⁵⁸ the pinnacle of the realm of [secondary] matter (avyakta-grhaśekharam).³⁵⁹ This is also the 'eternal place' [viz. the liberated state that can be achieved] through ever cultivating consciousness (sadā caitanyabhāvataḥ).³⁶⁰ The

āpūrakam pradhānāder bhauvane rudrasaṃśrayam.*

Also comparable is Mataṅgavidyāpāda 12:25–27b:

kalito 'dhomukho jantuḥ kañcukair avagunṭhitaḥ na vijānāti ruddhātma mahāmāyāṃ yataḥ paśuḥ paśutvāt, kalitaḥ kṣipraṃ kālenānantatejasā niyatyākhyena tattvena sa ca paścān niyamyate yena pumbhāvam āyāti jagadāpūraṇaṃ prati.

As Dr. ISAACSON has pointed out to me (letter of 19.xii.2001), the association with pūrayati appears already in Yāska's Nirukta (2.3) and in Mahābhārata 5.68:10 and 5.160:3. Cf. also the nirvacana of TATPURUṢA given in Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 10:30–1.

³⁵⁸These are presumably the bhuvanas of the yogins elsewhere called the yogāṣṭaka. These are commonly placed in guṇatattva, but it is not inconceivable that they should be here, because the tantras differ about which tattvas they accept at this level of the universe (see GOODALL 1998:lii–lv). In the Svāyambhuvāsūtrasaṅgraha (4:38–9) they are placed in pradhāna; in the Mrgendra (vidyāpāda 13:144–148b), the Kiraṇa (8:120–121b), the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 16:25–32, where, in 29c, we must either read ribhos with the Kashmirian MSS or emend to ṛbhos, in place of BHATT's vibhos), in the Ur-Pauṣkara as quoted in the Siddhāntasamuccaya (IFP T.No. 206, p. 81 and IFP T.No. 284, p. 148) and in the Sarvajñānottara (90c–94 of the adhvaprakaraṇam as transmitted in IFP T.Nos. 334 and 760) they are placed in guṇatattva. They are: akṛta, kṛta, raibhava (often erroneously given as bhairava, but what is intended is a derivative from the name Ṛbhu), brāhmya, vaiṣṇava, kaumāra, auma, and śraikaṇṭha. It is a peculiarity of the Parākhya's account of the tattvādhvan (chapter 5) that it mentions regents of the tattvas (which appear not to be given in other tantras, but have passed into the paddhati-literature, for see GOODALL 2000:216, fn. 41) and not bhuvanas. Thus in 5:149a we learn that Sūkṣmadeha rules over pumstattva; but it is only here that we learn that the yogāṣṭaka too is situated herein. For more on the aṣṭakas, see fn. 620 on p. 314 below.

³⁶⁰Perhaps my assumption that bhāva is irregularly used here as though it were bhāvanā is not warranted; one could render this instead with 'because consciousness ones situated [there] in [this] resort of Rudras³⁶¹ are, although they are yogins, deluded.³⁶² (56–57b)

Because [he is now] a [bound] soul (pum̐bhāvāt) by being connected to the subtle [body],³⁶³ he moves with binding fate (niyatya saha sarpati).³⁶⁴ (57cd)

From kalā arises the unmanifest (avyaktam), the cause of [all] manifest effects (vyaktakāryanibandhanam). She is called prakṛti because she creates her creation (kṛtim). (58)

Or [she is so-called] because the experience (?) (pratyayaḥ) that souls have that is of the nature of doubt is derived from prakṛti (prākṛtaḥ).³⁶⁵ She is the material cause for bodies and effects, both subtle always exists there'.

³⁶¹The label rudrasaṁśraya is used of puruṣatattva also in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 10:18 (quoted in fn. 357 on p. 248 above). Following Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha's commentary ad loc., Trilocanaśiva in his Siddhāntasamuccaya does not interpret this literally, for he quotes Mṛgendravidyāpāda 10:18 with the following introduction (IFP T. No. 284, p. 164 and T. No. No. 206, pp. 99–100): nanu puruṣatattve 'pi keṣu cic chāstreṣu bhuvanāni śrūyante. satyam. tadadhipatīnām rudrānām āśrayatvena bhuvanāni śrūyanta eva. tāni tu puruṣasya cetanatvena bhuvanādhāratvāyogāt pum̐stvamalasambandhasamānadeśarāgatattva evāvasthitāni. ata eva śrīmanmṛgendre... The justification offered for locating these worlds in rāga is that the Kiraṇa (in 8:125ab, quoted in the previous footnote) locates the puruṣa there. This the Sarvajñānottara also does in verse 106 of its adhvaprakaraṇa (IFP T. No. 334, p. 66 and T. No. 760, p. 48).

³⁶²This seems comparable to the instances in other works of placing the liberated states of followers of other doctrines in particular tattvas. Cf., e.g., the beginning of the liṅgoddhāraprakaraṇa of the Sarvajñānottara (IFP T. No. 334, p. 96); South Indian Pauṣkara 6:68–76 and Somaśambhupaddhati vratoddhāra 7–8 (BRUNNER 1977:553).

³⁶³This might be taken as an indication that the Parākhya regards the subtle body as constituted of these top tattvas only rather than of all the lower tattvas, as is the position of the Mataṅga and Rāmakaṇṭha. It seems indeed from 4:62–4 that Prakāśa is using the word sthūla to refer to the effects below avyakta, and the sūkṣma to refer to the effects above it. The change of subject is surprising, but we are in fact only returning, after a digression, to the main theme: the soul being gradually empowered for experience after a phase of pralaya.

³⁶⁴I.e. whatever he does, niyati accompanies him and ensures that he gets his just deserts in accordance with his karman. The choice of the verb sarpati may seem odd, but cf. Mataṅgavidyāpāda 13:1cd: śaktir niyāmikā pum̐saḥ saha tattvena sarpitā. Elsewhere too (e.g. Mataṅgavidyāpāda 14:1; Svāyambhuvāsūtrasaṅgraha 1:8 and Aghoraśiva's commentary on Sarvajñānottara, bhūtātmaprakaraṇa 7 [IFP MS 47818, p. 115]) the verb appears to be used of moving about in saṁsāra in accordance with or for the sake of experiencing one's karman.

³⁶⁵This nirvacana is obscure to me. The range of possible meanings for pratyaya here and gross.³⁶⁶ (59)

Since she gives forth (pradhatte) her creation, [this] cause is therefore [also called] pradhānam.³⁶⁷ Without a cause how could the effects that are the buddhi and so forth come into being? (60)

Pratoda spoke:

Since that [prakṛti] is [both] cause and effects [in the sense that it produces effects], what is the use of kalā and the others that are posited?³⁶⁸ For would not the purposes of the soul be served³⁶⁹ by the soul's being united with its effects [alone]? (61)

Prakāśa spoke:

[But] how could the mind and the other [necessary effect]s come about? An effect is taught [to be produced] from [another] effect. Therefore that which is linked [with the soul] (niyuḥyate) before what is coarse must be different from it [and relatively] subtle.³⁷⁰ (62)

And because of that which is subtle [viz. the soul] being connected to the subtle [body(?)] (sūkṣmayogitvāt) connection may then [follow] (punaḥ) with the gross [body(?)].³⁷¹ For souls the bond that consists of kalā and those others is like dye in a white garment (svacchavāsaḥkaṣāyavat).³⁷² (63)

³⁶⁶The ādi in this compound seems to be otiose.

³⁶⁷The nirvacana offered in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 15:5c-6 is as follows: prakṛtyā dhāritam śakte svodare vinipātya tu/ tasmāt pradhānaśabdena tattvam uktaṁ sanātanam.

³⁶⁸Perhaps the following interpretation is also conceivable: 'What is the use of kalā and the others that are posited to stand in a relation of cause and effect to this [prakṛti]?'

³⁶⁹*ex conj.* Other emendations could be considered: narārthāvirbhavo na kim could be interpreted to give the same sense and would be palaeographically closer to the transmitted reading.

³⁷⁰Dr. ISAACSON (letter of 19.xii.2001) has suggested to me the following alternative interpretation of the second half: 'Therefore there must be a subtle entity, different from those [i.e. from buddhi etc.], which is linked [with the soul] before what is coarse [can be produced and likewise linked with the soul].'

³⁷¹The interpretation is far from certain here. It is plain that Prakāśa is distinguishing two groups of effects: the relatively coarse group that emanate from prakṛti, and the relatively subtle group above that. What is not plain is whether he intends to equate these with the gross and subtle bodies respectively. The evidence of 4:66a rather suggests that he does not, but cf. also 4:57 and note ad loc.

³⁷²*ex conj.* Instead of this small emendation, one could consider svacche vāse kaṣāyavat. But, as Dr. ISAACSON has pointed out to me (letter of 19.xii.2001), the

The other [bond], which consists of the buddhi and the others, is a powerful intoxicant (rāgaḥ sāndraḥ); by it the soul is impassioned (anurajyate). These are the various effects and causes (kāryakāraṇabhedo 'yam), divided into subtle and gross (sūkṣmasthanulavibhāgataḥ). (64)

The group of kalā and the others is there for the soul (asya) in just the same way as the group [of effects] beginning with buddhi is: all their efforts are for the sake of the soul (narārthaḥ sarvasaṃrambhaḥ). The aims of the soul (narārthaḥ) are impossible [to achieve] (na) without a body (tanūjjhitāḥ).³⁷³ (65)

And for that [body] (tasyāś ca) [there must] first [be] connection with kalā [etc.], and afterwards buddhi and the rest may arise. Just as the seed of buddhi and the rest is prakṛti, so too [that prakṛti] is born of kalā etc. (66)

Since [these] effects are insentient (kṛter acitsvabhāvatvāt), and because of the soul's [condition of] impotence (pūṃsaś cākartṛbhāvataḥ), there must be a cause that joins him [with it] (tadyoge kāraṇam): that [cause] is proclaimed to be the Lord (khyātaḥ sa īśvaraḥ),³⁷⁴ for he has the power. (67)

His instrument is His will;³⁷⁵ it is His power that is inseparable (śaktir abhinnā), like the power [of yogins attained] by yoga.³⁷⁶ With that [power] He unites [each soul] with his body (tatkāye), in order that he may consume the accumulated [fruits of his past actions] (svārjitāśanahetaḥ). (68)

Since prakṛti is the cause of the guṇas, the guṇas are definitely effects, since their own effects (yenātmakāryāṇi) are produced from them as effects (kāryataḥ) separately.³⁷⁷ (69) consonant stem seems to be more widely attested in Śaiva texts, and it is used in the same image in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 8:41.

³⁷³Cf. Kiraṇa 4:29ab: na dehena vinā muktir na bhogaś cit kriyā guruḥ.

³⁷⁴Note the aiśa double sandhi of sa+īśvaraḥ.

³⁷⁵*ex conj.* The emendation of kāraṇam to kaṇam is perhaps not necessary, but it is preferred for two reasons: the cause has just been identified as the Lord; and the Lord's will is identified as an instrument in Kiraṇa 3:11ab, icchaiva kaṇam tasya yathā sadyogino matā.

³⁷⁶It seems to me likely that the power of yogins attained by yoga is intended (cf. Kiraṇa 3:11b quoted in the previous footnote), and one could therefore consider emending to yogisaktivat.

Awakening, impelling, and blocking—these exemplify, in order, [their] effects. Since she [prakṛti] must be common [to them all], just as the ego-principle (ahamkṛtiḥ) [is common] amongst [all] the faculties [of sense and action], their locus (*ādhāram*³⁷⁸) is established to be the unmanifest (avyaktam); that which is manifest is established to be the production of effects (kāryavidhiḥ sthitam). Since their activities are mutually supportive (anyonyāśrayavṛttitvāt),³⁷⁹ [a single] activity (kriyā) of the guṇas can be [said to be] discerned (lakṣyate). (70–1)

[Thus] this group of three may fittingly be one tattva, the locus of Rudras.³⁸⁰ The name ‘quality’ (guṇasaṃjñā) applies to the guṇas because the soul adopts their qualities (tadguṇasaṃśrayāt).³⁸¹ (72)

Could they not belong to others too (anyeśāṃ api kiṃ na syuḥ)? But they are held to be all-pervading.³⁸² According to this system, the activity tataś ca guṇānām ācāitanye saty anekatvāt tatkāraṇatayā guṇamastakasthakrodheśādibhuvanopādānatvena cāvyaktākhyā prakṛtiḥ siddhā. tad uktaṃ śrīmatparākhye. . .

• tatkāraṇatayā] BCD; kāraṇatayā A • guṇamastakasthakrodheśādi°] B; guṇamstatasthaḥ krośādi° A; guṇamastakasthaḥ/ krodhosādi° C; guṇamastakasthaḥ ko ye sādhi° D • cāvyaktākhyā prakṛtiḥ] CD; ca vyaktaḥaṭaprakṛti A; cāvaktā eṣā prakṛtiḥ B

It is then followed (except in MS T. No. 206) by the quotation of Bhogakārikā 88c–89b (cited in fn. 413 on p. 264 below) and, in MSS C and D, 89cd. We might be led to infer from this that Trilocanaśiva interpreted it to express both that the guṇas are effects of prakṛti and that this can be known because they are plural and insentient. But it is the quoted unit of the Bhogakārikā that expresses this; with our verse Prakāśa seems to intend to emphasize that the guṇas form a separate tattva (unlike for the Sāṅkhyas), since they produce their own separate effects.

³⁷⁸The use of this word as neuter may be an original aiśa feature of the language, and so it has been retained. One could, however, emend to ādhāraḥ.

³⁷⁹The wording echoes the second half of Sāṅkhyakārikā 12: anyonyābhibhavāśraya-jananamithunavṛttayaś ca guṇāḥ.

³⁸⁰Cf. Mṛgendravidyāpāda 10:21:

*trayo guṇās tathāpy ekaṃ tattvaṃ tadaviyogataḥ
ekaikaśrutir eteśāṃ vṛtyādhikyanibandhanā.*

‘The three guṇas are nevertheless one tattva, because they are inseparable. Their being mentioned individually in scripture is occasioned by the predominance of [one or other of] their functions.’

³⁸¹Or perhaps ‘because the soul adopts them as qualities’?

³⁸²The point here appears to be that they cannot be ‘possessed’ as ‘qualities’ by any non-pervasive entity, but they can be ‘possessed’ by the soul, which is yet more pervasive. But their relationship cannot be one of saṃyoga, for see 1:41 and note that belongs to them (vṛttir ihānvitā) [is directed] towards [respectively] awakening, setting in motion, and deluding. (73)

From that same tattva comes forth buddhi (dhiṣaṇā), with its eight constituent parts (aṣṭāṅgasamṃyutā): dharma, jñāna, vairāgya, and aśīśvarya, through which the sāttvika [guṇa is to be known]; because of adharma the rājasa [guṇa] is to be known, and ajñāna is a property of tamas (ajñānaṃ yat tamoguṇam).³⁸³ (74–75b)

When, because of the suppression of rajas and tamas, [a soul] abounds in sattva (sattvasamutkāṭaḥ), then [that] soul will have a clean mind for engaging in dharma (dharmasamārambhe puṃsaḥ śuddhā matiḥ). Engaged in that [dharma(?)] (tatpravṛttaḥ), he will not harm [others], and he will speak the truth. (75c–76)

He will not take others' property; disciplined, he will observe sexual abstinence (nīto brahmacaryeṇa vartate) and he will be without confusion (akāluṣyatayā so 'pi).³⁸⁴ He will not be angry with anyone. (77) thereon. If correctly understood, the point is oddly expressed.

³⁸³If the text and this interpretation are correct, the author's intention was not smoothly expressed. It is possible that a half-line has dropped out between 4:75b and c that accounted for avairāgya and anaśīśvarya. Cf. Mṛgendravidyāpāda which, as here, connects the positive properties with sattva, but connects all the others with tamas with the exception of avairāgya, which is presumably therefore connected with rajas:

*bhāvā buddhiguṇā dharmajñānavairāgyabhūṭayaḥ
sāttvikā vyatyayenaite rāgam utsrjya tāmasāḥ.*

³⁸⁴Thus far the five yamas have been listed. Hereafter are listed the five niyamas. Cf. Mataṅgavidyāpāda 17:29c–31:

dharmas ca dvividhaḥ prokto yamas ca niyamo 'paraḥ ahiṃsā satyam asteyaṃ brahmacaryam akalkatā yamaḥ pañcavidhaḥ prokto niyamas cāpy athocyate akrodho guruśuśrūṣā śaucaṃ santoṣa eva ca ārjavaṃ ceti niyamaḥ pañcadhā parikīrtitaḥ.

The Parākhya's lists are the same as those of the Mataṅga even in their order. The lists of other texts vary considerably both in order and content. See Yogasūtra 2:30 (ahiṃsā satyam asteyabrahmacaryāparigrahā yamāḥ) and 2:32 (śaucasantoṣatapaḥ-svādhyāyēśvarapraṇīdhānāni niyamāḥ), and cf., for example, the two verses quoted on p. 16 of Kauṇḍinya's Pañcārthabhāṣya on the Pāśupatasūtra:

ahiṃsā brahmacaryam ca satyāsamvyavahārakau asteyam iti pañcaite yamā vai samprakīrtitāḥ akrodho guruśuśrūṣā śaucam āhārālāghavam apramādaś ca pañcaite niyamāḥ samprakīrtitāḥ.

He practises obedience to his guru, purity (śaucam), the cultivation of contentment, and he is always morally upright (ārjave tu gato nityam). Such a man (eṣa... pumān) is intent on dharma. (78)

And knowledge can be that inferred by one's own intellect by constant practice (abhyāsato nityam).³⁸⁵ Or knowledge can be that learned from another; or [it may be what is learned] with correct understanding (subodhataḥ) from scripture itself (jñānād eva),³⁸⁶ or from the teaching of one's guru (gurūpadeśataḥ), or from meditation (bhāvanāvaśataḥ). (79–80b)

By nature [?] (prakṛtyā) [there can arise] knowledge with regard to the self (ātmaparaṃ jñānam) or [that] other [knowledge]: the knowledge of the things as they are [?] (anyad vā tattvarūpakam).³⁸⁷ (80cd)

Cf. also Līṅgapurāṇa I.89.24–5:

asteyaṃ brahmacaryaṃ ca alobhas tyāga eva ca vratāni pañca bhikṣūṇāṃ ahiṃsā paramā tv iha akrodho guruśūśrūṣā śaucam āhārālāghavam nityaṃ svādhyāya ity ete niyamāḥ parikīrtitāḥ.

This belongs to a passage shared with the Vāyupurāṇa, where these two verses are I.16:17–18. They occur also as Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇa 38:16–17. Cf. also, e.g., Vāmana-purāṇa 14:1. Many other passages could be adduced. COLAS (1988:256–60) tabulates and discusses some quite different lists.

³⁸⁵ ex conj. Perhaps a genitive of the present participle, abhyasyato nityam, is also possible; but parallelism with the other ablative nouns in the list (admittedly a weak ground) has led me to prefer this.

³⁸⁷ I have not cruxed this half-line, because it may well not be corrupt, but it is obscure to me. Cf. Bhagavadgītā 13:7–11:

amānitvam adambhitvam ahiṃsā kṣāntir ārjavam ācāryopāsanaṃ śaucaṃ sthairyam ātmavinigrahaḥ indriyārtheṣu vairāgyam anahamkāra eva ca janmamṛtyujarāvvyādhiduhkhadoṣānudarśanam asaktir anabhiṣvaṅgaḥ putradāragrāhāḥ nityaṃ ca samacittatvam iṣṭāniṣtopapattiṣu mayi cānanyayogena bhaktir avyabhicāriṇī viviktadeśasevitvam aratir janasaṃsadi adhyātmajñānanityatvaṃ tattvajñānārthadarśanam etaḥ jñānam iti proktam ajñānaṃ yad ato 'nyathā.

From any one of these kinds of knowledge vairāgya can arise. That [comes about] as a result of trouble that arises from individual factors (adhyātmajaduḥkhena)—[trouble] such as cold, burning, fever—as well as from trouble that results from factors determined by nature (adhibhūtajena), [i.e.] caused by such factors as rain, thunderbolts and so forth; and so too from factors connected with spirits (tadvat tad adhidaivotham), [i.e.] what is produced by flesh-eating demons, demons that possess, and ghosts (piśācagrahabhūtajam).³⁸⁸ (81–2)

As a result of vairāgya [the soul] begins the practice of yoga, from which, according to this system (iha), there comes about aiśvarya, [that is to say] that preeminence that consists in the capacity to make one's body minute (aṇimādigam), and other such powers, [i.e.] which is accompanied by the eight supernatural powers (aṣṭadharmaparicchadam).³⁸⁹ (83)

When, because sattva and tamas are obscured, rajas is preeminent,

Here too a distinction which is not clear to me is implied between adhyātmajñāna and tattvajñāna, and they are placed here at the end of a list which is said to be a list of yamas and niyamas in the Gītābhāṣya attributed to Śaṅkarācārya. In our passage, what follows in 4:81c–82b suggests that reference may here (in 4:80cd) be intended to ādhyātmika and ādhibhautika knowledge. 4:82cd then refers also to ādhidaiyata knowledge, but the tadvat that introduces that line suggests that this might have been an afterthought which was not referred to above. But we could interpret 4:80cd to refer to all three by taking prakṛtyātmaparam as a compound: 'knowledge, whose form is truth, that relates to prakṛti, to the ātman, or that other [knowledge, viz. that which is to do with divine beings]'. Further support for this interpretation is perhaps afforded by the expression of ekatamāḥ jñānāt in 4:81a, since ekatama should properly mean 'one among more than two', but this is not strong, firstly because confusion about the proper use of ekatama is not unknown, and secondly because a number of types of knowledge could be said to be referred to in 4:79–80b.

³⁸⁸Cf. Mataṅgavidyāpāda 17:77c–85, where these form part of a list of ten tuṣṭis (17:74–103) that lead to vairāgya.

³⁸⁹In the Mataṅga a description of these (vidyāpāda 17:108–25) follows on from its account of the attainment of vairāgya to which we have referred above. See 14:91–4 for the Parākhya's treatment of them.

The expression here is awkward, not only because the suffix -ga is oddly used and because we must assume that utkarṣa has been attracted to the neuter, but also because the qualifiers that bracket it both appear to be referring to the same group of eight supernatural powers. This might be slightly less awkward if one were to translate the second with '[i.e.] that which is the panoply of the eight supernatural powers'; it is true that paricchada is commonly used at the end of bahuvrīhi compounds, but I think that there are occasional uses of the word as a plural marker (i.e. at the end of tatpuruṣa compounds): see, e.g., Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 1:8d, quoted in fn. 328 on p. 236 above. (If this interpretation were adopted, one would have to assume attraction to the neuter of this the noun paricchada too).

then [there will be] craving for adharma in that man (adharmānūrāgo 'smin), and therefore (tat) he does not have aiśvarya (naiśvareṇa var-tate). (84)

As a result of adharma he becomes a non-believer (nāstiko bhūtvā) and abandons rites of purity (śaucācāravivarjitaḥ). Assuredly he becomes a thief and murders living beings.³⁹⁰ (85)

Because of attachment (rāgāt) he becomes tainted with the intoxication of lust (*rāgaprāmādyarañjitaḥ*³⁹¹) for women who are his relatives. He does not regard [the fact that a woman may be] his father's wife, his daughter or his sister. (86)

The trouble that consists in being without aiśvarya and other such [positive qualities] he [wrongly] regards as itself the highest aiśvarya. He who is intent on that remains one whose property of omniscience is enveloped by nescience (avidyākrāntacidguṇaḥ). (87)

When, because rajas and sattva are obscured, tamas is preeminent in the soul (tasya), then he remains powerfully deluded by the confusion of tamas (mūḍho mohatas tamaso bhr̥ṣam).³⁹² (88)

As a result of delusion he sees an ugly woman to be beautiful, like a celestial nymph (apsaropamām). A deity or a beautiful woman he grasps as the opposite [of what they are]. Deluded by the properties of nescience

³⁹⁰ ex conj. Cf. Mataṅgavidyāpāda 17:139–142b:

tato 'ṇo ratimāhātmyāt pravṛttiḥ parapīḍane himsāto 'likabhāṣitvam asmāc caurye pravartate paradāreṣv anāyāsam ato gurvaṅganāgamah kāluṣyam atidaurbhāgyam krodhaś cāpy anivāritaḥ satām vyatikrame prītir aprītir gurusantatau śauchāhāniś ca satatam atidauḥkhyam pramādataḥ anāṛjyaṃ ca satatam adharmākulitekṣaṇaḥ.

³⁹¹ ex conj. This is a modification of a suggestion of Dr. ACHARYA: rāgapramāda-rañjitaḥ. The suggestion has been rejected on the grounds that it would yield an entirely iambic pāda; but I should add that this is a metrical solecism that is not inconceivable here, for see fn. 613 on p. 312 below.

³⁹² ex conj. Instead of emending to the genitive tamasah, one could retain the instrumental and emend mohataḥ to mohitaḥ, following the testimonium. Or again one could retain M^Y's reading and interpret: 'powerfully deluded because of tamas by delusion'. Note that in the quotation in the Nānāvaraṇaviḷakkattarumpatavivēkam (see apparatus) the soul in question is deluded by lust; but lust is more appropriate of the man in whom rajas predominates, which is indeed what our text says. It is possible that a transmitter or editor of the Nānāvaraṇaviḷakkattarumpatavivēkam was faced here with a corrupt line which he has emended plausibly but in ignorance of the wider context.

Buddhi, which determines, together with its eight qualities, has been expounded. Not otherwise is she to be understood to be, according to this śāstra (asmin). She is that which determines (bhaved adhyavasāya-kṛt). (90)

Pratoda spoke:

That cannot be how they are in this system (saṁsthā naiveha sā teṣām), for they must reside in the soul (yatas te puruṣāśrayāḥ). If the buddhi (sā dhiṣṇā) were thus invested with the eight properties, then there could be no sentience [in the soul]³⁹⁴ if that [sentience]³⁹⁵ is produced from prakṛti. (91)

Prakāśa spoke:

Buddhi is that which awakens them, and that is why they are figuratively [referred to as her] properties, for responsibility over them (teṣāṃ yenādhikāritvam) rests always with the soul (sarvadā puruṣāśrayam). The quality that is the particular property of (*guṇaḥ svākyaḥ*³⁹⁶) the buddhi is ³⁹³ More literally: 'he sees the reverse of everything'.

³⁹⁴ This seems to be intended. The buddhi is any case not sentient. The argument seems to presuppose that the eight properties of dharma etc. are thought of as integral parts of the sentient being, and that they cannot belong to buddhi, which is an insentient evolute of prakṛti.

³⁹⁵ But it might be possible to take śa as referring to the buddhi rather than to cid-rūpatā.

³⁹⁶ Dr. ISAACSON once suggested considering an emendation to guṇo vācya, but I have retained the transmitted text (with the insertion of a visarga before a sibilant in ligature with a semivowel, which for the scribe of M^Y would probably not have been regarded as an alteration). The anomalous adjective svākya appears to be an aiśa form used with the same sense as svaka though it is a derivative from it, for cf. Mataṅgavidyāpāda 4:5cd: yogo 'sya śaktayaḥ svākyaḥ visphuranti samantataḥ. In the Mataṅgavṛtti here Rāmakaṇṭha's attempt to account for the form is not convincing: svakasya bhāvaḥ svākyaḥ, tad vidyate bhagavataḥ sambandho yāsāṃ tāḥ svākyaḥ. [Here bhagavataḥ sambandho is the reading of the Kashmirian MSS; BHATT has adopted the reading of his other sources, bhagavatsambandhitayā, which I suspect to be a clarificatory alteration.] Commenting on Mataṅgavidyāpāda 16:1cd (prabuddho 'harmukhe svākye śrīkaṇṭho 'nantavikramaḥ), Rāmakaṇṭha appears again reluctant to allow that the word is ordinarily used (in scripture) as an adjective, for he remarks: svam eva svakaḥ, tasya bhāvaḥ svākyaḥ atyantātmīyam; na tu brahmādinām aharmukham ity arthaḥ. But no justification of the form is attempted when glossing Mataṅgavidyāpāda 23:2a, which tell us of the property particular to earth: svākyo 'sau gandha evoktaḥ. In the Mataṅgavṛtti this is glossed with etasyāś cāsādhāraṇo guṇo gandha eva. The same treatment is given to the form in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 22:2c, which tells of the property particular to water. Nor does Rāmakaṇṭha comment on the form (beyond glossing it that called '[the faculty of] determination', which brings about perception (vibodhakaḥ).³⁹⁷ (92)

This buddhi, which takes the form of the objects of experience (viṣayākārā), we hold to be that which the experiencer experiences. Since buddhi takes the form of the experienced objects, she is the locus of the experiencer's experience (bhoktur bhogasamāśrayā).³⁹⁸ (93)

From that [buddhi] arose the I-principle (ahaṅkāra), which is three-fold in accordance with the [threefold] division of its evolutes (triguṇaḥ kāryabhedataḥ); by name [its three parts are] Taijasa, Vaiṣṇava, and Bhūtādi. (94)

Then (tad) from that Taijasa ahaṅkāra there develops the five faculties of sense. The [five] faculties of action are born from the Vaiṣṇava [ahaṅkāra], together with the mind (samaṇaḥ), because of [its] connection [with them] (bandhena) [?].³⁹⁹ (95) with ātmiyam) when it occurs in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 7:40ab: dīkṣānalapluṣṭamalasya puṁsaḥ svākyaṁ balaṁ vyaktim upaiti yogāt.

If svākya differs in sense from svaka it is perhaps only in that it is more emphatic.
³⁹⁷ ex conj. Perhaps the transmitted vibodhataḥ could be interpreted 'because [it is through this function of buddhi that we can account for] perception'.

³⁹⁸ For this anomalous agreement of the āśraya with buddhi even though it does not come at the end of a compound with bahuvrīhi structure, cf. fn. 294 on p. 227 above. The verse is similar to Tattvasaṅgraha 13.

³⁹⁹ Accounts of this ancient doctrine differ. According to Sāṅkhyakārikā 25, all eleven faculties derive from Taijasa (the sāttvika aspect of ahaṅkāra), and the tanmātras derive from Bhūtādi (the tāmasa aspect). Both groups, however, are said in some sense to derive from Vaiṣṇava (the rājasa aspect of ahaṅkāra). Glossing the phrase taijasād ubhayam (the last words of Sāṅkhyakārikā 25) Vācaspatimiśra explains: taijasād rajasād ubhayaṁ gaṇadvayam bhavati. yady api rajaso na kāryāntaram asti tathāpi. sattvatamasā svayam akriye samartho api na kāryaṁ kurutaḥ. rajas tu calatayā yadā te cālayati, tadā kāryaṁ kuruta ity ubhayasminn api kārye sattvatamasoḥ kriyotpādana-dvāreṇāsti rajasāḥ kāraṇatvam iti na vyartham raja ity arthaḥ. The Kiraṇa itself, as well as a number of other early Siddhāntas (e.g. the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha and the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha), is silent on these sub-divisions of ahaṅkāra and their evolutes; but the doctrine of the mature Śaiva Siddhānta, as expressed for example in Bhogaśālikā 35–45, in Mrgendravidyāpāda 12:3–5, in the South Indian Pauṣkara 6:140–3, in Aghoraśiva's Tattvaparakāśavṛtti ad 55, is that the faculties of sense, as well as the manas, evolve from Taijasa; the faculties of action evolve from Vaiṣṇava; and the subtle elements evolve from Bhūtādi. The above-mentioned Sāṅkhya version is something like what Tryambakaśambhu intends in his account in the Kiraṇavivṛti 4:23 (IFP MS 47625, f. 58^v and IFP MS T. No. 1102, p. 91), except that Tryambakaśambhu holds that Taijasa is rājasa and that Vaiṣṇava is sāttvika, and hence presents Vaiṣṇava, when impelled by Taijasa, as producing the eleven faculties, and similarly Bhūtādi,

From Bhūtādi there arise the five tanmātrās;⁴⁰⁰ from the tanmātras when impelled by Taijasa, as producing the elements: tatra taijasena vikṣubdhāḍ vaiṣṭvāhaṅkāraḍ ekādaśākṣāṇḍndriyāṇy asṛjat ... punas taijasāvīkṣubdhāt bhūtāder ahaṅkāraḍ pañcatanmātrāṇi... As I have observed before (GOODALL 1998:cvi–cviii), Tryambakaśambhu appears to have been remarkably innocent, on other points too, of the mature Saiddhāntika doctrine. But the treatment of Taijasa as rājasa and Vaiṣṭva as sāttvika is not unique; it is that of the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 18:44–5b) and may have been shared by Bhoja, if we follow the reading of Tattvapraśāsa 54 that Kumāradeva defends (mentioning as a variant that which is evidently followed by Aghoraśiva) and which Vrajavallabha DVIVEDĪ has printed in his 1988 edition. Bhoja's own account in Tattvapraśāsa 54–5 reads:

sāttvikarājasatāmasabhedena sa jāyate punas tredhā sa ca vaikārikataijasa (sa ca taijasavaikārika° Aghoraśiva) bhūtādikanāmabhiḥ samucchvasiti taijasas tatra mano vaikārikato bhavanti cākṣāṇi bhūtādes tanmātrāṇy eṣāṇ sargakramo 'yam etasmāt

The sequence that Kumāradeva first, very naturally, understands from this is as follows: taijasākhyāḍ ahaṅkāraḍ rājasāc calasvabhāvaṇ mana utpadyate; vaikārikāt sāttvikāt prakāśalāghavopetaṇ indriyadaśakam; bhūtādes tāmasāt tamobahulānāṇ tanmātrāṇāṇ udbhava iti. Note that the Mālinīvijayottara (1:31) gives the same account as Tattvapraśāsa 55–6 except that it does not specify which of the guṇas Taijasa and Vaiṣṭva correspond to.

The Parākhyā might appear to differ from all these accounts again, in that it has the mind grouped together with the faculties of action and not with those of sense. But this difference is more apparent than real, for below in 4:125 the manas is said to be ubhayātmakam. This expression is used of the manas in Sāṅkhyakārikā 27 to mean that it is both a buddhīndriya and a karmendriya (being both receptive and active). This liminal status of the manas passed from the Sāṅkhyas into Śaiva thought. In the middle of its account of the Atimārga the Nīśvāsamukha describes the manas as ubhayātmakam (4:118, f. 18^r):

bhūtāni ca tathā pañca manas caivubhayātmakam.*

Cf. also, e.g., Nīśvāsa guhyasūtra 7:165 (f. 65^v) and Svacchanda 11:81. In the Parākhyā, since the preceding verse (4:124) discusses what is taijasa and what is vaiṣṭva, the label means additionally that the manas belongs to both the vaiṣṭva and the taijasa groups. The account of the Mataṅga has manas derive from every aspect of ahaṅkāra (vidyāpāda 18:49c–50):

*saṅkṣubdhaḥ kāraṇecchāto yadā garvas tu sāttvikaḥ
tadā saṅghuṣya te dve 'nye mithunaṇ sampravartate mithunāj jāyate garvāṇ manas caivubhayātmakam.*

⁴⁰⁰The word is here feminine. The neuter gender is standard in the commentarial literature, but in the tantras themselves both feminine and neuter are possible, and the gross elements arise. The faculty of hearing, of touch and of sight (tvakcakṣuṣī),⁴⁰¹ of taste, and of smell: this is the group of [faculties of] sense (mater gāṇaḥ). (96)

The faculty of hearing, which grasps two kinds of sound, is located in the ear holes: not otherwise could one grasp distinct and indistinct sound (vyaktāvyaktaśabdānām).⁴⁰² (97)

The faculty of touch consists in [such sensations as] rough, hot, soft, cold. Touch has as its locus the skin. Not otherwise [i.e. not without skin(?)] could a person who experiences touch (sparsāvibhāvakaḥ) know such [sensations of] touch. (98)

The faculty of sight (cakṣuḥ) is that which makes forms known (rūpānuvedakam); it resides in the [eye]balls of the knower. Not otherwise could there be perception of [any object's] size, arrangement, its colour and form (mānasamsthānatadvarṇākṛtigāḥ). (99) even, occasionally, masculine, for see GOODALL 1998:lxvi, fn. 158. Here in the Parākhyā it is required to be both feminine, as here and in 4:126 below, and neuter (or masculine), as in 4:107, 109–10, 114, 118 and 121–3

⁴⁰¹ ex conj. The dual might have been misunderstood and garbled, and therefore it is suggested here as a possible source of the corrupt reading in M^Y. The dual is paralleled in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 12:3a, which is identical to our pāda as now constituted. The (unmetrical) reading of the Ānāvāraṇaviḷakkattarumpatavivēkam might also be accepted, but that is just perhaps more likely to be itself a secondary attempt at repair of a corrupt pāda, as the reading of the Śivajñānasiddhisvapakṣadṛṣṭāntasaṅgraha probably is. That the quotations in both these sources have the same omissions for the portions from which they overlap suggests either that the Ānāvāraṇaviḷakkattarumpatavivēkam was drawing on the Śivajñānasiddhisvapakṣadṛṣṭāntasaṅgraha or that they were both drawing on a quotation in another source.

⁴⁰² The phrasing in our text might seem to suggest that we need two ears to grasp the two kinds of sound, which are vyakta and avyakta. A discussion of types of sound in the Niśvāsa nayasūtra (2:36–42, f. 33^r ≈ Svacchanda 12:15ff), although it mentions this distinction (2:42d ≈ Svacchanda 12:21b), seems rather to take the principal dichotomy to be one between sūkṣma and sthūla (2:39 ≈ Svacchanda 12:17c–18b). Whoever was responsible for the form the quotation took that we find in the Śivajñānasiddhisvapakṣadṛṣṭāntasaṅgraha and the Ānāvāraṇaviḷakkattarumpatavivēkam might well have recognised there to be a problem of ambiguity in our passage and sought to correct it, for they not only omit 4:97cd, but they also read śabdaikagrāhakam (in place of dviśabdagrāhakam in 4:97a): ‘which grasps sound alone’.

Whatever is intended to be the basic two-fold division, we may assume that it is not intended that two ears are required, one for each type of sound. If vyakta and avyakta are the two basic types intended by our author, then one might render them ‘articulate and inarticulate’, assuming that that which is vyakta refers to language and that which is avyakta refers to all other sound. It is not clear to me what sense they have in the Niśvāsa nayasūtra and Svacchanda.

The faculty of taste (jihvākṣam), [which is] the knowledge of such [sensations of] taste as 'sharp' and 'bitter' (kaṭvamlādirasajñānam), has the tongue as its locus, since without it there could be no knowledge of the various sensations of taste. (100)

The faculty of smell grasps smells, since without it there could be no [sensation of] smell (yena gandho na tadṛte).⁴⁰³ The eye and the ear grasp [even when they have] moved away [from the object of their perception]; the other three [grasp only when they have] come close.⁴⁰⁴ (101abcd)

Speech, the two hands, the sexual organ, the anus, the two feet: these are the five faculties of action.⁴⁰⁵ (101ef)

The faculty of speech (vāk), located in the tongue, speaks Sanskrit and other languages. For without the faculty of speech, speaking could not be voiced in this world (nātra śabditam). (102)

Grasping and releasing [objects] from oneself are effected by the cause that is the faculty of grasping (hastendriyanimittajam). How could such activities as craft be possible without the faculty of grasping (hastākṣa-varjitam)? (103)

The bliss we have in this [life] (ānando yo bhaved asmin) would not be possible without the sexual organ (nopasthena vinā bhavet). The expulsion of what we eat (bhuktosargaḥ)⁴⁰⁶—an activity of the wind [apāna]—has as its cause the faculty of the anus. (104)

Striding, leaping, speed[y movement] and the like are the signs

⁴⁰⁵ The two duals show that the redactor is capable of mixing up the faculties with the places in which they reside. Cf. Mṛgendravidyāpāda 12:4ab: vāṇī pāṇī bhagaḥ pāyuh pāḍau ceti rajobhuvah.

⁴⁰⁶ ex conj. I am uneasy about this emendation, because M^Y and the quotation in the Śivajñānasiddhisvapakṣadṛṣṭāntasaṅgraha agree with bandhotsargo, which I cannot interpret. It seems unlikely that bandha should have been intended as an equivalent to vibandha (constipation), since we are not talking about a malady. Palaeographically closer to the transmitted akṣaras would be the conjecture varcotsargo, in which we would have to assume aiśa thematisation of the noun varcas.

that cause us to infer a faculty of [movement called] 'foot' (cihnam pādendriyānugam). That which covers all the [organs that are the loci of the] faculties of action throughout the body is the faculty of touch.⁴⁰⁷ (105abcd)

External and internal volition (bāhyābhyantarasaṃkalpaḥ) would not be possible without the mind (manasā vinā). The external one is the connection of object with sense faculty; the internal one is taught to be different from that. (105e–106b)

[The sensations of] sound, touch, form, taste, and the fifth, smell, are the subtle elements (mātrāḥ), also known by the synonymous word tanmātra,⁴⁰⁸ which are born from [the aspect of ahaṅkāra called] Bhūtādi. When not qualified (aviśiṣṭāḥ) by their properties (svadharmaiḥ), in their essential nature (svarūpataḥ) they are not separate. The effects of those [tanmātras] are divided by those [properties, namely the properties of being] calm, fierce, deluded, and so forth (śāntaghoravimūḍhādyaiḥ).⁴⁰⁹ From them [viz. from the tanmātrās evolve] ether, wind, ⁴⁰⁷ ex conj. Inverting the first and second halves of 4:105, as in the quotation in the Śivajñānasiddhisvapakṣadṛṣṭāntasaṅgraha, would not, I think, make good sense, but I have repaired and adopted the plausible extra half-line given therein (cf. fn. 404 on p. 262 above).

⁴⁰⁸ ex conj. Cf. Mṛgendravidyāpāda 12:5:

śabdaḥ sparśaś ca rūpaṃ ca raso gandhaś ca pañcamah guṇāviśiṣṭās tanmātrās tanmātrapadayojitāḥ.

⁴⁰⁹ ex conj. The final ādyā may be otiose here, for the list is elsewhere only of these three members (Sāṅkhyakārikā 38):

tanmātrāṇy aviśeṣās tebhyo bhūtāni pañca pañcabhyaḥ ete smṛtā viśeṣāḥ śāntā ghorāś ca mūḍhāś ca.

Vācaspatimiśra's commentary ad loc. explains as follows:

... yasmād ākāśādiṣu sthūleṣu sattvapradhānatayā kecid chāntāḥ sukhāḥ prakāśā laghavaḥ; kecid rajahpradhānatayā ghorā duḥkhā anavasthitāḥ; kecid tamaḥpradhānatayā mūḍhā viṣaṇṇā guravaḥ. te 'mī paraspara-vyāvṛtṭyā anubhūyamānā viśeṣā iti sthūlā iti cocyante. tanmātrāṇi tv asmadādibhir anyonyavyāvṛtṭāni nānubhūyanta ity aviśeṣā iti sūkṣmā iti cocyante.

Dr. ACHARYA first suggested emendation to śāntatvaghoramūḍhādyais, which would be closer to what M^Y transmits, but the accepted text finds support in Svāyambhuva-sūtrasaṅgraha 2:12:

karmataḥ pariṇāmo 'sya jagatas triguṇātmakaḥ
śāntaghoravimūḍhātmā nitāntaviśamas tataḥ.

fire, water, earth. Those are the five [gross] elements. (106c–108)

Ether is that which arises from the subtle element 'sound'; it is pervasive (mahat),⁴¹⁰ [and] it has sound as its one property (śabdātmaika-guṇam).⁴¹¹ Since sound is not the property of anything else, it is said to be particularly ['the'] property of ether, even though it is [in a sense] common to the other elements too because it is perceived elsewhere than in this [ether]. (109–110b)

And the arising of ether is necessarily preceded by [that of] the subtle element 'sound'. It is different from all four [other] elements because of its [providing] space (avakāśataḥ). Because it has a property, it is a substance.⁴¹² It is produced (utpannam); [for that which is] insentient [and] plural (anekasaṃkhyayā yuktam) necessarily leads [one to infer the existence of] a cause [that produced it].⁴¹³ In its form as potentiality

*sattvādayo hi yathāsaṃkhyāṃ śāntaghoravimūḍhātmanāḥ. ayam api śāntaghoravimūḍhātmaḥ triguṇātmakaḥ. tatra dharmajñāna-vairāgyaiśvaryaṅkhyāḥ śāntātmā. adharmāvairāgyānaiśvaryaṅkhyo ghorātmā. ajñānākhyo vimūḍhātmaḥ. evaṃ siddhiṣṭyāṅkhyāḥ śāntātmā.
aśaktyākhyo ghorātmā. viparyayākhyo vimūḍhātmaḥ.*

For the tanmātrās being devoid of viśeṣa see also Tattvasaṅgraha 3 and Mṛgendravidyā-pāda 12:5.

⁴¹²*ex conj.* Cf. Prāśastapādabhāṣya § 64, p. 12: ato guṇavattvād anāśritatvād dravyam, and cf. Vaiśeṣikasūtra 1.1.14. But it is possible that this is not the point being made here in this half-line and that we should punctuate differently and perhaps retain the transmitted guṇavat tena: 'Therefore [i.e. because it arises from śabda] that substance arises endowed with properties; it is insentient...'

⁴¹³This is intended to be a general statement of this Saiddhāntika principle: cf. Bhoga-kārikā 88c–89b:

teṣāṃ kāraṇapūrvatvam iṣṭaṃ buddhigatādivat.*

Note that this is clearer in the version of this half verse quoted by Aghoraśiva in the Mṛgendravṛttidīpikā ad vidyāpāda 3:1 (see apparatus), but I suspect this of being a secondary quotable version in which the whole principle fits into a single half-line.

We expect ākāśa to be described as one, not as plural. But I assume that it is here said to be plural because it is created anew in every creation. This is implied here by the next line, with which cf. Mataṅgavidyāpāda 19:12c–13b:

nityatvān muniśārdūla sa tathāpy upacaryate.*

'In this system we hold that it [viz. ākāśa] does not absolutely not exist, nor does

(śaktirūpeṇa) it is eternal; in its manifest form (vyaktirūpataḥ) it is impermanent. (110c-112)

But it[s existence] is [not directly perceptible; it is rather] known (lakṣyate) through the inferential mark that is its effect, [namely] through its [providing] space:⁴¹⁴ even [the providing of] space is [an effect that is] dependent on a substance; it resides in [the substance] ether, [and] it is known as an effect (kāryalakṣitaḥ).⁴¹⁵ It resides five-fold in the body: in the cavities of the [two] nostrils, the ears and the mouth.⁴¹⁶ (113-114b)

Wind [arises] from the subtle element 'touch'; it has two properties, and in its nature as breath (śvasanātmakaḥ) it is called prāṇa, apāna, samā[na], udāna, and vyāna. Now that same [wind] (sa eva tu) is prāṇa [in that it is] the wind that is the life-force (prāṇamayo vāyuh); [as] apāna [it] draws away impurities; [as] samāna [it] creates balance (śamatām kuryāt); and [as] udāna [it] goes out upwards (ūrdhvanirgataḥ);⁴¹⁷ [as] vyāna [it] it arise, since it is eternal, o tiger among sages, but it is nevertheless metaphorically spoken of as such [i.e. as subject to arising and perishing]. The final remark of Rāma-kaṇṭha's Matāṅgavṛtti thereon echoes our passage: ... tathā ākāśe śaktivyaktyapekṣayā nāśotpādāv upacāreṇocyete, na tu paramārthata iti.

⁴¹⁴The use of particles here is confusing to me, and the text may be in need of emendation. Cf. the odd use of kiṃ tu in 4:7.

⁴¹⁶More cavities are counted in the Niśvāsa nayasūtra (2:29ab, f. 32^r = Svacchanda 12:8cd): suśīrātmaḥ tu vijñeyaṃ navadhā cchidralakṣaṇam. Kṣemarāja's Svacchandatantrōdyota ad 12:8cd identifies the extra ones as those of the brahma-randhra, the eyes, the nipples, the anus and the genitals (liṅga).

⁴¹⁷Cf. Niśvāsa nayasūtra 4:124 (f. 40^r): aśītaṃ liḍhapītaṃ (conj.; liṭapītaṃ MS) ca samānaḥ śamatām nayet/ kṣutahikkācchardikā sa udānasya viceṣṭitam.

causes the body to bend (vināmayaty aṅgam):⁴¹⁸ it is one, [but] is differentiated [by these various names] in accordance with the functions [it performs]. (114c–116)

Since it is the cause of remaining 'alive' (jīvane kāraṇam yasmāt),⁴¹⁹ it is therefore in worldly usage (iha) [said to be] resting (āyattam) in the soul.⁴²⁰ And so, according to this system (iha), prāṇa is that which supports consciousness (cidādhāraḥ) for souls (kāyadhṛtām).⁴²¹ (117)

Fire evolves in manifest form (vyaktam) from the subtle element

⁴¹⁸This may seem a surprising function for vyāna, but the text is correct, for the notion is reiterated in 14:25 and occurs also as part of Sārdhatrisatikālottara 10:12:

vyāno vināmayaty aṅgam vyāno vyādhiprakopanaḥ prīter vināśakaraṇo vyāpanād vyāna ucyate.

Possibly vināmayati is intended to mean something like 'controls the movement of'. At the end of the Mataṅga's parallel (but more detailed) account of the breaths we read (vidyāpāda 20:33c–34):

ākṣepākuñcane vyāne gamane ca prasāraṇe calanāśphoṭane caiva bahiś ceṣṭāsu sarvadā pravṛttaḥ kurute vyānaḥ pañcamo yo 'nilo mahān.

Cf. also the damaged verse Niśvāsa nayasūtra 4:125 (f. 40^r): romaharṣam ca svedaṃ ca sūlado hy aṅgabhañjakaḥ (conj.; aṅgañjakaḥ MS)/ vyānasyaitāni (The last 2 syllables are illegible but are what was transcribed by the Kathmandu apograph.)

⁴²⁰It is not clear to me exactly what is intended with the word āyattam. What we might expect is an explanation to the effect that prāṇa is sometimes used with the sense of 'life-breath' or 'soul', and that this is a metaphorical usage based on the observation that breath is a prerequisite for being alive. Is it conceivable that āyattam could be a transmissional error for an irregularly formed past participle of $\sqrt{a} + \sqrt{dā}$ (that is to say ādattam, instead of āttam) used in the sense of 'spoken'? We might then translate this pāda 'it is used in the world in the sense of "soul"'. Cf. Mṛgendravidyāpāda 11:13cd: city ātivāhike śaktau prāṇaśabdaḥ kalāsu ca. 'The word prāṇa [can be used] in the sense of the sentient [soul], the transmigratory body, the power [of the body(?)], and in the sense of the channels of the breath (kalāsu ca).' [The uncertain interpretation of the last term is, I think, that of Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha, who glosses kalāsu with somasūryādyātmikāsu.]

⁴²¹Also perhaps conceivable is the following: 'And so prāṇa, among the [various] factors that support the body (kāyadhṛtām), is here spoken of as 'the support of the sentient [soul]' (cidādhāraḥ).'

'form'; now (punaḥ) this [fire] has three properties. It resides in the body [in the following]: in the eye, in the heart, in the bile, and in the organs of digestion.⁴²² (118)

That illumination of forms (rūpaprakāśaḥ) that is in the eyes is the light (prakāśaḥ) that is the property particular to fire. Without it there would not be its other [property, viz.] warmth (tāpaḥ), pervading the entire body of a man.⁴²³ (119)

The overflowing of bile (pittaniryāṇam)⁴²⁴ that we experience is connected with the activities, such as burning, [of fire]. [And] because of this [familiar digestive] cooking of food [we know that there is] fire in the belly that effects digestion. (120)

Water evolves in manifest form at the instigation of the Lord (īśāt)⁴²⁵ from the subtle element 'taste'; it has four properties. It resides [in the body] in the fluids of fat, pus, tears, semen, blood, urine (vasāpūyāsra-śukrāśṇimūtradravaniketanaḥ).⁴²⁶ (121)

Earth evolves in manifest form from the subtle element 'smell'; it carries five properties (pañcaguṇāvahā). Hair, marrow, nails, intestines,⁴²⁷ bones, flesh, †guṇapañcakam†.⁴²⁸ (122)

This is elemental creation (bhautikaḥ sargaḥ), according to this system

⁴²³I assume that this is intended to refer to the existence of tejaḥ in the heart, for which see the previous footnote.

⁴²⁵If this is what is intended the usage is certainly odd, but not unparalleled, for cf. Kiraṇa 1:16ab, in which the ablative śivāt plainly marks the instigating cause, rather than the source of emanation. It is possible, however, that the text here is corrupt.

⁴²⁶The list of the Mṛgendra differs (vidyāpāda 12:30cd): mūtraraktakaphasveda-śukrādaḥ vāri saṁsthitam. So too does the list of the Niśvāsa nayasūtra (2:25, f. 32^v, ≈ Svacchanda 12:4c–5b): kaphāśṇimūtramedeṣu rasasvedavasāsu ca (conj.; °sṛkmūtra-medēṣu rasāsvādivaṣeṣu ca MS; °sṛgāmamūtreṣu rasasvedavasāsu ca Svachchanda)/śukre ca saṅgraha caiva sthitā hy āpaś caturguṇāḥ.

⁴²⁸The list in the Mṛgendra reads (vidyāpāda 12:30ab): dehe 'sthimāṃsakeśatvanakhadanteṣu cāvaniḥ. Our list differs in that it adds majjan (unless we choose to emend to the more common feminine form majjā) and antra (unless this conjecture is wrong) and does not include the teeth or the skin. This degree of variation seems possible, for the list appears not to be a standard one (cf. 14:55); it differs too in the Niśvāsa nayasūtra (2:23c–24, f. 32^v ≈ Svacchanda 12:3–4b):

(atra), which has as its cause the group of subtle elements.⁴²⁹ All that is made up of the three strands [of sattva, rajas, and taṃas] is born from the principle of ahaṅkāra. (123)

All the faculties of intellection (buddhyakṣāṇi) are, according to this system (iha), derived from Taijasa [ahaṅkāra], because of [their function of] illumination (prakāśataḥ). The group of faculties called 'action' derive from Vaiṣṭva [ahaṅkāra], since [they cause] change (vikṛtiḥ) by means of action. (124)

You should know that the mind's activity is in both [groups] (dviṣṭha-vṛtti mano jñeyam); therefore it is of both kinds.⁴³⁰ by its controlling Guṇapañcakam may not be corrupt; it is possible that it means that the five properties of the earth are in the body. Perhaps just conceivable is that we should emend to gaṇapañcakam (understanding it to mean no more than pañcakam) and correct °nakhāṃdra° to nakhānta (assuming this to mean no more than nakha). Also perhaps possible is that the expression is intended to mark the end of the treatment of the group of five elements, in which case perhaps some text is missing before it.

'The sense faculty mentioned before, the mind, is of both kinds. Its sphere [of duty] is volition; its presiding deity is Soma. This mind has a two-fold duty that enables the experiencer to experience, for externally it at all times produces the capacity of the faculties [to function] as instruments by means of its own proper [function of 'volition'], [and] further it [produces the] internal [capacity to function of the ahaṅkāra and the buddhi] by means of the 'volition' that is internal. Therefore the mind is an internal organ.'

This translation is an attempt to follow Rāmakaṇṭha's interpretation; Rāmakaṇṭha's commentary on this section reads: yad indriyaṃ ubhayātmakam manolakṣaṇaṃ prāg uktaṃ, tasya viśayaḥ kāryaṃ saṃkalpaḥ avadhānam ekāgratā, tena hi tad viśayī-kriyate. tathā hi—saṃnihiteṣv api indriyārtheṣu anavahitasya, arthāntarāvahitasya vā tadarthaviśayaṃ jñānaṃ notpadyate ity avadhānam api jñānotpattau kāraṇatvena sid-dham. tasya ca na buddhir hetuḥ ahaṅkāro vā. dṛkkriyātmakatvena pratyayarūpatvād the sense faculties it is invested with duty as being of the nature of [an instrument of] action;⁴³¹ situated inside (antaḥsthaṃ), endowed with [its function of] 'volition' (savikalpaṃ), it illuminates the forms of objects [and therefore belongs also to the group of instruments of knowing].⁴³² (125–126b)

The *tanmātrās*⁴³³ are the group derived from the Tāmasa [aspect of ahaṅkāra, viz. Bhūtādi]; they do not have [powers of] knowledge and action proper to themselves. They are the cause of the group of gross elements; since those [gross elements] have [properties] that are not different from their own properties (svaguṇādvayayogataḥ), [these subtle elements are] the subtle cause of the gross elements. (126c–127)

Such is the body of effects that comes forth (kāryam evaṃvidhaṃ gacchet), from kalā down to⁴³⁴ earth. It emerges in stages at the time of creation, as a result of conjunction with the three types of cause.⁴³⁵ (128)

Pratoda spoke:

The faculties might be derived from the gross elements (bhautikānīndriyāṇi syuḥ), since they are congruent with the properties of those [elements] (taddharmānvayayogataḥ). And ahaṅkāra need not necessarily (niyamāt) be the cause of external objects. (129)

Prakāśa spoke:

That the faculties should be elemental is impossible, because they are never without [the experience of] touch, etc (sparśādyavyabhicārataḥ).⁴³⁶ Therefore ahaṅkāra, which is the cause of the awareness 'I' [in other aware-

⁴³⁴Literally 'bounded by'. The text may not be correct here. I find no parallel for this usage of vārita to indicate the end of a list.

⁴³⁵For these three see 2:29–30.

nesses], is the cause of the faculties. (130)

I am the hearer of this sound; I am the toucher of this touched object; I am the seer <<of what is seen; I am the taster;>>⁴³⁷ of tastes etc., and it is I who am the smeller of smells. (131)

I am the speaker; I am the grasper; I am the one who goes on a long road; I excrete what I have eaten; I am the [agentive] cause in the act of [sexual] pleasure. (132)

Ahaṃkāra is involved in [all] these (teṣv anvitaḥ) by means of its own nature that abides in it (svadharmenātmavartinā).⁴³⁸ Thus, then, is the body of effects (kāryam) produced from ahaṃkāra (garvajam);⁴³⁹ all are taught to have arisen [ultimately] from the knot [that is māyā] (granthiyuttham).⁴⁴⁰ (133)

Pratoda spoke:

An effect must follow its cause (kāraṇānugatam) because of the inherence [of the cause] in it (tatsamavāyataḥ), just as, for example, threads [inhere in their effect: cloth]. This is not so [here in your model of causality] (tathā tan no), and so that which you have said is pointless (nirarthakam). (134)

Prakāśa spoke:

The cause [māyā] is partless; it cannot be a substance that inheres [as a cause in its effect]. We know that cause through its effects (kārya-gamyam). It is extremely subtle [i.e. not amenable to sense-perception], just like the atom [in your model of what causes the universe] (aṇuvat). Just as (yathā) [in your model] after [building up through] a sequence beginning with atom-pairs (dvyaṇukādikramāt) an effect that is coarse [which is to say perceptible to us], since those [atom-pairs] produce it ⁴³⁷I have assumed that some text has accidentally been omitted here, since the line as transmitted could only be interpreted with an unlikely ellipsis. The sense of the missing text is clear, but its exact wording can only be guessed at. Dr. ACHARYA has made plausible suggestions for part of the missing text, which I have incorporated. The parallel passage in the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 18:5ff) is not close enough to be of probative value.

⁴³⁸This formulation may seem implausibly clumsy, but compare the use of svocitena and ātmavartinā in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 18:81d and 18:82b (quoted in fn. 430 on p. 268 above).

(tadupapattitaḥ),⁴⁴¹ so too (tadvat) [according to this system] there is an [imperceptibly] subtle power that is in the cause (kāraṇagā śaktiḥ) [and] which is present in the body that is its effects (kāryatanusthitā).⁴⁴² (135–6)

If you counter, '[But] you should explain [then]: what power?', [then we will answer] 'You should show which [among the things that we can perceive] is the atom'. Just as [according to your model] it is the atom that is in all effects, so too [in our view] it is this indestructible power. (137)

It is what is 'perceived' (lakṣyate) in all things by all at all times because of the delusion [that is saṃsāra(?)] (mohāt). Therefore it is proved that in this world (iha) the form of all things is made up of māyā (māyātmakaṃ sarvaṃ artharūpam). (138)

Pratoda spoke:

The external object is [perhaps after all] not distinct (avyaktaḥ) from the knowledge of it, which has its [viz. the object's] nature. That [knowledge] presents the appearance of being [divided into] perceived and perceiver; but this is not true at the level of ultimate reality.⁴⁴³ (139)

Prakāśa spoke:

The awareness of the external object is distinct from the external object [itself]⁴⁴⁴ by reason of the solidity, liquidity, capacity to burn, to shake, to give space with respect to each element (bhūtataḥ). Therefore this [viz. the external object] is to be understood to exist. Or [if you say that] it is just of the form of knowledge (jñānākāraḥ sa eva vā), then is it the means of knowledge or the object of knowledge? For the means of attaining something must be different from the object to be attained (sādhyaḥ bhinnam hi sādhanam).⁴⁴⁵ (140–1)

[Let] that [knowledge] alone be the means (sāadhanam); [but] how can it be a means without there being something to which it is the means (sādhyaṃ vinā)? The external [object] is what has efficacy (arthakriyā-

⁴⁴¹Or: 'since that is logically justifiable'?

⁴⁴²Emendation could also be considered, for instance to kāryaṃ tanuḥ sthitā: '[and] the effect is the [perceptibly gross] body'.

⁴⁴³Here Pratoda adopts a principal doctrine of the Yogācāras. HATTORI (1968:102) refers to Madhyāntavibhāga 1:3 and to Mahāyānasūtrālaṅkāra ad XI: 32.

kāri);⁴⁴⁶ knowledge is that which causes awareness [of it] within. (142)

Even to perceive oneself [i.e. one's own body?] (svasaṅgrāhe 'pi) a conglomeration of causal factors (sāmagrī) must be used, first among which is light (ālokapūrvikā). (143)

Until that [conglomeration] comes into being there can be no sensory perception of the object (asmin).⁴⁴⁸ †Because of depending on that (tatsavyapekṣayā), everything†⁴⁴⁹ would definitely be momentary. (144)

[But that] knowledge which grasps all objects [viz. the power of omniscience] succeeds (kramate) [because it is] not momentary.⁴⁵⁰ It is not, however, possible that knowledge should be without dependence [on its objects; in other words it is not possible] that it should be capable of presenting [to itself as subject] what has the form of a part of itself [as object] (svāmśākārārpaṇe).⁴⁵¹ (145)

Pain [is produced] by thorns, weapons, fire, fetters, anger, beating; pleasure is evidently produced by garlands, fragrances, tāmbūla, garments, food, women. (146)

⁴⁴⁷ Dr. ACHARYA has suggested completing this line as follows: bhedadvayam; abhedo <hi na tathyaṃ paramārthataḥ>. This might be interpreted thus: '[Thus there is a] duality; for [their] identity is not ultimately true.'

⁴⁴⁸ ex conj. But perhaps the transmitted no 'ṅagraho bhavet could be retained in the light of svasaṅgrāhe in the previous line (if that has been correctly interpreted): '...there can be no perception of [one's own] body'.

⁴⁴⁹ Guessing at an irregular locative: sarve. But a more radical emendation of the line is probably required. Dr. ACHARYA has suggested that the opening might be emended to tasyaivāpekṣayā.

⁴⁵⁰ ex conj. ACHARYA. This is thus a statement of the position that, although individual pieces of knowledge may come and go, the power of knowledge has to be a permanent state.

⁴⁵¹ ex conj. ISAACSON. The notion that nothing can do anything to itself appears to be not uncommonly accepted as a principle. Cf. Rāmakaṇṭha's Kiraṇavṛtti 1:15.20–23, in which he refers to his Mataṅgavṛtti, probably to the commentary on vidyāpāda 6:24ab (p. 161), quoted GOODALL 1998:195–6, fn. 111.

That by which this [sensation of pleasure or pain] is produced is an external object which is equipped of efficacy (arthakriyānvitaḥ). By [empirical observation of] positive and negative concomitance (anvaya-vyatirekābhyām) we grasp that it is permanent (sadā) [and] external (bahiḥ). (147)

This [external object] is of small value (tucchaḥ) because it is made up of what is of small value [viz. the elements] (tuccharūpatvāt), for everything is made up of māyā. And so the external object is such. Like [the branches of] a tree that is outward facing [because of being spread outwards(?)],⁴⁵² the body of effects that derive from māyā, starting from the principle of limited power to act (kalādyam) and going down to earth (kṣmāvasānakam) has been taught. It is connected by His power (tadvaśāt) to souls; He then brings about [for them] the [ultimate] aim of men.⁴⁵³ (148-9)

Since it is by means of being conjoined with something that has the shape of a body that souls experience the fruits of their own actions, [and] since souls are infinite, so too [i.e. infinite too] are the varieties of those [bodies] (tadbhedāḥ saṁsthitās tathā). (150)

From a variegated body of causes a variegated [effect] is accomplished (sādhyatām vrajet) in a single entity [viz. in the subtle body]. Although that body of effects is [internally] contradictory (viruddham api tatkāryam), it is an instrument [through which experience is made possible] (sāadhanam), just like the [very different] parts of a chariot [which together form a single instrument: the chariot].⁴⁵⁴ (151)

⁴⁵²The interpretation of the image is uncertain. Because of the syntax and the verse structure we expect it to relate to what precedes it, but the image would then be uninterpretable to me.

⁴⁵⁴This might seem at first a rather arbitrary interpretation of an obscure verse; but note that the verse is closely paralleled in Kiraṇa 4:27-28b, which may well be its source:

yady apy etan mithaḥ kāryaṁ viruddham asitātmakam tathāpy etat saṁśliṣṭam ekasmin vastuni sphuṭam narārthaṁ sādhyed bhinnaṁ narasya śakaṭāṅgavat.

Rāmakaṇṭha ad loc. identifies ekasmin vastuni as ekasmin sūkṣmadehe vastuni. As remarked in the preceding footnote, a number of echoes of the Kiraṇa are discernible in the closing verses of this chapter.

Creation (kriyā) of this insentient body of effects (acetanaśya kāryasya) is also called 'shaking' (kṣobho 'pi nāmataḥ).⁴⁵⁵ The 'shaking' of māyā must be partial; it cannot be total, because [that would mean] a destruction of the root cause, since [there would then result] an unwanted [total] transformation of it (vikāro 'syāḥ).⁴⁵⁶ And this root [cause] is not destroyed, because it is the cause of the arising of its own effects. (152-3)

The cause of these effects is the principle called māyā, the sphere of activity of the source[?] (yonigocaram). [It is] manifold with its manifold effects (vicitraṃ citrakāryeṇa), the locus of manifold powers, the place in which manifold [fruits of past] actions reside, equipped with manifold bodies, full of manifold worlds (vicitrādhārabhūyiṣṭham),⁴⁵⁷ and rich with manifold sense faculties. (154-5)

It is the basis (ādhāraḥ) of all [other lower] tattvas [which are created] for the sake of souls (paśūnām); bound souls are bound by the bonds because of their essential nature (svasvabhāvataḥ); †they have as their means the qualities of bound-soul-ness (paśutvaguṇasādhanāḥ)†.⁴⁵⁸ (156)

Deluded they become attached in this way to those experiences [that are to be had] there which are appropriate to bound souls through the mind (manasā paśuyogyeṣu):⁴⁵⁹ inseparability from impurity arises (paśutvāviraho bhavet). (157)

Pratoda spoke:

Is that [impurity] māyā, or is it an effect of this [māyā], or is it a property of the soul?⁴⁶⁰ Which view among these three views is correct (niścitaḥ)? (158)

⁴⁵⁵ ex conj.

⁴⁵⁶ This same objection is raised and settled respectively in Kiraṇa 4:16cd (vikārāt sarvanāśaḥ syād; vikāro na, jagat katham?) and 4:18ab (vāyuvedād yathodanvān upary eva vikārabhāk).

⁴⁵⁷ ex conj. We expect a reference to bhuvanas in this list. Dr. Kei KATAOKA's conjecture completes the triad of evolutes (tanukaraṇabhuvanāni) of māyā (for which see fn. 140 on p. 180 above).

⁴⁵⁸ I am uncertain how to interpret this compound. Is it intended to describe the bonds, which have not been stated in the nominative? And is paśutva here a synonym for mala?

⁴⁵⁹ ex conj. ISAACSON. Perhaps paśubhogyeṣu is also a possible emendation in pāda d.

⁴⁶⁰ This echoes Garuḍa's question in Kiraṇa 2:11:

tvayānādir malaḥ prokto māyeyo 'syātmano 'pi vā guṇas tadvyatirikto vā malo brūhi kimātmakaḥ.

Prakāśa spoke:

Impurity is taught not to be māyā; nor is it established to be a product of this [māyā] (na tadbhedo vyavasthitah), for māyā has been taught to be a seductress (*mohini*⁴⁶¹) and to be that which awakens the power of knowledge of the sentient [soul] (jñānopodbalinī) through the embrace of the instruments that are her effects: delusion is not produced by her herself but through her effects.⁴⁶² (159–160b)

[But then, you may argue,] māyā's effects (tatkāryam) have been taught to be everything [on the tattvakrama that there is in the way of bondage]. How then is impurity to be established?⁴⁶³ [It is located there] because impurity (paśutvam) is located in that [bound soul], and that bound soul is located on the path [of the tattvas]. And this [bound soul] is made up of [the evolutes] of māyā (sa ca yonimayaḥ). Therefore ⁴⁶¹ Arguably the transmitted mohanī could be retained as an authorial aīśa formation. But note how inconsistently such forms appear in manuscripts: in Kiraṇa 2:12c (quoted in the next footnote); as well as in 2:15c, M^y, along with almost all the other sources, gives mohinī.

⁴⁶² The ideas and their formulation here are paralleled in Kiraṇa 2:12–13:

*sahajo malo mato; māyākāryam āgāmiko malaḥ.
māyā no mohinī proktā svataḥ; kāryāt prakāśikā yataḥ svakāryasaṃśliṣṭā caitanyadyotikātmanaḥ malaṃ vidārya cidvyaktir ekadeśe bhavaty aṇoḥ.*

I am aware that the first pāda of this unit is hypermetrical; I have adopted here not the readings preferred by Rāmakaṇṭha, but those that I think the distribution of readings suggests to be primary (see GOODALL 1998:236 and 238, footnotes 228 and 235).

⁴⁶³ Or 'Where, then, is mala to be located [in the tattvakrama]?' This rather obscurely formulated question adverts to the problem that mala is believed in by Saiddhāntikas as a real entity and yet it finds no place on their ontological ladder, the tattvakrama. (Cf. Nīśvāsa nayasūtra 2:20cd, f. 32^v: na ca vastvantaraṃ kiñcid yas tattvād vyatiricyate.) The solution that is given here below by the Parākhya and frequently by Rāmakaṇṭha is to state that it is vicariously included in the tattvakrama because it is inseparable from the bound soul, hence its synonym paśutva (see Kiraṇavṛtti 1:13.9–10 and GOODALL 1998:186). The source for the Parākhya seems to me very likely to be Kiraṇa 2:18–19b:

ātmasthaṃ tat paśutvaṃ syāt, paśur apy adhvamadhyagaḥ prokto yena matas tena malas tadbhinnalakṣaṇaḥ.*

'The effects of māyā might be all [that there is in the way of bondage]. How [can you prove] another innate impurity? That mala must (syāt) reside in the [bound] soul. And because the bound soul is taught to be situated in (-madhyagaḥ) the path [of the tattvas], mala is held to be different from that [path of tattvas].'

impurity is that which obstructs the sentient [soul]. (160c–61)

Impurity (paśutvam) is not the state of being of a bound soul (paśor bhāvaḥ):⁴⁶⁴ the nature [of the soul] is [rather] its own power of knowledge (svarūpaṃ svacidātmakam). Therefore impurity (paśutvam) is nescience (ajñānam), or the state of being characterised by ignorance (bhāvo vājñānalakṣaṇaḥ). Since it obstructs the sentient [soul], is is called in scripture 'nescience' (ajñānam). The consciousness of the soul is that which is to be revealed; her effects are what reveal it.⁴⁶⁵ (162–3)

It being the case that impurity is never separated [from the bound soul], and since it is therefore also a cause of the soul's condition of being an experiencer (asyāpi bhogakartṛtva hetutaḥ),⁴⁶⁶ it is called, using a secondary sense of the word (bhaktyā) a 'property' of that [soul], for the soul [in fact] has sentiency as his [true] property.⁴⁶⁷ (164)

Since this [impurity] is held (dhṛtaḥ) by the soul (tena), therefore it is, as it were, a 'property' (dharma iva). Impurity is beginninglessly connected [to the bound soul]; liberation comes about through its being ⁴⁶⁴Prakāśa is making the point that paśutva is here a potentially confusing technical term for mala rather than a synonym of paśubhāva. It means rather the opposite of what we might expect. Since it gives here a list of synonyms of mala, it seems likely that the Parākhya is still drawing upon the same passage in the Kiraṇa (2:19c–20):

avidyā hy āvṛtir mūrccā paryāyās tasya coditāḥ sa cāvidyādiparyāyabhedaiḥ siddho mate mate.*

⁴⁶⁵Cf. the rhetorically similar half-line 15:38ab.

⁴⁶⁶*ex conj.* This is a very tentative conjecture. When writing this half-line, the author of the Parākhya may have had before him Kiraṇa 2:22ab: male sati bhavanty etā bhoktṛtvaṃ ca na kevalam. 'These [various processes, such as having to be bound, mentioned above]—and not just the condition of being an experiencer—come into being [only] when there is mala.' However the subsequent text of the Kiraṇa is reconstructed, this half-line is in all sources followed, as here in the Parākhya, by a consideration of the possibility that mala is a dharma of the soul.

⁴⁶⁷*ex conj.* Once again it is probably the Kiraṇa that is here drawn upon, for this obscurely expressed discussion is found there too in 2:22c and following, from which I quote 2:24c–25b:

ciddharme puṃsi no dharmo; yadi syāt, pariñāmaṇ.*

As I have suggested (GOODALL 1998:250, fn. 274), it is possible that one of these half-lines was a secondary creation intended to replace the other. Since ciddharme is in the Kiraṇa unmistakably intended as a bahuvrīhi describing the soul, I have assumed that it is in the Parākhya too, and I have accordingly emended pauruṣo to puruṣo.

separated.⁴⁶⁸ (165)

[But] since it is all-pervading (vibhutve), separation [from it] is impossible; therefore (tat) there must be the destruction (vadhaḥ) of its activity, O sage.⁴⁶⁹ 'Separation' is held to be the blocking of [its] powers, just as [blocking by means of mantras is known to be possible] in the case of the power of fire.⁴⁷⁰ (166)

Although pure Śiva-hood is plainly to be found in the [bound] soul, the realisation of self cannot come about because of that impurity which blocks it.⁴⁷¹ (167)

For when that [Śiva-hood] is completely [realised], then the impurity is destroyed (malo vrajati saṃkṣayam).⁴⁷² Then liberation comes about for that [soul] because of the shining forth of his own inner nature (sva-svarūpāvabhāsataḥ). Just as [the liberated soul is, so too] is the eternal Śiva (sakṛccivāḥ) taught to be; although He is the same, He is [from the very first and independent of anyone or anything else] equipped of power (samāno 'pi balānvitāḥ).⁴⁷³ (168–169b)

⁴⁶⁸ ex conj. KATAOKA.

⁴⁶⁹ ex conj. (for confusion between ya and dha in the transmission, see p. xcvi). The conjecture is likely to be correct for vadha is the word used in Kiraṇa 2:27, quoted in the next footnote.

Observe that this is the only place in the chapters transmitted to us of the Parākhyā where the author has resorted to a line-filling vocative. In this it contrasts markedly with most tantras (see p. liv).

⁴⁷⁰ This again is probably drawn from the Kiraṇa (2:27c–29b):

vibhor api malasyāsyā tacchakteḥ kriyate vadhaḥ upāyāc chaktisaṃrodhaḥ kathamcit kriyate male yathāgner dāhikā śaktir mantreṇāśu niruddhyate tadvat tacchaktisaṃrodhād viśiṣṭa iti kathyate.

(The image is of course used elsewhere and in other contexts, e.g. in Paṇḍara 4:158ab, but its application and expression here recall the Kiraṇa.)

⁴⁷¹ The reading śuddhaṃ in the first pāda is that of Tryambakaśambhu's quotation, confirmed by the short commentary he offers, in his Śisuhitā, for which see the critical apparatus.

⁴⁷³ Perhaps this translation reads too much into the text. We might instead translate: 'At once he is taught [to have become] Śiva, just the same as Him (tadvat): equal [to Him] and (api(?)) equipped with power.'

As the radiance of the sun is observed to illumine the eye (dṛṣṭaṃ nayanasya prakāśakam), so the radiance of Śiva in the same way brightens the radiance of the soul (tattejaḥkhyāpakam bhavet). (169c–170b)

Since all [this] is revealed [only] when the effects that are made up of māyā are connected [to the soul], therefore this [Śiva-hood(?)] is logically taught to be an ‘effect’, †because it is shown to be an effect of that†.⁴⁷⁴ This has been proved to a certain extent (kiñcit) by direct perception (dṛṣṭapramāṇena) and to a certain extent by means of scripture (āgamataḥ). (170c–171)

This entire sequence of tattvas (tattvakramaḥ) ending in that of the earth (kṣmāntaḥ) has been taught which—by means of [the soul’s] close attachment with the instruments and effects [that derive from māyā], starting with time and kalā—brings about the manifestation of [the soul’s innate] consciousness (kālakalādikāryakaraṇavyāsaṅgacid-vyaktikṛt), in which the opportunity that arose was taken for [teaching also that it is] the sphere for the consumption of one’s own [experience] that is determined by [one’s] past actions, and which arose in the context proper to [a discussion] of the ‘womb’ [of māyā] (yonisvāvasarāgataḥ).⁴⁷⁵ That other [sequence], called [the sequence] of worlds, which was created by the Supreme [Lord] is now about to be taught. (172)

Thus the fourth chapter, an exposition of the topic of the ‘womb’, in the great tantra called the Supreme.

The translation ‘eternal Śiva’ of the compound sakṛcchivaḥ assumes that the element sakṛt means ‘once and for all time’; it may be paralleled in Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 18:41ab (evaṃ sampūjayed devaṃ niyatātmā sakṛcchivam...), but it is perhaps more likely that sakṛt is there an adverb, since this is the concluding verse of the chapter, and the second half gives a phalaśruti (sa yāti paramaṃ sthānam aprāpyam akṛtātmabhiḥ).

⁴⁷⁴ The purport of tatkāryadarsanāt is not clear to me. Nor is it entirely clear to me what the purpose of the entire unit is, unless it be to account for a description in scripture of śivatva being an ‘effect’, since this is arguably in some sense true, while it is at the same time held to be an innate property of the self.

PARĀKHYATANTRA CHAPTER V

Prakāśa spoke:

The measurement of the shell of the egg [of Brahmā], what exists (sthitih) within the Lokāloka [mountain ring], the position of the Rudras beginning with those in the principle of water (jalādirudrasaṁsthānam), and all that is situated above māyā (māyordhvaṁ saṁsthitīś ca).⁴⁷⁶ (1)

That [first mentioned] measurement [viz. that of the shell of the egg] is ten million yojanas [in thickness].⁴⁷⁷ First [the length of] the yojana is to be determined.⁴⁷⁸ The mote that is caught in sunlight in a window grill (jālāntare 'rkareṇur yaḥ) is eight times the dimensions of an atom (vasusaṁkhyāṇumātrakaḥ).⁴⁷⁹ (2)

⁴⁷⁶As in the other chapters, this first verse is a program of topics to follow: the measurement of the egg of Brahmā is dealt with in 5:2-5; all that it contains is the subject of 5:6-144; the Rudras governing the tattva of water up to that of māyā are listed in 5:145-155b; the pure path, above māyā, is treated in 5:155c-161.

⁴⁷⁸This is not such an odd proceeding as it might appear, for units of measure were far from standardised.

⁴⁷⁹This differs from accounts that are based upon those systems for which the atom is the basic building block of the universe. For the Vaiśeṣikas, two paramāṇus form a dvyāṇuka and three dvyāṇukas form a tryaṇuka, which is the smallest perceptible unit: the mote in the sunbeam. The Vaiśeṣika conception is to be found in Purāṇic literature, for see Brahmavaivarta 4.96.49cd, which gives this same sequence except that it refers

[Multiply that] similarly [eight times and you have the dimension of] the tip of a hair. [Multiply that] in the same way [and you have] a louse egg (likṣā);⁴⁸⁰ [multiply that in the same way and you have] a louse; [multiply that in the same way and you have] a grain of barley; [multiply that in the same way and you have] a finger[-breadth]. Then with twenty-four fingers (tat prakṛtyaṅgulaiḥ) [you have] a hand.⁴⁸¹ With four such [hands] (taiḥ... vedapiṇḍitaiḥ) [you have] a bow (dhanuḥ).⁴⁸² (3)

With two of these (taiḥ... padasaṃkhyātaiḥ)⁴⁸³ [we have] a stick (daṇḍaḥ). A krośa is two thousand of those [sticks]. A gavyūti consists in two krośas, and a yojana is similarly [the length of two gavyūtis] (tadvad eva ca).⁴⁸⁴ (4) to the dvyapuka as an aṇu: paramāṇudvayenāṇus trasareṇus tu te trayāḥ.

But Śaiva tantras are far from alone in having the trasareṇu consist of eight rather than six atoms, for see, e.g. Manusmṛti 8:132-3 and the Purāṇic sources quoted in Appendix IV. Commenting on Svacchanda 10:15cd (jālāntaragate bhānu paramāṇuḥ sa ucyaṭe), Kṣemarāja observes in his Svacchandatantrōdya that the paramāṇu spoken of in such accounts is not actually the same as that of the Vaiśeṣikas: ayaṃ ca paramāṇus tārīkopaḥ paramāṇuvilakṣaṇaḥ. For a table presenting the surviving accounts of units of measurement (of length) given in early Siddhāntatantras (as well as in the Svacchanda and in two Purāṇic accounts), see Appendix IV.

⁴⁸¹Twenty-four is represented by prakṛti since that is the twenty-fourth tattva from the bottom in the Sāṅkhya enumeration. The Parākhya's inclusion of guṇa as a tattva (5:150) should make it the twenty-fifth; but twenty-four is the unit of multiplication at this stage also in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 24:4 and in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:7.

⁴⁸³In good Sanskrit a dual would be required, unless we were to emend to pādasamkhyātaiḥ and understand the number four; but two is the number given at this stage also in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:8.

⁴⁸⁴*ex conj.* Also possible would be taddvayena ca, which is the suggestion of Dr. ACHARYA. Strictly speaking, 5:4c is unmetrical, but see introduction, p. lxxxvi.

⁴⁸⁵*ex conj.* ACHARYA. Also possible instead of āsanaṃ are perhaps bhuvanaṃ or bhavanaṃ; cf. Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:9cd: tasyāntaḥ kāñcanaṃ dhāma kālāgnes tāvad claimed to be a hundred of these [yojanas]. One hundred crores below is the ten-million[-yojana-thick] egg shell. (5)

Inside that is the Rudra known as Kālāgni. Having the form of fire he will burn everything at the time that is known as [the time of] resorption [of the universe]. (6)

Therefore [he is known as] the Rudra 'Fire of Time' (kālānalaḥ), situated below the surface of the earth. Bearing the egg of Brahmā †...†.⁴⁸⁶ (7)

His body is ten million times as bright as the sun at the time of resorption of the universe. The palace of the Rudra Kūṣmāṇḍa is touched by the shoots of sparks from his flames.⁴⁸⁷ (8)

He flames with the power of the radiance that is thrown forth by (-mukha-) sparkling gems(?). And he is surrounded by⁴⁸⁸ Rudras of the same ilk numbering a thousand million. (9)

His palace is ten million [yojanas] in height; its flames are a hundred million; the smoke [above], which is supportless and black, is half of that [in height].⁴⁸⁹ (10)

eva hi, and cf. tadgrhaṃ in Kiraṇa 8:5. But āsanaṃ has been accepted on the grounds that the measurement given of a hundred yojanas is inappropriately small for his bhuvana, the height of which is given in 5:10 below as ten million yojanas. And it is his throne that is first mentioned in Svacchanda 10:22abc: siṃhāsanaṃ mahādīptaṃ sahasradvayavistṛtaṃ/ sahasraṃ ucchritaṃ tasya.

The expression tasyāntaḥ in the half-line of the Mṛgendra just quoted is to be interpreted to mean inside the egg (not inside the shell). This is more clearly expressed here as well as in the Svacchanda (10:2c-3a): atha kālāgnirudrādhaḥ kaṭāhaḥ saṃvyavasthitaḥ/ koṭiyojanabāhulyaḥ.

⁴⁸⁶It appears that there was some reference in this damaged line to the Rudras outside the egg of Brahmā who support it. They are mentioned again in 5:142-4, when we have gone up above the egg, but since they surround the egg, they can be mentioned at its bottom too, and in connection with Kālāgni, as they are in Kiraṇa 8:92.

⁴⁸⁷The spelling Kūṣmāṇḍa is preferred in Northern sources; Southern manuscripts generally prefer Kūśmāṇḍa, and this is the form that M^y consistently uses. I have corrected this to the Northern spelling on the (rather weak) grounds that this fits better the nirvacana given in 5:38.

⁴⁸⁹As we have seen in fn. 485 on p. 281 above, the measurement of the height of the āsana of Kālāgni is only a thousand in Svacchanda 10:22, but the height of the bhuvana is given as ten million in 10:28, followed, as here, by the same layers of fire and smoke. The Kiraṇa (in E_v) appears to share the same measurements, except that it has blackness in place of the smoke (8:5):

*tadgrhaṃ koṭisaṃkhyātaṃ tajjvālā daśakoṭayaḥ
nirālambaṃ tadūrdhvaṃ tu pañcakoṭimitaṃ tamaḥ,*

Above that are the terrible hells, thirty-two [in number] (buddhibheda-caturguṇāḥ).⁴⁹⁰ They are attained as a result of particular evil deeds; they as does the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 24:7–8a). The Mṛgendra (vidyāpāda 13:12) gives no measurements for the palace, but shares the Parākhyā's ten crores of flame then five of smoke.

⁴⁹⁰This is the most straightforward of the three interpretations of this expression that seem to me conceivable ($8 \times 4 = 32$), since what follows is a list of thirty-two names. (For this interpretation I am assuming that buddhibheda, by the convention of bhūtasamkhyā, means 'eight'.)

It is worth considering the possibility that we are meant to understand the expression to mean at the same time 'of four kinds in accordance with the variety of mental propensities [of embodied souls]', in other words that the hells listed below are each divided into four, matching the four negative buddhidharmas, namely adharma, avairāgya, anaiśvarya, and ajñāna. In the Svacchanda, 140 hells are listed and named, but the text also states that this number can be arrived at by multiplying a basic group of thirty-five by four (10:76ab): pañcatrīṃśat tu narakāś caturbhedaḥ prakīrtitāḥ. (This passage of the Svacchanda, 10:75c–93, is devoted to explaining that all fifty crores of hells are 'purified' in initiation whether one follows the list of 140, thirty-five, thirty-two or three. Fifty crores is an extremely high number of hells and is not matched, as far as I am aware, in the Siddhāntas; the Prayogamañjarī speaks of five crores in 9:68. The elsewhere common numbers of hells, namely twenty-one, as in Manusmṛti 4:87–90, and twenty-eight, as in Bhāgavatapurāṇa 5.26:7, do not seem to appear in early Saiddhāntika literature.)

But in other Siddhāntas where the number of hells is multiplied we find the following pattern: thirty-two hells are listed (as here), of which three are said to be eight-fold and the remaining 29 are said to be four-fold. This gives a total of 140 hells. Thus in Kiraṇa 8:6–12 the total of 140 is mentioned, the thirty-two names are listed, then it is stated that the three eight-fold hells are Avīci, Raurava and Kumbhīpāka, and that all the others are four-fold. (These three have a special status, for they are the only hells mentioned by the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha [4:87–8], the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha [4:2], and the Mālinīvijayottara [5:2]; in the Sarvajñānottara the only three to be named are Raurava, Mahāraurava and Kumbhīpāka [IFP MSS T. No. 334, p. 57, T. 760, p. 41].) The account of the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 23:73–81) is essentially the same as that of the Kiraṇa, except that the three eight-fold hells are there Avīci, Ambarīṣa and Raurava. In the Niśvāsamukha (4:99–104, f. 17^v–18^r), a list of thirty-two names is given (differing in order from all others, but sharing the same names as the account of the Mataṅga), concluding with the following damaged text (4:104c–105):

[śatāṣṭādhikasamya] <<ktāḥ>>... *samya*utāḥ savetālaṃ śataṃ hy etan narakāṇāṃ prakīrtitam.

bestow various particular types of suffering. (11)

[i] Raurava, [ii] Darkness (tamaḥ), [iii] Cold (śītaḥ), [iv] Hot (uṣṇaḥ), and [v] Santāpaka. Then [vi] Padma, [vii] Mahāpadma, and [viii] Kāla-sūtra. (12)

Then [ix] Needle-mouth (sūcīmukhaḥ), [x] Tāla,⁴⁹¹ [xi] Sword (khaḍgākhyāḥ), [xii] Razor-blade (kṣuradhārakah), [xiii] Ambarīṣa, and after that [xiv] Heated-coals (taptāṅgāraḥ), [xv] Sudāhakṛt.⁴⁹² (13)

[xvi] Santapta, [xvii] Lac and [xviii] Flesh-eater (jatumāmsādaḥ), [xix] Sigh-less (nirucchvāsaḥ) and [xx] Full-of-sighs (socchvasaḥ), and [xxi] Pair-of-mountains (yugmaparvatasamjñāś ca), [xxii] Śālmālī, [xxiii] Trir-nivāsa.⁴⁹³ (14)

The damaged line appears to be part of a statement to the effect that a further 108 hells are to be added to the thirty-two, to make up 140.

In the Mṛgendra's account (vidyāpāda 13:13–21b) these multiplications are not stated, but it is not impossible that the same model is presupposed. [HULIN (1980:291–2) appears to misunderstand the text to say that there are thirty-three envelopes (puṭa), inside which are the thirty-two named places of torture; what the text actually appears to say is that there are thirty-three layers, sandwiched in between which are the thirty-two named places of torture.] Only in the Mṛgendra are the names given in the same order as in our text; but in the Mṛgendra they are arranged into four groups of eight known as the eight Narakas, the eight Mahānarakas, the eight [Naraka]rājas, and the eight Rājarājeśvaras. It is conceivable then, that our expression buddhibhedacaturguṇāḥ has been chosen to refer to this structure.

I suspect, however, that our text intended to follow the model of the Kiraṇa and the Mataṅga, because the number daśaṣṭārdhadaśa^o in 5:32cd below can, I think, be interpreted to mean 140 [(10 + (0.5 × 8)) × 10], and because the text singles out the three last named hells and calls them the Rājamaheśvaras (5:33ab), after or before which I suspect some statement has gone missing to the effect that those three are eight-fold, unlike all the others, which are in this verse stated to be four-fold, or, more explicitly, to the effect that those three are eight-fold and the rest are four-fold (cf. Mataṅgavidyāpāda 23:81cd). And this brings me to one more possible interpretation of buddhibhedacaturguṇāḥ. It seems to me conceivable that, whether or not some such more explicit statement has gone missing later on in the text, we can read the information into this epithet: 'eight[-fold, in the case of the three Rājamaheśvara hells, and] four-fold [in the case of the twenty-nine others]'.⁴⁹¹

⁴⁹¹In accordance with the reading here, supported by the nirvacana in 5:21 below, we should probably emend Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:16ab to read sūcyāsyatālakhadgākhyākṣuradhārāmbārīṣakāḥ. HULIN (1980:292) retains °kālakhadgākhyā°, which he takes to be a single name, but this would leave this aṣṭaka with only seven members.

⁴⁹²*ex conj.* It is probable that the name given here was the same as that for which the nirvacana is given in 5:23 below. Moreover this is the name we find in Kiraṇa 8:9b.

⁴⁹³*ex conj.* The nirvacana in 5:27 below and the parallel in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:18b had earlier induced me to emend this name to kṣutpipāsakah, but see fn. 507 on p. 286

And [xxiv] Place-of-worms (krimīṇām nicayaḥ),⁴⁹⁴ [xxv] Iron-pillar (lohastambhaḥ), [xxvi] Full-of-excrement (viṇmayāḥ), [xxvii] Vaitaraṇyā.⁴⁹⁵ Beyond that [xxviii] Tāmisra and [xxix] Andhatāmasa, [xxx] Avīcī, [xxxi] Kumbhapāka,⁴⁹⁶ [xxxii] Mahāraurava. (15–16b)

Raurava is that into which are cast weeping souls (rudantaḥ prāṇinaḥ). [The hell] called Darkness (tamaḥsaṃjñāḥ) is one in which delusion is great; it deludes the quality of sentience. Cold (śītaḥ) is [the hell] in which there is the onset of cold fever; it makes the whole body to shake.⁴⁹⁷ (16c–17)

Hot (uṣṇaḥ) is [the hell] in which there is the onset of extremely hot fever; it heats all the limbs. [San]tāpa [is so called because it] creates internal heat; it dries out the cavern of the belly (śoṣitodarakandaraḥ).⁴⁹⁸ (18)

Padma is a mass of very cold snow (suśīto himakardamaḥ) with the form of a lotus (padmasamākāraḥ).⁴⁹⁹ Mahāpadma has the same form, but it has more cold snow (śītahimottaraḥ). (19)

Kālasūtra is [a hell in which there is] a black fetter which wraps tightly round three times (triguṇadr̥dhaveṣṭanaḥ).⁵⁰⁰ Needle-mouth

⁴⁹⁴Purists might prefer the orthography kṛmīṇām, but it is clear that the redactor of the Parākhyatantra elsewhere treated vocalic ṛ as though it were ri (or ru), for see p. lxxxiii above.

⁴⁹⁵I guess that this is an aīśa feminine nominative singular, used here as an alternative to Vaitaraṇī to avoid the metrical fault of having both the second and third syllables of the pāda short.

⁴⁹⁶The more normal form of the name is Kumbhīpāka, but that would violate the metre here, and so Kumbhapāka is probably authorial.

⁴⁹⁹One could consider emending the last pāda to suśītahimakardamaḥ to make it a bahuvrīhi describing Padma: 'in which there is very cold snow'. I guess that himakardamaḥ means snow, and that the expression is used instead of just hima, even though that word can by itself mean snow, because hima is commonly understood also to mean 'mist' or 'fog' (particularly in South India: cf. the Tamil usages of pai and paṇikaṭṭi). But perhaps himakardamaḥ is intended to express 'a morass of snow [into which one sinks]'. Padma and Mahāpadma are elsewhere conceived of as places of unendurable heat, e.g., in Ur-Skandapurāṇa 44 and 45.

⁵⁰⁰*ex conj.* I can make no sense of the transmitted readings trikaṇṇo and trikaṇṭa°; it seems to me just conceivable that the fetter should wrap round the tortured souls' bodies three times, because this might be intended to suggest the three aspects of time (past, present and future), and thus Kālasūtra would be a doubly appropriate name: a black thread with three strands. Note that, for the metre to be correct, the vocalic

(sūcīmukhaḥ) is [a hell in which there is] an extremely sharp needle that splits men's faces.⁵⁰¹ (20)

Tāla [is a hell which], as by a palm-leaf (tālavat), cuts open [the flesh of souls' bodies] by means of bark garments on their bodies. Sword (khadgaḥ), equipped with sword blades (khadgadhārāparigrahaḥ), cuts the limbs [of the souls' bodies]. (21)

Razor-blade (kṣuradhāro), in which there are razor-blades [everywhere] without any space free of them (kṣuradhārānirantaraḥ), cuts the limbs. Ambarīṣa is filled (prapūryate) with very sharp remorse (ambarīṣeṇa).⁵⁰² (22)

Heated-coals (taptāṅgāraḥ) is the colour of fire, it is the repository of red[hot] coals. Sudāhakṛt is filled with flaming, red[hot] stones. (23)

Santapta is taught to be heat-creating, [a hell] in which there is nothing but flaming fire. Lac-mud (jatupaṅkaḥ) is [a hell] in which [souls'] bodies are destroyed by being smeared with flaming lac.⁵⁰³ (24)

r must once again be treated as r+vowel (see p. lxxxiii above). In Ur-Skandapurāṇa 39, which is devoted to a hell of this name, the sinners' misdeeds are measured with a great black(?) thread, and proportionate(?) bits of their bodies are cut off from them (39:9):

kālasūtreṇa mahatā mitvā mitvā tu duṣkṛtam chindanty aṅgāni jantūnām kuṇṭhāgrair āyudhair bhṛśam.

⁵⁰¹ ex conj. The conjecture may well be wrong. Perhaps what is instead intended is that the souls there are embodied with tiny mouths insufficient to take in the food they need. This is similar to the notion described in Śiṣyalekha 40, where having a tiny mouth makes it impossible to quench thirst. But we do find the notion that souls are tormented by being perforated by needles in this hell elsewhere (Devībhāgavatapurāṇa 8.23:26–27b):

*... sūcīmukhe ca narake pātyate nijakarmanā
vittagrahaṃ ca puruṣaṃ vāyakāḥ iva yāmyakāḥ kiṃkarāḥ sarvato 'ṅgeṣu sūtraiḥ parivayanti hi.*

⁵⁰² It may be that some other manner of thing was intended by the redactor with ambarīṣa: a common meaning of the word appears to be 'frying-pan' and Apte records also 'war' and 'sun'. The version of this half-line quoted by Kṣemarāja seems likely to me to be a secondary 'improvement' composed by a transmitter of the text who was also uncertain about the intended meaning of the, as I think, original version. His half-verse translates: 'Ambareṣa [is so called] because it rains down very sharp arrows from the sky.'

⁵⁰³ M^y's reading is equally possible: the anacolouthon is paralleled in 5:19b and 5:20d, and in M^y's readings of 5:25cd and 5:28b.

Flesh-eater (māṃsādaḥ) tears off mouthfuls of flesh from every part of the body. Sigh-less (nirucchvāsaḥ) is characterised by the absence of breathing as a result of [all(?)] the sense organs being blocked (akṣaṣaṃ-rodhāt). (25)

Full-of-sighs (socchvāsaḥ) is full of sighs, the place of those wretches who are without activity (niśceṣṭahatakāśrayaḥ).⁵⁰⁴ Pair-of-mountains (yugmāśmaḥ) [is a place of torture that is] crushed on both sides by the smashing together of mountains of rough rock (karkaśāśmāgasandaṃśa-paripīḍitaḥ).⁵⁰⁵ (26)

Śālmālī [is a hell] which splits with its spines †...†.⁵⁰⁶

Tririvāsa [is the hell] in which the bellies [of the souls] are tormented with the suffering of thirst and with hunger.⁵⁰⁷ (27)

Place-of-worms (krīmīṇām nicayaḥ) is taught to be a heap of nothing but worms.⁵⁰⁸ Iron-pillar (lohasṭambhaḥ) is where bodies are scorched ⁵⁰⁴ ex conj. I cannot interpret the transmitted reading. This is not a completely convincing guess, for the word hataka is perhaps used only of people for whom one feels or wishes to elicit sympathy, and this may not be appropriate here.

⁵⁰⁵ ex conj. The more obvious vocabulary in the reading of Kṣemarāja (adri for aśma and for aga) is probably secondary (the result of an attempt to remove obscurity). In both the transmitted readings the syntax is the same, and it is not obvious to me how it might be interpreted.

⁵⁰⁶ The emendation to kaṇṭaka is fitting because Śālmālī is a name for the spiny silk-cotton tree. The middle syllables of the half-line are more problematic. Note that this hell is referred to in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:18ab as śālmālīlohapradīpta. HULIN (1980:292) offers the following tentative interpretation (which he follows by a question-mark): 'où brille le rouge (des fleurs) du cotonnier épineux'. Govindarāja, commenting on Manusmṛti 4:90, offers the following: śālmalo yatra śālmalikāṇṭakais tudyate. In the full description of the Śālmala hell to which chapter 38 of the Ur-Skandapurāṇa is devoted, it is a place full of spiny silk-cotton trees surrounded by an iron outer wall and covered with a great net in which the sinners are tormented by people with various weapons. But the iron wall and iron net are said to be common to all the hells in the first two verses of the following chapter.

⁵⁰⁷ I had earlier preferred to assume that the name intended in the Parākhya was, as in the Mṛgendra, kṣutpipāsa ('Hunger-and-thirst'), because the accounts of the Mṛgendra and Parākhya are very close, and because this half-verse would then have provided a natural explanation of the name, which it does not seem to do for the name Tririvāsa. But tririvāsa is the form to be found in Kṣemarāja's quotation of our half-verse and Kṣemarāja's version of the name appears better to fit his claim that it is the same hell that the Svacchanda refers to (10:52a) as Trirāvarta. Furthermore, both the corrupt versions of the name transmitted in M^y (here and in 5:14) look more likely to have been corruptions of tririvāsa[ka]ḥ than of kṣutpipāsaḥ. Neither Trirāvarta nor Tririvāsa is an interpretable name to me.

⁵⁰⁸ Once again, M^y's reading seems equally possible: see fn. 503 on p. 285.

on flaming iron plates. (28)

Full-of-excrement (viṭpūrṇaḥ) fills the mouths [of the tortured souls therein] with the lumps that fall from the passage that carries excrement.⁵⁰⁹ In the Vaitaraṇī [river] creatures filled with pus are carried (vitāryante).⁵¹⁰ (29)

Tāmisra is blackly smoky⁵¹¹ on every side [and is] mixed with darkness. Andhatāmisra is the same, but in it the directions cannot be discerned. (30)

Avīcī is covered with waves (vīcibhiś channaḥ)⁵¹² of pus, blood, mud and such like. Kumbhīpāka is a flaming-tongued [fire] in a great and terrible pot-mouth.⁵¹³ (31)

The one called Mahāaurava is extremely fierce and frightening. «...». Thus these have the number 140 (daśāṣṭārdhadadaśasamkhyā-parigrahāḥ).⁵¹⁴ The three that have been named at the end are the Rāja-⁵⁰⁹The constitution and interpretation of this half-verse are not secure. I guess that śilā might here be used (like śirā/sirā) in the sense of a tube or vessel of the body. The interpretation seems to me to be just conceivably what Kṣemarāja understood, for, when he quotes this half-verse to introduce Svacchanda 10:51a, he appears to be identifying the hell that the Parākhya calls viṭpūrṇa/viṇmūtra with the hell that the Svacchanda calls arvāksīrāḥ.

⁵¹⁰It is possible that the extra half-line quoted immediately following this one by Kṣemarāja (ad Svacchanda 10:48), as though they formed a single quotation, belonged to the Parākhya. (In this instance Kṣemarāja does not indicate the provenance of what he quotes.) But since all the other nirvacanas are contained within single half-lines, and since the extra half-line has an explicatory function (and is thus the kind of thing that might get jotted down in the margin by somebody studying the text and thereafter be mistakenly incorporated into the body of the text by a subsequent transmitter) I have decided to follow M^y in omitting it. It might be interpreted as follows: 'And that is why that terrible river always flows with a bad smell.'

⁵¹³The fire must be inside the pot, but it is the mouth of the pot spewing forth flames that is 'seen' from the outside. Cf. Śiṣyalekha 86, in which the tormented who stretch out their necks, presumably beyond the mouth of the pot, are beaten back in by tormentors with iron clubs.

⁵¹⁴For the interpretation of this number and for the suggestion that some text may dropped out here, see fn. 490 on p. 282 above. As Dr. ACHARYA has pointed out to me, we could perhaps force the text here to yield the number thirty-two as well: 18 + (0.5 x 8) + 10, but to do this we would have to read eight twice.

The interval [between each] of these is 9,900,000 [yojanas]. Each of these [places] that torment evil-doers is 100,000 [yojanas] high.⁵¹⁵ (34ab)

Going ninety lakhs [above that, we find] the world of Kūṣmāṇḍa, which is thirty thousand [yojanas high].⁵¹⁶ This Kūṣmāṇḍa has a gaping hatchet face (viṭaṅkamukhakoṭarah)⁵¹⁷ with flames from the fire that arises from ⁵¹⁵ Thus each hell, together with the empty layer between itself and the next hell, takes up one crore (ten million) yojanas. Altogether, then, the hells probably occupy a tranche of 320 million yojanas. Svacchanda 10:93 reverses this proportion, giving ninety-nine lakhs as the measurement of each hell and one lakh as that of each of the gaps.

Our measurements for the hells are the same as those of the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 24:8c–9b) and of the Tantrāloka (8:27). Beyond those, the Parākhyā counts a gap of nine lakh yojanas before the world of Kūṣmāṇḍa, and that world is then said to be 30,000 yojanas high. The Mataṅga reverses these figures, giving 30,000 yojanas as the measurement of the gap and nine lakhs as the measurement of the world of Kūṣmāṇḍa. Thereafter both texts agree that each of the pātālas is nine thousand yojanas and that there is a gap between each of a thousand yojanas (Parākhyā 5:60 and Mataṅgavidyāpāda 24:11). Thus both texts have the world of Kūṣmāṇḍa and the pātālas (including the gaps in between them) take up a further lakh of yojanas.

The neat measurements of the Mrgendra (vidyāpāda 13:13) are somewhat different, for there the total (up to, but not including, our earth) is said to be 330 million. This is composed of thirty-two hells, each measuring one lakh (a hundred thousand), as here, plus thirty-three interstices (puṭa), each of which measures nine million yojanas: so far this totals 300,200,000 (as 13:21ab reassures us). There is then a gap of 30,000 and then the half-iron, half-golden world of Kūṣmāṇḍa of 900,000 (13:21cd); then six worlds of a thousand each, one of 28,800,000, six spaces (vasati) each of 9,000, and a single space of 10,000 (13:25–6). This (which reaches up to our earth) makes up 29,800,000, and thus altogether (with the previous sub-total of 300,200,000) 330 million.

The measurements of the Kiraṇa are the same as those of the Mrgendra up to and including the world of Kūṣmāṇḍa, if one reads with VIVANTI's Nepalese MS C in 8:14; thereafter the numbers are so different in the three different sources that VIVANTI has consulted (e.g. in 8:16a and in 8:21) that little confidence can be invested in the constitution of the text.

⁵¹⁶ As is clear from the previous footnote, the Mrgendra, Mataṅga, and Kiraṇa (reading with the Nepalese MS) all give the height of the interval as thirty thousand and the height of the world as ninety lakhs. It is possible that in the Parākhyā too the same was originally intended.

the rubbing together of the fierce points of his fangs.⁵¹⁸ The cavern of his mouth is illuminated by the light from the radiance of these [flames] (tatprabhābhiḥ). (34c-36b)

†...†.⁵¹⁹ His skeleton is visible behind the surface of his split open chest (pāṭitorahkavāṭāntaḥprakaṭāsthikalevaraḥ); he holds a hatchet in his hand; the area of his dense eyebrows is permanently drawn together [in a frown] (sadākṛṣṭasaṃkaṭabhrakuṭitaṭaḥ). (36c-37)

'Ku' is taught to mean 'world'; in it there is uṣman, which [here] means fire. Just as is that terrible-to-look-at [fire] inside the egg [of Brahmā] (aṇḍe), so too (yadvat...tadvat) is the awful (udbhaṭaḥ) Kūṣmāṇḍa.⁵²⁰ He is employed by the supreme Lord as the overseer of the hells. (38)

He is surrounded with Rudras of the same kind, with terrible gaping mouths (karālamukhakoṭaraiḥ), with throat, chest and arms terrible to look at †...†. (39)

They stand there with hatchets in their hands, together with others made of iron (kṛṣṇalohamayair anyaiḥ). (40ab) After going [up] for a distance of nine lakhs [of yojanas] (grahalakṣapathaṃ gatvā), there are [to be found] the seven pātālas.⁵²¹ (40cd)

Ābhāsa, Paratāla,⁵²² Nitala, Gabhastimat, Mahātala, Rasātala, and below the vakradāru for birds to rest on. (The vakradāru itself Liṅgayasūrin appears to understand to be a crooked piece of wood fixed to the edge (or the top) of a roof like a finial, for he explains above that gopānasī and valabhī can be ... paṭalaprānte śikheva sthitasya vakradāruṇo nāmanī.)

⁵¹⁸*arcibhiḥ* is an aiśa form (for arcirbhiḥ) that is required here by the metre.

⁵¹⁹5:36d might have been a bahuvrīhi qualifying him as one 'the cavity of whose belly is deep': perhaps one could consider emendation to gambhīrajaṭharodaraḥ.

⁵²⁰This nirvacana is quoted by Kṣemarāja in his Svacchandatantrodyota ad 10:94, followed by: iti śrīparāyāṃ niruktaḥ. asya ca kukarmajanānuśāsakatvāt, krūrarūpa-tvaṃ krūranirvṛttatvaṃ ca śrīparāyāṃ uktam.

⁵²¹These are not hells, but subterranean paradises for seekers of otherworldly pleasures.

⁵²²This is also sometimes called Varatāla (e.g. in Kiraṇa 8:22). Since para and vara can be synonymous, it is possible that the variation in name is not just the result of scribal confusion. I have, however, decided to assume that Paratāla was consistently used in the Parākhyā, since that is implied by the nirvacana given in 5:45; but I am aware that that verse could be emended to support Varatāla, and I am aware also that both names could have been used as synonyms by the redactor of the Parākhyā. Only the Mrgendra (vidyāpāda 13:27c-28b) shares this list (except that it reads tritāla in place of nitala).

The Sarvajñānottara, listing from the bottom, has the following account (IFP MS T. 334, p. 57):

*talaṃ ca nitalaṃ caiva vitalaṃ ca tathā param
sutaṃ talātalaṃ caiva pātalaṃ ca rasātalaṃ nāgāś ca garuḍāś caiva kimpuruṣā danujās tathā agnir vāyuḥ kuberaś ca patayas tu pṛthagvidhāḥ*

- vāyuḥ kuberaś] conj.; vāyukuberaś MS.

The Svāyambhuvāsūtrasaṅgraha gives the following (4:85–86b):

talaṃ vitalasaṃjñāṃ ca nitalaṃ sutaṃ tathā talātalaṃ tathā cānyad rasātalaṃ iti śrutam mahātalaṃ ca vikhyātaṃ saptamaṃ tñatisaṃśiteḥ

- talaṃ] conj.; balaṃ Ed.
- cānyad rasātalaṃ] conj.; cāndrasātalaṃ Ed. (unmetrical).

This is the same as the list of Mālinīvijayottara 5:3–4, in which the worlds appear listed in the opposite order (as Somdev VASUDEVA has suggested [*2000:120 and passim] those two texts are in other respects closely related) and is almost the same as the list of the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 23:69c–70):

talaṃ vitalasaṃjñāṃ tu nitalaṃ sutaṃ tathā talātalaṃ pañcamam syāt tataś cānyad rasātalaṃ pātalaṃ saptamaṃ jñeyam balir yatrāsuro mahān.

In the Nisvāsamukha, after the list of hells (to which we have referred above in fn. 490 on p. 282), we read (4:106–111b, f. 18^r):

pātālāni pravakṣyāmi nibodha me yaśasvini ādau mahātalan nāma kṛṣṇabhaumam prakīrtitam rasātalan dvitīyan tu sphāṭikan tat prakīrtitam talātalan tṛtīyan tu raityabhaumam prakīrtitam tāmraabhauman tu nitalaṃ caturtham tu nigadyate «raupya»[[bhau]]man tu sutaṃ pañcamam paripaṭhyate śaṣṭhaṃ vitalasañjñān tu ratnaśarkarasañcitam saptaman nitalan nāma sauvarṇan tad udāhṛtam krameṇa kathitās sapta pātālādhipatīn śṛṇu nāgāś ca garuḍāś caiva tathā kimpuruṣāṇḍajāḥ agnir vāyuś ca varuṇo hy āsurāḥ patayas tathā

- nibodha me] conj.; nibodhaya MS
- raityabhaumam] conj.; raibhyabhaumam MS
- raupyaabhauman] conj.; ---man MS; -- bhauman Kathmandu apograph
- ratnaśarkara°] conj.; ratnasarkara° MS
- pātālādhipatīn] conj.; pātālādhipatīm MS
- āsurāḥ] conj.; āsurām MS.

Perhaps one or other of the two nitalas in this list should be emended to tritala. Note that the list is quite different in Nisvāsa guhyasūtra 5:1–3, f. 54^v:

ābhāsatalaṃ uttālaṃ śrītālaṃ ca gabhastikam śiloccayaṃ tato jñeyam śarkarocccayam eva ca sauvarṇam saptamaṃ teṣāṃ pātālāḥ sapta kīrtitāḥ.

The Svachchanda's list, different again, is as follows (10:96–97b):

ābhāsaṃ varatālaṃ ca śarkaraṃ ca gabhastimat mahātalaṃ ca sutaṃ rasātalaṃ ataḥ param sauvarṇam aṣṭamaṃ jñeyam sarvakāmasamanvitam.

the seventh is held to be Pātāla. (41)

Each of them is occupied by [a regent of the following] three [groups]: great Daityas, serpents and Rākṣasas (daityendroragarākṣasaiḥ). In Ābhāsa [these are the Daitya] Śaṅkukarṇa, [the serpent] Kuṭīla, and [the Rākṣasa] the lord Vikala.⁵²³ (42)

[Because] the rays (raśmayah = bhāsaḥ)⁵²⁴ of all the jewels shine on every side (samantāt),⁵²⁵ as well as of its palaces and of its women, therefore this is called Ābhāsa. (43)

And in Paratāla [there are the Daitya] Prahlāda, [the serpent] Vāsuki, and [the Rākṣasa] Lohitākṣa. There [there] are dwellings in forests of [trees made of] the nine gems, supreme pleasures (parabhogāḥ), perfect women (parastriyaḥ), and so it is called Paratāla, being filled with perfect pleasures (parānandavipūritam). (44–45b)

In Nitala [there are the Daitya] Śiśupāla, [the serpent] Kambala, [and the Rākṣasa] Yamadaṁṣṭraka. Since there is in this subterranean paradise (tale tasmin) such extreme (nitārām) accomplishment of pleasure, therefore it is called Nitala, being the cause of arising of beautiful properties(?) (abhirūpaguṇodbhavam). (45c–46)

In Gabhasti [there are the Daitya] Karkandhu,⁵²⁶ [the serpent]

The sequence found in Kiraṇa 8:22–40 gives Varatāla at the bottom, then Nitala, Tritala, Mahātala, Pātāla, Rasātala, and, as the seventh, the world of Hātakeśvara/Hāthakeśvara.

With the pātālas we reach a level of the universe of which the Purāṇas give more closely comparable accounts, but to adduce those too would swell the annotation too far. Many of the variations of those sources in the form and order of the confusing names of the pātālas are in any case plainly accidental. Thus in the chapter on the subject shared by the Brahmāṇḍapurāṇa (1.2.20) and the Vāyu (Pū. 50), the names are different even though they are embedded in what are essentially the same verses.

⁵²³It is not here explicit which belongs to which group; but it is implicit because of the principle of yathāśaṅkhyam, and the information is explicit in the Mṛgendra (vidyāpāda 13:29–32), whose list is essentially the same as that of the Parākhya. That of the Kiraṇa (8:17–39), by contrast, alots three of each group to each pātāla. The account of Vāyupurāṇa Pū. 50:15ff (shared by Brahmāṇḍa as 1.2.20:15ff) lists a number from each group in each pātāla, but there is little overlap with the names in our account.

⁵²⁴The text transmitted by M^y might appear to be tautologous, and it is possible that Kṣemarāja's version is a secondary 'improvement' intended to obviate the tautology. But it is clear that we have here a gloss of the element bhā in the name Ābhāsa. Cf. 5:47cd, 5:115c.

⁵²⁵This is intended as a gloss of the initial ā in ābhāsa.

⁵²⁶Though Kṣemarāja's quotation is printed with sakarkandhuḥ (rather than sakarkandhuḥ), it is probable that the first syllable is a pronoun rather than part of

Karkāṭa, [and the Rākṣasa] Vikāṭānana. There are rays (bhāsaḥ = gabhastayaḥ)⁵²⁷ that are known especially [to be emitted from] its palaces and from its Rudras and from their women; therefore it is called Gabhas-timat. (47–48b)

In Mahātala [there are the Daitya] called Hiranya, [the serpent] Kālāṅga, [and the Rākṣasa] Karālaka.⁵²⁸ It has a multitude of great palaces (mahāharmyapariskandham),⁵²⁹ it is full of great pleasures (mahābho << gasamākulam >>), it has the beauty of great women (mahāstrīrūpasampannam);⁵³⁰ therefore it is called (uddiṣṭam)⁵³¹ Mahātala. (48c–49)

In Rasātala [there are the Daitya] Bṛhadrāga,⁵³² [the serpent] Durdarśa, [and the Rākṣasa] Bhīmanīḥsvana.⁵³³ Since there are various kinds of taste [there, and since] there are wells [with waters] that are full of⁵³⁴ nectar there, it is called Rasātala, [being] the locus of the pleasure of relishing tastes. (50–51b)

These six tripartite⁵³⁵ [worlds] are to be enjoyed by those [above-named] great souls. Below (adhastāt)⁵³⁶ in Pātāla are situated [the the name, since in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:30a this Daitya's name is given as Karkandhaka.

⁵²⁷Cf. 5:43ab above and 5:115c below.

⁵²⁸*ex conj.* The form of the name in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:32a is Karāla. The forms of the name transmitted by the Svacchandatantrodyota and by M^y may both have been influenced by the form of the previous name in the list.

⁵²⁹*ex conj.* I interpret this as an awkward bahuvrīhi. The transmitted °parisampannam seems to me uninterpretable.

⁵³⁰*ex conj.* ISAACSON.

⁵³¹*ex conj.* ACHARYA.

⁵³²There seems to be no strong reason to choose any of the three transmitted names: Bṛhadbhoga (in the Svacchandatantrodyota) or Bṛhadgarbha (in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:30b) seem no less plausible. The Kiraṇa (8:33–4) locates a Bṛhadbhoga in Pātāla (which is the sixth in the list in the Kiraṇa) amongst a group which also includes a Durdarśana and a Bhīmaparākrama.

⁵³³The name given in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:32a is Bhīmanīrhrāda.

⁵³⁴For such a usage of uttara see Vallabhadeva's Raghupāṇīkā on Raghuvamśa 6:50: uttaraśabda ādhikyam bruvāṇaḥ sammiśratvam āha. See also his discussion ad Kumārasambhava 5:25.

⁵³⁵Presumably these are tripartite because there are three regents of each, a Daitya, a serpent and a Rākṣasa.

⁵³⁶It is not clear to me what this means. Is Pātāla below all the other six, or is it below Rasātala, or is the Daitya Bali below the serpent Takṣaka and the Rākṣasa Piṅgala? Observe that Kṣemarāja's text (see apparatus) replaces pātāle by sutale, presumably because there is no Pātāla in the Svacchanda's list; instead there is Sutala, which is

Daitya] Bali, [the serpent] Takṣaka, [and the Rākṣasa] Piṅgala. (51cdef)

These are absorbed in a wealth of pleasures; only the painful [fruits of their] past actions are destroyed. They stand there beautiful, preeminent, adorned with jewelled diadems. (52)

Above this is the bright, golden †...† of Hāṭaka.⁵³⁷ It is beautiful, full of mountain peaks (śikharāśliṣṭam), pale red with silken cloths and gems (ratnapaṭṭāmsupāṭalam). It is bolted with doors in which are set panels of ruby (māṇikyapaṭṭasaṃviṣṭakavāṭaghaṭitārgalam); its walls (°varaṇḍakam) are †...† upright and of excellent gold (utkrṣṭa-hāṭakoddaṇḍa°).. (53–54)

Resting upon that is established a †dik† throne of gold (pīṭho hāṭakah),⁵³⁸ which has the radiance of rays of glistening gems, [being] beautifully set with jewels of all kinds.⁵³⁹ (55)

On that throne of excellent gold sits the Śiva (haraḥ) Hāṭaka; [he is] kindly (susaumyaḥ), generous (varadaḥ), peaceful (śāntaḥ), adorned with placed before Rasātala (Svacchanda 10:96). In the Kiraṇa too Rasātala is placed at the top (8:35ab: anyad rasātalaṃ nāma sarveṣāṃ upari sthitam), below which is Pātāla. Only in the Mṛgendra, the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 23:70), and the Parākhyā is Pātāla listed last—in fact the Mṛgendra alone has the same list (except that it has tritala for nitala) and in the same order as the Parākhyā (see fn. 522 on p. 289)—but the Parākhyā may be mixing traditions by following a list ending in Pātāla while pointing out here that Pātāla is not the uppermost of the seven.

⁵³⁷The transmitted text of 5:53b appears to me uninterpretable, as does the ‘corrected’ text offered by B. One could assume that no more is required than a noun for a world or palace and accordingly emend to something like hāṭakésasya mandiram (= Svacchanda 10:119b), or one could assume that the number eight is intended, since Hāṭaka’s world makes an eighth on top of the seven pātālas, as is made explicit in Svacchanda 10:97ab (quoted above in fn. 522 on p. 289) and in Tantrāloka 8:31ab. In that case the following conjecture might be considered: hāṭakasyāṣṭamaṃ puram/grham. Note that the text appears to refer to the world of Hāṭaka as a pātāla in 5:58, even though it refers in 5:60 to the pātālasaptaka.

Observe that among the other early Siddhāntas Hāṭaka and his world is mentioned only in the Niśvāsa guhyasūtra (5:17, f. 55^r), the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha (4:3), the Kiraṇa (8:40) and the Mṛgendra (vidyāpāda 13:32c–34b); he appears also in the Svacchanda, as we have just seen, and in the Mālinīvijayottara (5:4). (In the Devībhāgavatapurāṇa (8.19:9) he is the regent of Vitala.) In some places, e.g. in the Niśvāsa guhyasūtra, his name is Hāṭhaka (cf. the nirvacanas given in verse 58 and in fn. 542 below).

⁵³⁹*ex conj.* ISAACSON. The first of the transmitted instrumentals (if indeed it was intended as an instrumental by the scribe of M^Y) would be irregular, since mayūkha is not usually a feminine, and furthermore they could not have agreed with one another in gender, nor would they be syntactically fitting.

all ornaments. (56)

This Lord Śiva (haraḥ...nāthaḥ) is at all times attended by great (mahātmabhiḥ) beauties [who attend on him] out of love for their master (bhartṛkāmād dhi)⁵⁴⁰ and who have the playful [gait] of great elephants. (57)

Hāṭaka is venerated by countless armies (varūthinībhiḥ).⁵⁴¹ Since this pātāla, rich in lovely women, shines forcefully (haṭhāt),⁵⁴² therefore, plainly, it is called Hāṭaka, ṭa space for meetings for sacrifices, full of ponds and Arka shrubs(?), dense with ... pleasures†.⁵⁴³ (58–9)

The pure seven pātālas, presided over by Hāṭaka, have been taught. Each is nine thousand [yojanas high], together with a gap of a thousand. (60)

Above that is the world of earth, which contains seven continents and oceans.⁵⁴⁴ Jambū, Śāka, Kuśa, Krauñca, Śālma, Gomeda and Puṣkara: these are the continents. They contain many further [sub-]continents [within them].⁵⁴⁵ (61–62b)

Brine, Milk, Curds, Butter,⁵⁴⁶ Sugar, Liquor and Nectar: these are the seven circular [i.e. concentric] oceans. The island Jambū is round and divided into nine landmasses (grahakhaṇḍavibhājitam): (62c–63)

⁵⁴⁰ ex conj. Smoother might be bhartṛkāmābhiḥ, but this would be unmetrical.

⁵⁴¹ ex conj. This conjecture of Professor SANDERSON is hypermetrical, but this hypermetry (in which we can in reading syncopate the third vowel or rush over the first) seems possible (see fn. 132 on p. lxxxvi above) and the sense is convincing. The conjecture varūthibhir ('guards') is conceivable, but in that case we would have to emend asaṃkhyābhir to asaṃkhyātair.

⁵⁴² Cf. Kiraṇa 8:42ab: haṭhād bhinatti yantrāṇi tenāyaṃ hāṭako (em.; hāṭhako Ev.) mataḥ; Svachanda 10:116c–117b: haṭhāt praveśayel lokāṃs tadbhāvagatamānasān/tenāsau hāṭakaḥ prokto devadevo maheśvaraḥ; and the pair of verses attributed to the Rauravaśāsana (not found in Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha) paraphrased in Tantrāloka 8:31c–32b and quoted in the Tantrāloka viveka ad loc.: pratiloke niyuktātmā śrīkaṇṭho bhagavān asau/ karoti hāṭako bhūtvā pātāladvārapālanam/ haṭhena bhaṅktvā yantrāṇi pātāleṣu mahodayāḥ/ siddhīr abhyastasanmantrān sādhakāṃl lambhayaty asau.

⁵⁴⁴ ex conj. I assume that muni is used here (like ṛṣi) to mean 'seven'. Cf. Mālinī-vijayottara 5:5ab: tadūrdhvaṃ pṛthivī jñeyā saptadvīpāṇavānvitā; Mataṅgavidyā-pāda 23:53cd: bhūrlokaḥ tadadhaṣṭāt tu saptadvīpāṇavānvitāḥ; and Sarvajñānottara adhvaprakaraṇa 12ab (IFP MS T. No. 334, p. 57): bhūlokaṃ ca tathā vidyāt saptadvīpāṇavaiḥ saha.

⁵⁴⁵ Observe that anekair bahubhiḥ is tautologous.

⁵⁴⁶ The Mṛgendra too (vidyāpāda 13:97c) uses sneha here, instead of the more explicit sarpis.

Bhārata, Hari, Kimpuruṣa, Ramyaka, Ramaṇa,⁵⁴⁷ Kuru, Bhadrāśva, Ketumāla, [and] Ilāvṛta. (64)

Three [of these] landmasses are square: the one in the East, that in the West, and that in the centre; the two South and the two North from the centre are long [i.e. oblong]; the remaining two are bow-like [in shape].⁵⁴⁸ (65)

In the middle is the golden mountain Meru, whose top is the shape of the calyx of a lotus.⁵⁴⁹ It penetrates the circle of the earth to a depth of sixteen [yojanas]. Above [the surface of the earth] it is eighty-four thousand high.⁵⁵⁰ (66–67b)

And on its top, standing on its three peaks, are the Keśas (?), filled with pride in their sovereignty.⁵⁵¹ On the lower slopes of Meru (meror

⁵⁴⁷In most other Śaiva sources this is called Hiranya (eg. Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:70ab, Svacchanda 10:235, Mataṅgavidyāpāda 24:29, Kiraṇa 8:69–70), but the form Ramaṇa is confirmed by the nirvacana given below in 5:84.

⁵⁴⁹Although Kṣemarāja cites this with approval (ad Svacchanda 10:124), it is not a detail that is universally agreed upon. The Kiraṇa, for instance, says that its top is the shape of a śarāva (Kiraṇa 8:48b), and WILSON, in his annotation on Viṣṇupurāṇa II.2:9, according to which the whole mountain (not just its top) is karṇikākārasaṃsthitaḥ, draws attention to wide discrepancy on this point in various Purāṇas (WILSON 1989:250–1).

⁵⁵¹The testimony of the Mṛgendravṛttidīpikā discourages me from emending to guṇa-śṛṅgasthā īśās. It is at least clear from the introduction to the quotation in the Mṛgendravṛttidīpikā that (pace HULIN 1980:304) the Parākhyā is supposed by Aghoraśiva to be giving the same account of the top of Meru as the Kiraṇa (8:49–54), according to which there are three (represented in the Parākhyā by the word guṇa) peaks belonging to Viṣṇu, Brahmā, and Śaṅkara, and below this (presumably arranged in a ring around these peaks) the eight citadels of the eight Lokapālas. Perhaps then the word nitambagāḥ) are eight (vidyeśakalitāḥ) pure citadels. In the East Amara, [then] Sutejaskā, Vivasvat, Asita, Sita, Gandha, Prabhā, and Yaśaskā [all of which are] widely known with the termination -vatī.⁵⁵² (67c–69b)

They brighten the sky in [all] the [eight] directions with the light of the radiance of their gold and jewels; they contain heavenly pleasures and sweet tastes, and in them bodies are happy and pure. Half of [the diameter of] Meru and [the land from the outer edge of Meru] up to the edge of the continent [of Ilāvṛta measure respectively] eight and nine thousand [yojanas].⁵⁵³ (69c–70) keśa requires no emendation and is intended to be interpreted 'Lords of the pinnacle (ka)', or analysed as ka+a+īśa, i.e. Brahṃā, Viṣṇu, and Śiva.

The most common arrangement in the Siddhāntas appears to be slightly different: the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 23:56–63) tells us that the Sabhā of Brahṃā (widely known as Manovatī) is at the top in the centre, that Hara (the speaker teaching the text to the sage Mataṅga) resides on the Jyotiṣka peak situated in the north-east corner, and that below the top is the ring (cakravāṭa) of the eight citadels of the Lokapālas. This arrangement is shared by the Sarvajñānottara (adhvaparakaraṇa 32–42b, IFP MS T. No. 334, pp. 59–60), the Svacchanda (10:124ff), and the Mṛgendra (vidyāpāda 13:45–62).

Kṣemarāja, in his Svacchandatantrorddyota ad 10:130, makes mention of the discrepancy between accounts of the top of Meru: na tv etad evāsti śrīcandragarbhādaḥ 'śrīṅgatrayasamopetā brahmaviṣṇuharālayāḥ' iti...

Perhaps both Saiddhāntika versions of the geography of the top of Meru are modifications of a Purāṇic version (to be found, e.g., in Viṣṇupurāṇa II.2:29–30 and Devībhāgavatapurāṇa 8.7.6–11) according to which the top is occupied only by the citadel of Brahṃā surrounded by the eight citadels of the Lokapālas (see KIRFEL 1920:94 and contrast with 1920:175, the latter passage being from his characterisation of the 'Kosmographie nach den mittelalterlichen astronomischen Lehrbüchern').

⁵⁵²Simply adding -vatī to each element of the list will not in every case yield a plausible name. The names intended are probably Amarāvatī, Sutejovatī, Vaivasvatī(?), Asitavatī, Sitavatī, Gandhavatī, Prabhāvatī, and Yaśovatī. The names of the cities, together with their Lokapālas, as they appear in Svacchanda 10:132–136b, Kiraṇa 8:51–4, Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:47–54, Sarvajñānottara adhvaparakaraṇa 34–6 (IFP MS T. No. 59), and Mataṅgavidyāpāda 23:60–3, are as follows: Amarāvatī of Indra, Tejovatī of Agni, Vaivasvatī (Saṃyamanī according to the Svacchanda, Mṛgendra and Mataṅga) of Yama, Rakṣovatī (Kṛṣṇāṅgārā according to the Svacchanda, Kṛṣṇā according to the Mṛgendra and Mataṅga, and Kṛṣṇavatī according to the Sarvajñānottara) of Nirṛti, Śuddhavatī of Varuṇa, Gandhavatī (Gandhavahā according to the Svacchanda) of Vāyu, Mahodayā of Kubera (of Soma, according to the Svacchanda), and Yaśovatī (Sukhāvahā according to the Mataṅga) of Hara.

⁵⁵³*ex conj.* This conjecture is tentative, but, bearing in mind that the diameter at the widest point of Meru is sixteen thousand yojanas, the measurements it yields (effectively seventeen thousand yojanas as the distance between the centre of Meru and the perimeter of Ilāvṛta) tally with those of the Kiraṇa (8:67–8), Mataṅga (see

There was a divine Apsaras named Ilā, possessed of beauty and youth; this lovely one was seen going about by the moon (amṛtarūpeṇa). [He] enveloped her (āvṛtā) [there] in his arms out of lust (rāgāt). That is why [that place] is called Ilāvṛta.⁵⁵⁴ (71–72b)

East of the landmass called Ilāvṛta is Bhadrāśva, of thirty-two thousand [yojanas across].⁵⁵⁵ That excellent horse (bhadro 'śvaḥ) Uccaiḥśravas came forth from the churning of the ocean of milk; because the horse wanders in this [land mass], therefore it is known as Bhadrāśva. (72c–73)

To the west of Ilā[vṛta] the landmass Ketumāla is the same [in dimensions] (tathā). When the fierce onset of a battle between the gods and Asuras began, there appeared there suddenly from nowhere garlands (mālāḥ) of comets (ketūnām); seeing these the gods were frightened: that is why it is known as Ketumāla.⁵⁵⁶ (74–5) vidyāpāda 24:19–26 and the Mataṅgavṛtti thereon), and Svacchanda (see 10:210c–211 and the Svacchandatanroddyota thereon).

Standing between Ilā[vṛta] and Bhadrāśva and running from North to South (dakṣiṇottaradinimukhaḥ) is the mountain[-range] called Mālyavat, which is one thousand [yojanas] across.⁵⁵⁷ (76)

Seeing the heavenly garlands (mālyāni), the Siddhas who had come [there] to worship Brahmā plucked them (?) (tāḍitāni),⁵⁵⁸ and therefore it is called Mālyavat. (77)

Similarly, to the West of Ilā[vṛta] is the mountain[-range] Gandhamādana. <<It seems there was long ago seen [there] an intoxicated Vidyādhari [called] Mālyā; steeped in fragrance (modabhāvitā) she was smelt there by the sage Nārada. He was addressed thus [by her]: 'O brahmin, my scent is intoxicating (gandho me mādanaḥ). Therefore [it is called] Gandhamādana.>>⁵⁵⁹ (78-9)

To the North of Ilāvṛta is the mountain[-range] Nīla, extending from East to West, two thousand [yojanas broad], frequented by Siddha!celestial beings and Gandharvas. (80)

Śani became dark-bodied (sunīlāṅgaḥ) there, and so it is known as Nīla.⁵⁶⁰ Beyond that is another [land-mass], Ramya [by name],⁵⁶¹ which is forty-five thousand [yojanas in extent] (bhūtavedasahasrakam). (81)

It seems (kila) that when the moon beheld [there] the lovely Apsaras Urvaśī he proclaimed 'She is lovely', and this [landmass] is therefore called Ramya after that speech. (82)

[Beyond that to the North] like Nīla there is the mountain Śveta, where the great sage Śveta, though being devoured by Death, was protected by ⁵⁵⁷ ex conj. See fn. 555 on p. 297 above. The mountains in the North and South are two thousand yojanas across, as we are informed in 5:80c below.

⁵⁵⁸ One would expect this to mean 'struck', not 'plucked' (unless used of the strings of musical instruments), but striking seems implausible here.

⁵⁶⁰ Or conceivably 'Dark-bodied Śani was born there, and so...'. I have not been able to find other references to such a story. Elsewhere we find that Śani (a brother of Manu) practised austerities on top of another mountain, Meru, and became a planet (Purāṇapañcalakṣaṇa vaṃśānucarita 1:48):

bhrātā śanaīścaras tasya grahatvaṃ sa tu labdhavān.*

Beyond that is [the landmass of] Ramaṇa, of the same dimensions as the landmass of Ramya,⁵⁶³ where Ramaṇā was forcibly ravished by the foremost of the Gandharvas.⁵⁶⁴ (84)

And [next], like Śveta, there is the mountain Triśṛṅga that spurns the blasts of thunderbolts (vajrapātopamardanaḥ). [It is so called] because it has three peaks (tryaśrataḥ). It is said that (kila) [the] three gods reside upon those peaks. (85)

Like Ramya there is [beyond that] the landmass Kuru, where Hara told Upamanyu 'Do (kuru) thus; drink the milk', and so it is [called] Kuru.⁵⁶⁵ (86)

To the South of Ilāvṛta is the mountain called Niśadha, on which Garuḍa had been poised to kill the serpent Śeṣa and was forbidden.⁵⁶⁶ (87)

To the South of that, like Ramya, is the landmass called Kimpuruṣa,⁵⁶⁷ where the Vidyādhari Ramyā was dropped by the hand of a Vidyādhara. The male [Vidyādhara] was then asked by her 'Did you (kiṃ tvayā), o

⁵⁶²The same myth (without mention of the mountain) is alluded to in Kiraṇa 1:8ab as well as in some Śaiva Purāṇas, notably in the Ur-Skandapurāṇa in chapter 166 (see GOODALL 1998:167, fn. 18).

⁵⁶³Since it is a strip further to the North, and therefore further towards the outside of the circle (Jambū being a circle one lakh yojanas in diameter), it would have to be slightly less long if the circle is to be a perfect one. I am inclined not to take this prescription literally for this reason and also because even Kuru and Bhārata are later (in 5:86 and 5:92) are said to be like Ramya and Hari respectively, whereas we know from 5:65 that they are in fact bow-shaped.

⁵⁶⁴Kṣemarāja comments (when he quotes a portion of this verse in his Svacchanda-tantroddyota ad 10:231) that Ramaṇā is the name of an Apsaras and that the Gandharva was Citraratha. I have not been able to trace another reference to this legend.

⁵⁶⁵This is an allusion to the Śaiva myth according to which Upamanyu performed austerities because he was dissatisfied on the grounds that he could not always obtain milk. Śiva eventually appeared to him, and his request for milk was granted. The myth is alluded to also in the Kiraṇa (without mentioning any connection with this particular mountain) in 1:9ab (see GOODALL 1998:167, fn. 19).

⁵⁶⁷In all other accounts it is Hari that is the landmass immediately to the South of the Niśadha mountain, and to the South of that, beyond the Hemakūṭa mountain, is located the landmass Kimpuruṣa.

man (puruṣa), throw me?', [and so it got the name Kimpuruṣa].⁵⁶⁸ (88)

And [to the South of that is] the mountain Hemakūṭa, where a great heap (mahākūṭaḥ) of gold was given to Prajāpati by Dhanada for the sake of a sacrifice.⁵⁶⁹ (89)

To the South of that is the landmass called Hari, which is like Ramaṇa [in dimensions⁵⁷⁰ and] in which Hari was propitiated by the serpent Śeṣa. And (tathā) further South from that is the mountain Himavat, like the Hemakūṭa. Although it [too] is rich with jewels, it has a great deal of snow (himapṛāyaḥ), and therefore it is [called] the Himavat mountain. (90–1)

To the South of that is the landmass Bhārata, like the landmass Hari. Here the suffering was borne (bhṛtam) by Bharata because of [his] sons, who followed bad paths (kumārgagaiḥ).⁵⁷¹ (92)

[All] this is called the continent Jambu, where the Jambu [tree] with large fruits [grows]. Because of contact with the juices that come from those arises [the gold known as] Jāmbūnada.⁵⁷² (93)

⁵⁶⁸ ex conj. SANDERSON. One could instead understand 'Why, o man, did you throw me?'. I have not been able to find other allusions to or accounts of this legend.

⁵⁶⁹ I have not been able to identify the myth to which this refers.

⁵⁷⁰ ex conj. This is a tentative conjecture. We expect the text here to tell us that the dimensions of Hari are similar to those of another landmass that has been described. In 5:84b, 5:86a and 5:88a above Ramya has consistently been mentioned as the landmass with which the other landmasses that stretch from East to West (i.e. those above and below the central three) are to be compared, even though, as we have observed in fn. 563 on p. 299 above, they must actually be of different shapes to fit into a circular Jambūdvīpa. We might, therefore, consider also the emendation ramyakopamam, ramyaka being then synonymous with Ramya. Once again, I have not been able to identify the aetiological myth that is here referred to.

⁵⁷¹ The nine natural sons of Bharata born to his three wives displeased him because they were bad, and they were killed; Bharata then adopted Vitatha. Versions of the myth differ (see, e.g., Vāyupurāṇa U 37:133ff, Mahābhārata 1.89:17ff, Viṣṇupurāṇa 4.19, and Purāṇapañcalakṣaṇa vaṃśānucarita 6B), but it is clear that Kṣemarāja's reading of 5:92c is preferable to that of M^y.

⁵⁷² ex conj. SANDERSON. This conjecture involves assuming a kind of double sandhi not otherwise found (or at least not otherwise recognised) in the surviving portions of the text: jāmbūnadeva = jāmbūnadam+eva.

One could avoid this in various ways by adopting a freer conjecture (that is to say one further from the transmitted akṣaras), such as, e.g., jātaṃ jāmbūnadaṃ varam: 'from the contact with the juices that arise from those [fruits] there arises superlative gold'. For this and related notions see Viṣṇupurāṇa II.2:19–22:

*jambūdvīpasya sā jambūr nāmahetur mahāmune
mahāgajapramāṇāni jambvās tasyāḥ phalāni vai patanti bhūbhṛtaḥ pṛṣṭhe śīryamāṇāni sarvataḥ*

Outside that is the ocean (sāgarah) of salt water that was created by the sons of Sagara. Outside that is the continent Śāka, where the great Śāka tree [stands]. Because of its length a band was put about it (paṭṭabandhaḥ... kṛtaḥ) by Indra (kuliśapāṇinā).⁵⁷³ (94)

Beyond that is the ocean called 'Milk', in which there is pure milk. This ocean was drunk from by Upamanyu as much as he wished.⁵⁷⁴ (95)

Beyond that is the continent Kuśa, where Brahmā (abjajanmanā) grasped Kuśa [grass] and began the marriage of Śiva with oblations.⁵⁷⁵ (96)

Beyond that is the ocean of curds, where the creator, for the sake of satisfying the whole universe, in a sacrifice (kratau)⁵⁷⁶ gave this large quantity of curds. (97)

rasena teṣāṃ prakhyātā tatra jambūnadīti vai sarit pravartate sā ca piyate tannivāsibhiḥ na svedo na ca daurgandhyaṃ na jarā nendriyakṣayaḥ tatpānāt svacchamanasāṃ janānāṃ tatra jāyate tīramṛt tadrasaṃ prāpya sukhavāyuviśoṣitā jāmbūnadākhyāṃ bhavati suvarṇaṃ siddhabhūṣaṇam

'This Jambū [tree] is the reason for the name of the continent of Jambū, great sage. The fruits of this Jambū are the size of great elephants. They fall, splitting completely, on the side of the mountain, and from their juice a river flows there that is famous under the name Jambūnadī. And that is drunk by the inhabitants of that [continent]. As a result of drinking it the people there, who are pure of heart, have no sweat, no bad odours, no ageing, no loss of their faculties. The earth of its banks, when it comes into contact with its liquid and [then] becomes dried out by sweet breezes, becomes the gold called Jāmbūnada that is the ornament of the Siddhas.'

Cf. also Niśvāsa guhyasūtra 5:45–8 (f. 56^r), in particular 48ab: tasya saṃsparśajāṃ caiva kanakaṃ devabhūṣaṇam. The ideas are to be found widely elsewhere too, e.g. Mahābhārata 6.8:21–5; Brahmaṇḍapurāṇa 1.2.17.27–30; Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇa 51:28–9, and, in non-Purāṇic literature, in, e.g., in Bhānujīdīkṣita's and Liṅgayasūrin's commentaries on Amarakośa 2.9:95.

⁵⁷⁴See fn. 565 on p. 299 above. The use of udanvat as a neuter rather than as a masculine noun is irregular.

⁵⁷⁵*ex conj.* I have assumed here a double sandhi: samudvāhaḥ+indudhāriṇaḥ. Cf. the accounts of the marriage of Śiva in Brahmapurāṇa 36:130ff and in Ur-Skandapurāṇa 13:129ff. The Mṛgendra too accounts for the name and may be alluding to the same myth (vidyāpāda 13:99ab): kuśo 'bhūt kāñcanaḥ kauśe svayambhuvi yiyakṣati; 'A golden Kuśa [plant] came into being in the continent of Kuśa when Brahmā wished to sacrifice.'

⁵⁷⁶*ex conj.* Cf. 5:99. But tatkratau could be intended as a compound: 'his sacrifice', 'sacrifice for them', 'sacrifice of that [curd]'.

Beyond that is the continent Krauñca, where Kārttikeya threw his spear of great power and slew the great demon Krauñca.⁵⁷⁷ (98)

Beyond that is the ocean of clarified butter, where [the creator], in a sacrifice (kratau), placed a great deal of clarified butter to give pleasure to the gods; that is why it is known as the ocean of clarified butter. (99)

Beyond that is the continent Śālmali, where the silk-cotton tree (vrkṣaḥ sa śālmaliḥ) [grows] in which tree the gods, together with the god of Love, resided when frightened by the demons.⁵⁷⁸ (100)

Beyond that is [the ocean] called Sugar-cane juice, where the creator put a great deal of juice from the sugar cane to give pleasure to sages (munīnām). (101)

Beyond that is the continent Gomedas, where, because of the curse of Gautama, a hundred cows were killed, and there then flowed fat: because of the profusion [of that fat the continent got its name].⁵⁷⁹ (102)

Outside that is the ocean of liquor which reeks of the perfume of ⁵⁷⁷The same justification for the name is given in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:99c–101b. The well-known myth concerns Kārttikeya piercing Krauñca the demon, who had taken the form of the mountain Krauñca. See, e.g., the account given in chapter 171 of the Ur-Skandapurāṇa. Dr. ISAACSON has suggested that emendation to mahābalaḥ could be considered: the epithet most usually applies to people and might have suffered accidental attraction to the case and gender of the nearest noun.

⁵⁷⁸*ex conj.* This is no more than a guess. I know of no allusion to or account of such a myth elsewhere, unless, as Dr. BISSCHOP suggests (letter of 25.iv.2001), Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:101c–102b is intended to contain such an allusion:

śālmale śālmaliṽrkṣo haimaḥ sāhasriko 'rkabhāḥ
priyo 'marāñām tatketuḥ sa tadākhyānibandhanaḥ.

⁵⁷⁹The story is told in greater detail in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:102c–105b:

gomedē gopatir nāma rājābhūd gosavodyataḥ yājyo 'bhūd vahnikalpānām autathyānām manoḥ kule sa teṣu hariyajñāya pravṛtteṣu bhṛgūn gurūn vavre taṃ gautamaḥ kopād aśapad agamat kṣayam yajñavāte 'sya tā gāvo dagdhāḥ kopāgninā muneḥ tanmedasā mahī channā gamedaḥ sa tato 'bhavat.

'There was a king named Gopati of the family of Manu in Gomeda who was intent on performing [the sacrifice called] Gosava; the sacrifice was to be performed by descendants of Utathya, who were like fire. While they were engaged in a sacrifice to Hari, that [king] chose as his gurus the Bhṛguṣ. Gautama, out of anger, cursed him, and he perished. His cows in the sacrificial enclosure were burnt by the fire of the anger of the sage. The earth was covered with their fat, and therefore this [continent] became [known as] Gomeda.'

the blood of gods, intoxicated by which Vidyādhara and Gandharvas revel. (103)

Outside that is the continent Puṣkara, where [flows] the river Puṣkariṇī, with sweet waters like those of the ocean of nectar (amṛtāmbhodasurasā), frequented by gods and Siddhas. (104)

Beyond that is the ocean of nectar (svādūdaḥ), in which there is sweet-tasting nectar, [and] where the gods (gīrvāṇāḥ) drink for the sake of the pleasure it gives their bodies (śārīrānandahetutaḥ). (105)

These continents and oceans, starting from [Jambūdvīpa], which measures one lakh yojanas [across] are [each in turn] twice the size [of the previous].⁵⁸⁰ Outside that (tadbāhye)⁵⁸¹ is a world measuring ten crore [yojanas] that has the appearance of gold, bright with the radiance of various gems, with various gems, trees and mountains, with various jewelled pleasure dwellings, full of various jewels. It was created for the people of the world svaḥ to play in.⁵⁸² (106–8a)

And beyond that is the Lokāloka [mountain ring]. Ten thousand [yojanas] †...† beyond this, light (lokaḥ) [does] not [extend],⁵⁸³ and so it is ⁵⁸⁰This is not expressed with clarity, but this is the purport, for compare Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:97c–98b:

kṣāraḥkṣīradadhisneharasamadyāmṛtodakaiḥ lakṣādidviguṇā dvīpā jambūdvīpādayo vṛtāḥ.

(The KSTS edition prints the impossible °madhvāmṛtodakaiḥ.) The same notion is expressed also in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 24:31c–34.

⁵⁸¹*ex conj.* M^y reads tadūrdhvaṃ, which could be retained if it can be interpreted to mean ‘beyond that’, but not if it means above that, since we are still moving outwards from the centre rather than upwards. (It is, however, conceivable that tadūrdhvaṃ is intended to mean ‘beyond that’, for this is how it appears to be used in 5:112a below.) Cf. Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:109c–110b:

tato hiraṇmayī bhūmir nānāratnadrumācalā krīḍārthaṃ vedhasā sṛṣṭā devānāṃ daśakoṭikī.

and Mataṅgavidyāpāda 24:35:

daśakoṭipravistīrṇā svādūdāt parataḥ sthitā śuddhahemamayī bhūmir devānāṃ krīḍanāya tu.

⁵⁸²*ex conj.* One could retain the transmitted text and interpret ‘for [the inhabitants of the worlds of] svaḥ and janaḥ to play in’, but it seems to me more likely that only the inhabitants of the next level, svaḥ, are intended (as in 5:109b below), and that the visarga is the result of confusion (see p. c of introduction).

⁵⁸³Although the text of this half-line is corrupt and it is not obvious how it should be repaired, it is clear what information it contained: that the mountain ring is ten called Lokāloka; it too is the abode of gods. (108c–109b).

Beyond that is the ocean Garbhoda, which has the dimensions of all the [other] oceans put together (sarvārṇavapramāṇakaḥ).⁵⁸⁴ Since the seven oceans that have been spoken of above are contained within the Garbhoda (garbhodagarbhitāḥ), therefore it is well-known as Garbhoda, bearing the essences of all the oceans. (109c–110)

Beyond that is supportless darkness extending for 351,194,000 [yojanas].⁵⁸⁵ (111)

Beyond that⁵⁸⁶ is the shell of the egg of Brahmā, one crore in thickness.⁵⁸⁷ And on the near side of Meru⁵⁸⁸ [the radius of the earth is] fifty crore [yojanas]; on the far [i.e. northern] side, to the East of it, [and] to the West it is the same [in radius]. Thus is the earth measured (evaṃ bhūḥ paripīṇḍitā). (112) thousand yojanas wide (?), which information is given also in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 24:36, Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:111ab and Kiraṇa 8:83, and that beyond it there is either no light or no people (cf. Kiraṇa 8:84ab and Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:111–112).

⁵⁸⁴ ex conj. The transmitted text yields no sense. The conjecture is based on Mataṅgavidyāpāda 24:37:

cakravat sa tu boddhavyo garbhodaś ca samudrarāṭ.*

The conjecture is strictly speaking unmetrical, because the third and fourth syllables should not form an iamb, but I think that they need not have been felt to form an iamb, for see introduction, p. lxxxvi.

⁵⁸⁵ More literally 'of five times seven crores together with nineteen lakhs on top of five times eight thousands'. The elements of the bhūtasamkhyā for nineteen (diggrahaiḥ) are in this case not inverted. This measurement is the same as that given in Kiraṇa 8:85–6, in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:112c–113b and in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 24:38–9. The curious number is doubtless intended to round up the total diameter of pṛthivī to one hundred crores, as is made quite clear by the following verses of the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 24:40–1):

pañcāśad anyat tadvat syād ardhaṃ meros tu pūrvavat evaṃ koṭīśataṃ proktaṃ pāṛthivaṃ tattvam atra tu tasmād daśaguṇaṃ toyaṃ toyād agnis tato 'nilaḥ.*

'Together with the egg-shell, the earth measures fifty crore half-way; the other half, on the East side of Meru, is the same. Thus the tattva Earth is in this system taught to be one hundred crore [yojanas across]. That of water is ten times that; that of fire [is ten times] that of water; that of wind [is ten times] that [of fire].'

⁵⁸⁶ For this translation of tadūrdhvaṃ cf. fn. 581 on p. 303 above.

⁵⁸⁸ This means, from our perspective, to the South.

Earth (bhūrlokaḥ) is a place for those to whom karman accrues (karmaṇām bhūmiḥ); it is here that karman can be accumulated (atra karmasamārjanam). On the remaining continents and worlds the good and bad [results of past actions] can [only] be experienced (bhujyate).⁵⁸⁹ (113)

Above that is Bhuvarloka, [a place] which causes amazement (āścarya-kāraḥ). There there are clouds that rest on the winds (vātāśrayāḥ) and [that purify evil]⁵⁹⁰ and [there are] celestial vehicles of the Siddhas, as well as others among those who move about in the heavens (anye ca svargacārīṇām).⁵⁹¹ (114)

There the sun (bhānuḥ), who is all (viśvātmā),⁵⁹² shines. He whose rays (bhānavaḥ = raśmayāḥ)⁵⁹³ shine (dīptāḥ) for a lakh of yojanas is here [known as] the sun (bhānur atra saḥ). (115)

Beyond that is the white, gentle moon (candramāḥ). Loveliness

⁵⁸⁹In Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:92c-93b it is the landmass of Bhārata that is the only place where karman can be accumulated (rather than the whole of bhūrloka):

guṇa eko yadudyukto: neṣṭaṁ kiñcin na sādhayet sarvāśaṁ phalabhūmīnāṁ karmabhūḥ kāraṇaṁ yataḥ.

'There is one quality because of which it [scil. Bhārata] is superior [to the others]: there is nothing that, if one desires it, one cannot obtain, because this is the cause, the place [of the accumulation] of karman for all the places where the fruits [of karman are reaped].' The same notion is taught in Svacchanda 10:246-7, where it is 'explained' that, whereas in Bhārata there are four yugas, the inhabitants of other land-masses know only one, namely kṛta.

But in the passage of the Mahābhārata from which Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha here (in his commentary on this unit of the Mṛgendra) quotes a verse (3.247:35) it is implicit (though not made explicit) that the whole of bhūḥ is the karmabhūmiḥ. Although in the Parākhya bhūrlokaḥ is first said to be the karmabhūmiḥ, the next line speaks not just of other worlds but also of other continents (dvīpaśeṣeṣu) as being places of reward only, and so it is probable that it agrees with the Mṛgendra and the Svacchanda on this point.

⁵⁹¹Those who find the syntax questionable here may wish to consider emending either the first syllables to anyeṣāṁ or the last to svargacārīṇaḥ.

⁵⁹²The point of this qualification is not clear to me. Perhaps it should rather be understood 'who is [as it were] the soul of everything [at this level of the cosmos]'. But it may be corrupt.

Note that we have here and in the following verses a list of the nine planets beginning with the seven planets after which the days of the week are named and in the order of the days of the week (see introduction, p. xlvii).

⁵⁹³Cf. 5:43ab and 5:47cd above.

(candraḥ), [that is to say] pure nectar, resides in it (tasmin māti) and so [it is called] Candramas. (116)

Because of the sweet taste of nectar in it it obtains [also the name] Sky-Ganges (khagaṇgeti samāśritā).⁵⁹⁴ And [there there are] other [beings] moving in celestial vehicles that are as cool to the touch as snow, white jasmine and the moon (himakundenduśītasparśavimānagāḥ).⁵⁹⁵ (117)

Beyond that is cruel Mars (aṅgārakaḥ), of cruel deeds, a grasper of treasure (nidhigrahaḥ).⁵⁹⁶ He is red-bodied, red-eyed, like charcoal [glowing] with fire. (118)

And beyond him is resplendent Mercury (budhaḥ śrīmān) with the radiance of heated gold. He awakens good deeds (prabodhitasukṛtyo 'sau), and therefore [he is known as] Budha, the awakener. (119)

Above is the god Jupiter (bṛhaspatir devaḥ), who is Guru for all (sarvasādhāraṇo guruḥ). He is [called] Bṛhaspati in as much as he is the lord (patiḥ) of abundance (bṛhattvasya), [which is to say] of the diffusion of discrimination (vivekavikāśasya), or this bṛhattva is 'greatness' (gurutvam) and he is lord of that (tatpatiḥ). (120–121b)

Beyond him is at all times the Daitya Śukra, †...†.⁵⁹⁷ Śukra came forth by nature spotless, like a drop of semen (śukrabinduvat). That is why he is [called] Śukra, since [his coming forth is like] the coming forth of seed to begin producing its effects (bījakāryārambhavinir-

⁵⁹⁴ Svacchanda 10:172–7 could be interpreted as offering, incidentally, a different justification of the name.

⁵⁹⁵ ex conj. Or, if the transmitted °sparśā is retained, 'And [there there are] other [beings] cool to the touch as snow, white jasmine and the moon, travelling in celestial vehicles'.

⁵⁹⁶ Or perhaps 'the planet of treasure'.

⁵⁹⁷ I cannot reconstruct the entire half-line. It seems conceivable that daitya was compounded with loka, since Śukra was not himself a Daitya but the preceptor of the Daityas, and that -peśalaḥ might have formed the end, referring to Śukra's cunning in this capacity. But Śukra might after all be characterised as a Daitya because of his connection with them, and the last pāda might perhaps instead be repaired to something closer to what B has written: lokordhve ca nabhaścaraḥ. The half-line might then mean: 'And [further] above the earth from him [viz. Bṛhaspati] is always(?) the planet Śukra, the Daitya.'

But it must be borne in mind that the three gaps marked by M^y might be meant to suggest that more text than this is missing. The half-line that follows alludes in a very incomplete fashion to a version of a myth according to which Śukra entered the body of Śiva and was given permission to leave by the penis. More details of this might once have been supplied in a half-line that is now missing. Cf. Ur-Skandapurāṇa 150, in particular 150:17–18:

Beyond is angry Saturn (śanaiścaraḥ), furious-eyed, terrible, who gradually (śanaiḥ) mounts to wrathfulness (ārūḍhaḥ krodhakāritve) and does not back down (nāvarohate). Because he moves slowly in his anger (śanaiś carati krodhena), he is called Śanaiścara. (123–124b)

[The next planet] has a grey body (karburāṅgaḥ),⁵⁹⁹ his mouth is fanged, the limbs of his body are severed (chinnakāyaparigrahaḥ). Since the root [√rā] expresses ‘taking’; since it is taught (samudāhṛtaḥ) in the sūkṣmarūpas tato bhūtvā sa śukro munisattamaḥ śukraṇa niḥśṛto liṅgād devadevasya dhīmataḥ śukraṇa niḥśṛto yasmāc chiśnād bhārgavanandanāḥ tasmāc chakra iti khyātiṃ gato gatimatām varaḥ.

Cf. also Mahābhārata 12.279.

One could, however, consider making the following half-line a more nearly complete allusion to the myth by emending the last word to śukrabindutaḥ: ‘Śukra came forth by nature spotless from a drop of [Śiva’s] semen’. Although in the above quoted passage of the Ur-Skandapurāṇa he is said to have emerged ‘like semen’, in the commentaries of Liṅgayasūrin and Bhānujīdīkṣita on Amarakośa 1.3:25a (for instance) he is said to come from Śiva’s semen.

⁵⁹⁸The syntax here is awkward and it is possible that the text here should be further emended.

⁵⁹⁹*ex conj.* ACHARYA. The colours of the planets do vary somewhat: according to an anonymous Grahayajña transmitted on pp. 97–101 of IFP MS T. 537, the sun and Āṅāraka are red (the sun is actually said to be the colour of a lotus bud: padma-garbhasamadyutiḥ); the moon and Śukra are white; Budha and Bṛhaspati are yellow; Śanaiścara and Rāhu are black (Śanaiścara is indranīlasamadyuti and for Rāhu no colour appears to be specified but he bears a black standard: kṛṣṇaśūrpadhvajapatākin); and Ketu is grey (dhūmra). This colour-scheme is compatible with that of Yājñavalkya-smṛti 1:296–7, where, rather than colours, the substances from which images of the planets should be made are listed (these being, in order of the weekdays, copper, crystal, red sandal, gold, gold, silver, iron, lead, and bell-metal (?) [kāṁsya]), and which belongs to a passage describing a navagrahaśānti which BÜHNEMANN (1989:1) believes to be ‘the model of all śānti rites in the medieval ritual texts’. Somaśāmbhupaddhati (2:16–17, BRUNNER 1963:87) also shares this colour scheme, except that Śani is said to be rājāvartanibha, ‘of the colour of lapis lazuli’ (for this identification see BUDDRUSS 1980), as does the Uttarakāmika, except that there Ketu is black (81:6–7b):

*bhāskarāṅgārakau raktau śvetau śukraniśācarau
somaputro guruś caiva tāv ubhau pītajau smṛtau kṛṣṇaṃ śanaiścaraṃ vidyād rāhuketū tathaiva ca.*

The iconographic prescriptions for the planets given in the Saiddhāntika Moha-cūḍottara are as follows (NGMPP Reel No. A 182/2, f. 8^v):

sense of 'grasping hold of' (grahṇe), therefore he is called Rāhu;⁶⁰⁰ or he is called Rāhu [being] chief among Rākṣasas. (124c–125)

Next is Ketu; he is of smoke-coloured body, whose distinguishing 'flag' is marked by a garland of smoke (dhūmamālāṅkaketanaḥ). On his head (ke = śirasi) are clear[ly discernible] fleet (tūrṇāḥ) streaks of mist (nīhārapaṅktayaḥ).⁶⁰¹ Or [the name] 'banner' (ketuḥ) [is applied because it] is used in the sense of something that inspires fear: he is raised up like a banner [to inspire fear in enemies]. (126–127b)

Siddhas, Vidyādhara and others have their positions beyond these (ebhyo 'nantarasamsthānāḥ), all at a height of †...† lakh [yojanas] (†lakṣa†lakṣocchritāḥ sarve).⁶⁰² The stars (tārakāḥ) are twice as high

[These follow upon a rather longer (and therefore omitted) description of the sun, who is said to be suraktāṅgaḥ.]

Later Saiddhāntika accounts include Sakalāgamasārasaṅgraha 1:412–422 (which is labelled as being quoted from the Kiraṇa, but which is in fact quite different from the treatment of the planets in Kiraṇa 29) and Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati, kriyāpāda 12:6–15.

⁶⁰⁰ ex conj. ACHARYA. Dhātupāṭha 2.48 and 49 read: rā dāne (ādāne) and lā ādāne (dāne).

⁶⁰² The transmitted measurement does not seem possible: in the Mṛgendra (vidyāpāda 13:114), the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 24:14) and the Kiraṇa (8:87) the height of the pole star from the earth is only fifteen lakh yojanas. We could therefore consider emending to tithilakṣocchritāḥ here (following Mṛgendra vidyāpāda 13:114c); but we

(dviguṇocchritāḥ). Because they have crossed (tīrṇāḥ) beyond sorrows, beyond darkness, they are *Tāra*kas; [and] because they cause men to cross [oceans when navigating] (tāraṇān nṛṇām).⁶⁰³ (127c–128)

So too (tadvat) the [constellation of the] seven sages are situated [there]; they are sages (ṛṣayaḥ) of great powers of meditation (ṛṣu-bhāvanāḥ). Also the pole star (dhruvam) stands firmly (prasthitam) [there]; [it is called] firm (dhruvam) [because] it does not move, it is stable.⁶⁰⁴ (129) seem not yet to have reached the height of the pole star, so perhaps an emendation to daśalakṣocchritāḥ would give an appropriate height for these stars. Dr. ACHARYA suggested to me that one could consider emending to lakṣyā lakṣocchritāḥ sarve: 'they are each to be understood to be one lakh [above one another]'.

In the Puranic sources tabulated by KIRFEL (1920:128) we find the heights of the planets, which are given in a different order, clearly specified: the sun is one lakh yojanas above the surface of the earth; the moon two lakhs above that. Each planet or group of stars is then two lakhs above the last: after the moon, the nakṣatra ('Fixsterne'), then Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, the Great Bear (saptarṣayaḥ), and ending with the pole star, which is thus fifteen lakhs above the earth.

⁶⁰⁴ ex conj. The pole star is here and in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:114 at the top of bhuvarloka, but it is in svarloka in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 23:50 and in Kiraṇa 8:87. Kṣemārāja draws attention to this discrepancy in his Svacchandatanetrodyota ad 10:516c–517b and 'resolves' it in an interesting fashion:

*evam ihatyaprakriyayā sūryānto bhuvarlokaḥ, dhruvāntaḥ svarlokaḥ,

[Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:114c–115a: note that this improves upon the text of the KSTS edition of the Mṛgendra.]

Svarloka, the locus of the 'self-born' (svajasamśrayaḥ), is eighty-five lakh [yojanas] high.⁶⁰⁵ [It is] where Śakra and so forth, as well as the [other] gods who inhabitant heaven (devāś ca svargavāsinah), dwell. (130)

Maharloka is two crore [yojanas high], where the great resort (mahānto yatra samśritāḥ), the [ten mind-born] sons of the creator [Brahmā], the first of whom is Marīci, who are responsible for the maintenance of the universe.⁶⁰⁶ (131)

Above that (tatordhvataḥ)⁶⁰⁷ is Janaloka, measuring eight lakh [yojanas high]. [It is called] Jana [because it is] where the ancestors Jahnu

'Thus, following the cosmography* of this text; Bhuvah ends with the sun, Svah ends with the pole star; above that is Mahah of two crores and fifty lakhs. But in the Parākhyā and Mṛgendra and other texts Bhuvah ends with the pole star; above that, "[Parākhyā 5:130ab and 131ab]"; "Bhuvah going up to the pole star, fifteen lakhs from the surface of the earth. Svah is eighty-five lakhs...". Thus we find a discrepancy in sequences. This [is there] because it has been so constructed by those who summarised those scriptures. But this [passage of the Svacchanda] is what the supreme Lord Himself has taught. And it concurs with passages in the Kiraṇa and other scriptures which were taught by the Lord: "Bhūḥ, Bhuvah, [then] Svah, which ends with the pole star †...† Mahah is two crore," and so it is this cosmography [given in the Svacchanda] that is correct.'

*This translation assumes that prakriyā is here a Śaiva technical term for 'cosmos' or 'cosmography': see, e.g., Niśvāsamukha 4:96, f. 17^v, Nivāsa uttarasūtra 1:9 and 1:14, f. 23^v, and Niśvāsa guhyasūtra 4:4, f. 51^r; Mataṅgavidyāpāda 16:13; probably Sarvajñānottara śaḍātmaprakaraṇa 67–8 (in Tanjore edition); Svacchanda 11:198–9; Mokṣakārikā 76 (and Mokṣakārikāvṛtti ad loc.); Tantrasāra, p. 64; Tantrāloka 8:5 and 8:11.

This quotation is probably damaged rather than left thus deliberately incomplete by Kṣemarāja, since the missing portions would confirm the measurements he requires; but I have not corrected the quotation because it seems to me likely that Kṣemarāja knew the verse in a different form from that given in the sources I have so far collated.

⁶⁰⁵ ex conj. Other conjectures are possible (e.g. pañcāśītyocchrito or pañcāśītyā mitair), or the reading of the Svacchandatanroddyota could be adopted, but the measurement of eighty-five lakhs is almost certainly correct, for it is shared by the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 24:15), the Mṛgendra (vidyāpāda 13:115) and the Kiraṇa (8:87). Instead of svaja^o, the Svacchandatanroddyota reads svarga^o, which could be interpreted as 'those who reside in Svah', but it might make the next half-line awkward. (The graph for rga in Śāradā can closely resemble a Devanāgarī ja, and so rga for ja is an easy error to make when transcribing from Śāradā to Nāgarī, and this might explain the reading of the KSTS edition.)

⁶⁰⁶ The Mṛgendra too (vidyāpāda 13:115) locates these sages here and shares the same measurement; the Kiraṇa (8:87), Mataṅga (24:15), and Svacchanda (10:516c–517b), which locates Mārkaṇḍa and other sages and Siddhas here, make it two and a half crores high.

⁶⁰⁷ An aiśa sandhi.

[and others reside] (jahnupitrjano yatra),⁶⁰⁸ or the people of the Vasus (vasūnām vā janah). (132)

Beyond Janaloka, by a distance measuring twelve crore [yojanas], is Tapoloka, where [resides] the sage called Sanaka, [and] Sanandana, superior because of [the power accumulated through] austerities (tapotkrṣṭah),⁶⁰⁹ as well as great-souled ancestors who, because of their nature, are rich in [the power accumulated through] austerities. (133–134b)

Satyaloaka is sixteen crore [yojanas in height], where Brahmā is established. There reside sages who vaunt themselves with the pride in their own powers (svavīryamanasoddhatāḥ),⁶¹⁰ having the divine sovereignty and power of Siddhas, Vidyādhara and other such [exalted beings]. (134c–135)

Brahmā [is his name] because he possesses the property of being brahman (brahmatvayogatvāt), and brahman [is so called] because it is great (brhattvāt).⁶¹¹ Above this Brahmā is Viṣṇu, and he is [above] by four crore [yojanas].⁶¹² †He [is called Viṣṇu] because he habitually lies on a lotus (abjaśayanaśīlatvāt), and [because] he has come forth from saṃsāra†.⁶¹³ (136)

⁶⁰⁸ ex conj. The measurement is again common to the Mṛgendra, Kiraṇa, Mataṅga, and Svacchanda, and the formulation is here similar to that of Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:116ab: jano 'ṣṭakoṭyavacchinnah pitrjahnujanāśrayaḥ.

⁶⁰⁹ Internal aīśa sandhi. Sanandana, Rbhu, Sanatkumāra and Sanaka are placed here according to Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:116–117 (which again, along with Kiraṇa 8:88, Mataṅgavidyāpāda 24:16, and Svacchanda 10:520 gives the same measurement). The same group of four, with the addition of Śaṅku and Triśaṅku, are also placed here by the Svacchanda (10:521), and it is possible that some text should have dropped out of the Parākhya here that mentioned Rbhu and Sanatkumāra.

⁶¹⁰ I am assuming that °manasā is here used with the sense °mānena.

⁶¹¹ Cf. Parākhya 14:78ab.

⁶¹² The Kiraṇa (8:89) places Brahmā three crore yojanas above Satyaloka, Viṣṇu three crore above that, and then Hara four crore above that. The Mṛgendra (vidyāpāda 13:117–19), as in the Parākhya, places Brahmā in Satyaloka and then gives four crore and six crore yojanas as the measurements up to Viṣṇu and then Hara (tripuravidviṣ). The Svacchanda places Brahmā one crore above Satyaloka (10:533), Viṣṇu two crore above that (10:538) and Rudraloka seven crores above that (10:547). The Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 24:17) only specifies that Śrīkaṇṭha is ten crore above Satyaloka, thus remaining consistent with all three accounts.

⁶¹³ I am provisionally translating so 'bjaśayanaśīlatvāt saṃsāranirgamāc ca saḥ, which is unlikely to be what was written but may convey what was expressed in the now garbled hypermetrical half-line that is here transmitted. It evidently contained an

Six crore [yojanas above] is situated the god Śaṅkara, Hara. Since śaṁ is taught to mean 'bliss' (sukham), [and] he is of such a kind that he creates that (tat karoti sa tadvidhaḥ), therefore he is called Śaṅkara; [he is called] Hara [because he] removes all evils (sarvapāpaharaḥ). (137–138b)

Those people who are devotees of these [three gods] reach their particular places [when they die]. There they remain, rich in pleasures, as long as the moon and the stars.⁶¹⁴ Then, in a phase of intermediate creation (avāntarasṛṣṭau),⁶¹⁵ they are born in this world as popular people (janapriyāḥ) in some great family and endowed with wealth, food, sons and so forth. (138c–140b) etymology of Viṣṇu, but perhaps without the name originally having been reiterated: I guess that in the course of transmission a scribe added (perhaps in the margin) the identifying label viṣṇuḥ, which became corrupted to jiṣṇu and then inserted into the text. (The initial saḥ could also have been part of the identifying marginal label.) The activity of lying on the lotus is perhaps intended to be expressed by the root $\sqrt{\text{viṣ}}$ ('to pervade') which underlies the formation of the word Viṣṇu (thus Dhātupāṭha 3.13: viṣa vyāptau). The second half might refer to the suggestion in the syllable vi of the 'stepping beyond' (vikramaṇa) associated with Viṣṇu as Trivikrama. (Cf. Mahābhārata 5.68:13: viṣṇur vikramaṇād eva jayanāj jiṣṇur ucyate.) The translated text is, however, also unmetrical, since the first pāda has four shorts in a row and the second is wholly iambic. That such a metrical solecism should occasionally have slipped from the author's pen is of course not totally impossible, for cf. the reading of Kiraṇa 3:26b that can be inferred to be original because of its distribution among the South Indian and Nepalese sources (this is not the reading that has been accepted into the text with Rāmakaṇṭha's commentary).

Dr. ACHARYA has suggested an emendation which would obviate the problem and yield a na-vipulā: sa viṣṇur abjaśayanaśīlatvān nirguṇaś ca saḥ. One might also consider abje śayanaśīlatvāt saṁsārān nirgataś ca saḥ. But no wholly convincing solution occurs to me.

It is of course possible that the line did not originally belong to the text, for it contrasts with the nirvacana given in 14:78 and it is not quoted by Kṣemarāja as Svacchanda 10:549, where he quotes the half-line preceding and following it; but both of these are extremely weak arguments, since different nirvacanas of the same word are not thought contradictory, and many quotations are similarly modified. Moreover we are given nirvacanas here of the preceding and following names.

⁶¹⁴This expression could perhaps be classed as an aīśa pleonasm, since it contains yāvat and ā, both of which appear to be performing the same function. The same pāda occurs in a part of the Śāntiparvan rejected from the critical edition of the Mahābhārata: Vol. 16, Appendix I, 29A, line 58.

⁶¹⁵That is to say after a partial resorption (pralaya) of the universe. For a discussion of total and intermediate pralaya see, for example, Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:180–93. (Total pralaya, or mahāpralaya, is discussed, e.g., in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 4:15, at the conclusion of Nareśvaraparīkṣāprakāśa 2, in the Mataṅgavṛtti ad vidyāpāda 2:30–2, and in the Kiraṇavṛtti ad 4:17.)

Above Hara is, [extending] one crore [yojanas], the egg shell of gold. Thus the egg of Brahmā is taught to extend one hundred crore [yojanas]. Ten Rudras, who have taken up their positions in the ten directions, are its bearers.⁶¹⁶ (140c–141)

Surāpa is in the East; the Rudra Vahni is situated in the South-East; Saṃyama is in the South; Māraṇa stands in the South-West; in the West is the one called Abjala;⁶¹⁷ in the North-West stands Śighraga; Saumyada is in the North; Piṅga is in the North-East (śaṅkaragām gataḥ);⁶¹⁸ above is Śambhu; below is Ananta: all are capable of driving away (sarve vidrāvāṇe kṣamāḥ).⁶¹⁹ (142–3)

They are free of old age and sickness; proud in the power of their own sovereignty; surrounded by retinues of crores of Rudras; skilled in the performance of worship with ritual diagrams (maṇḍalejyāviśārādāḥ). (144)

⁶¹⁶ Here ten names are given in total; in the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha (4:58–81), the Sarvajñānottara (adhvaparakaraṇa 46–61, IFP MS T. No. 334, pp. 60–2), in the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 23:13–44), in the Mṛgendra (vidyāpāda 13:125–35) and in the Kiraṇa (8:93–108) one hundred Rudras are listed, ten for each of the directions. Although there are variations between the lists, they are extremely similar, and there are a number of half-lines common to two or more versions. Other tantras may not list them, but they do mention them (e.g. Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 4:10, Sārdhatrisatikālottara 8:3, Niśvāsa-mukha 4:116, f. 18^r, Mālinīvijayottara 5:12). The hundred Rudras supporting the egg of Brahmā are, in short, an archaic and almost universally shared feature of the cosmos, and the Parākhya's treatment is anomalous. It is possible that the Parākhya's is a list of the ten principal Rudras, each of whom oversees the other nine of his group, or that each, for ritual purposes, stands in place of his group (cf. Mālinīvijayottara 5:13–15b); but it is odd then that this is not made explicit (as in the Mālinīvijayottara): instead each is said (in 5:144c) to have a retinue of a crore of Rudras.

⁶¹⁷ This tautologous name may be corrupt. One might consider emending to balākhya 'pi, or, since we require a watery name (it being the direction of Varuṇa, and since all the other names are associated with the Lokapāla of the direction to which they belong), jalākhya 'pi. The Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 23:28a), Mṛgendra (vidyāpāda 13:129) and the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha (4:70c) all include a Bala, and the Mataṅga (vidyāpāda 23:26d) and the Mṛgendra (ibid.) include a Jalāntaka, who in the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha (4:71b) appears as Balāntaka. Although IFP T. 334's text of Sarvajñānottara (adhvaparakaraṇa 54 (p. 61) also reads Balāntaka, the text probably originally had Jalāntaka, which is the reading of the early Nepalese MS (f. 16^v) and of IFP T. 760 (p. 45).

It is in fact possible that what has been transcribed here from M^y as the ligature bja should rather be interpreted as a ba that has been corrected to a ja.

⁶¹⁸ ex conj. This is an instance of the noun go used in the sense of a point of the compass and not of the final -ga of which the author of the Parākhya is so fond.

⁶¹⁹ This is an allusion to the nirvacana of the word Rudra given in Parākhya 2:48 and 14:79.

In the tranche of Water is Jaleśa; in the tranche of Fire is Tviṣāṃnidhi; in the tranche of Wind is Mātariśvan; in that of Ether is Sūkṣma.⁶²⁰ (145)

⁶²⁰We have now left the realm of prthivītattva and are ascending the ladder of the remaining tattvas, naming for each one a Tattveśa. I have cited part of this list before (GOODALL 1998:liv–lv, fn. 121) and suggested that the Parākhyā may be unique in this list of Tattveśas. I have since come across no other scriptural source that gives this list. BRUNNER (1998: Planche 1) reproduces the same list, collated from a number of secondary Sanskrit works (including Trilocanaśiva's Somaśambhupaddhatiṭikā), and I have proposed (GOODALL 2000:216, fn. 41) that it is the Parākhyā that is the scriptural source for those secondary works. It is conceivable on the strength of this evidence that the Parākhyā followed a tradition according to which the principal dīkṣā involved purifying the overlords of each tattva. (Cf. Mṛgendrakriyāpāda 8:156ab: bhuvanāny atha caktāni tadīśān vā viśodhayet: 'Or he may purify the above taught worlds or their overlords'.) An entirely different list of Tattveśa is given in Vimalaśiva's Atyanta-nirmalatattvaratnāvalī (unnumbered folio).

The table that BRUNNER has constructed can help us to repair the text of the Parākhyā in one or two details, and the reverse is also true: here the Tattveśa of Ether is given as Sūkṣma, whereas in the majority of BRUNNER's sources it is implausibly Sūkṣmanāda, a name that is about to be given (and more appropriately) to the Tattveśa of the subtle element of sound.

The Parākhyā is odd here not only because it gives a unique list (unique, that is, among extant scriptures) of Rudras that rule over these tattvas, but also because it makes no mention of the aṣṭakas, the groups of eight worlds that are placed (with considerable variation) in this region of the cosmos by virtually every Śaiva scripture. These are groups of eight worlds, among which the lowest five groups of eight worlds (the pañcāṣṭaka) are supposed to have the same names as forty pilgrimage sites here on earth. Many of these sites are no longer identifiable.

Dying on earth in one of those pilgrimage sites was held to ensure that the departed soul 'bursts through' the brahmāṇḍa and is reborn in the world with the corresponding name. Thus the lost Bṛhaddādihīca quoted by Rāmakaṇṭha in the Mataṅgavṛtti ad vidyāpāda 18:112c–113b:

ye tyajanti svakān prāṇān sthāneṣv eteṣu mānavāḥ brahmāṇḍaṃ te vinirbhidyā yānti pañcāṣṭakaṃ padam.

The same doctrine is alluded to, e.g., in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 18:112c–113b, 19:38b–39c, and 22:16, as well as in verses 78–81 of the passage of the Sarvajñānottara referred to below.

These five and other aṣṭakas are listed and placed in particular tattvas in Svāyam-bhuvāsūtrasaṅgraha 4:38–55, in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:135c–149, in Sarvajñānottara adhvaprakaraṇa 63–109 (IFP MS T. No. 334, pp. 62–7), in Kiraṇa 8:109–122, in Mālinī-vijayottara 5:15–25, in Svacchanda 10:853ff and in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 18:109–111, 19:34–8, 20:51c–55, 21:17–19, and 22:13–15. They are also included in a list of sixty-eight kṣetras attributed to the Skandakālottara in the Jñānaratnāvalī that is quoted by BHATT on pp. 186–7 of his appendix to his edition of the Sārdhatriśatikālottara. In Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 4:12–20 they are mentioned and, as I have remarked elsewhere (GOODALL 1998:liv), they are not explicitly located in the tattvakrama.

BRUNNER's annotation on this subject (1977:299–303) draws on sources that, with the exception of the Mṛgendra and the Svacchanda, postdate Somaśambhu, and it is for this reason that she has so few variations to record. Furthermore she speaks of all the texts she consulted as having fifty-six worlds divided into seven groups of eight. I suspect that forty worlds divided into five ogdoads is an earlier, not exclusively tantric structure, since there is some evidence that might support that hypothesis.

- Although they all contain more than five groups of eight, the Niśvāsa mūlasūtra (5:9, f. 21^r), the Niśvāsa guhyasūtra (1:115, 6:22 and 7:111ff (ff. 44^r, 58^r, 64^r, 64^v), the Mālinīvijayottara (5:15cd), the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha (4:47ab), the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha (4:12) and the Svacchanda (10:891, 976) all speak of five ogdoads, which the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha names pratyātmaka, guhya, atiguhyā, pavitra and sthāṇu, which the Mālinīvijayottara (5:16–22) and the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha (4:47–55) name pratyātmaka, guhyātiguhya, guhya, pavitra and sthāṇu, and which the Svacchanda names guhya (10:854), atiguhyā (10:873), guhyād guhyatara (10:884), pavitra (10:888) and sthāṇu (10:890). [Not paying sufficient heed to parallels here perhaps led DAGENS and BARAZER-BILLORET to misinterpret the relevant passage of the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha (2000, vol. 2, p. 512).]
- The nature of the five groups is also clearly distinguished from that of the other ogdoads in the Sarvajñānottara, for it is only of them that the text asserts (as we have mentioned above) that they are also the names of tīrthas on earth. (Cf. the verse Kṣemarāja attributes to the Devīyāmala in the Svacchandatantrorddyota ad 10:245c–246.)
- The Śivadharmasāstra speaks of five ogdoads (12:68) and lists only five (12:57–67, IFP MS T. No. 32, pp. 147–8). (Dr. BISSCHOP has pointed out to me [letter of 25.iv.2001] that this corresponds to ff. 37^v–38^r of Cambridge MS Add. 1645.) Its list of ogdoads is the same as that of the Mālinīvijayottara and the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha, but the names of the kṣetras in each group do not tally. Furthermore, as in the Skandakālottara, these are not here said to be the names of bhuvanas. As the introduction to the list tells us, they are simply sacred places on this earth, and if devotees die in them, they become Rudras (12:56): rudrāvatārasthānāni puṇyakṣetrāṇi nirdiśet/ mṛtānāṃ teṣu rudratvaṃ śivakṣetreṣu dehinām.

Their not being mentioned here in the Parākhya may not mean that the cosmos of the Parākhya did not contain the aṣṭakas: as we have seen above (fn. 358 on p. 249), 4:56 appears to make reference to the yogāṣṭaka, an ogdoad beyond the 'original' five ogdoads. On each level eight worlds could have been arranged around the central Tattveśa, just as we find in the Sarvajñānottara, e.g. in the description of the level of water in adhvaprakaraṇa 63 (IFP MS T. 334, p. 62):

suddhasphaṭikasamkāśi ādiguhyāṣṭakāvṛtaḥ*.

One might be tempted to hypothesise on the basis of this verse that the number eight is to be explained as the result of the 'upper' levels of the cosmos still being spatially conceived; on each level the worlds were arranged, like the Lokapālas, in the cardinal

Gandhāṅga is in the subtle-element of 'smell'; Jalada is in 'taste'; Bhānumat is in 'form'; Balavattara is in 'touch' (sparsākhye).⁶²¹ (146)

In 'sound' is Sūkṣmanāda; in the faculty of hearing is Vyomacāra,⁶²² in the faculty of touch is Sarvāṅga; in that of sight is Prakāśaka. (147)

In the faculty of taste is Mahāvakra; in that of smell is Vilumpaka,⁶²³ in speech Dundubhi is embraced; in the faculty of grasping (karendriye) is Samādāna. (148)

In the [tattva of the] anus is the Rudra Tūrṇakṛt;⁶²⁴ in that of movement (pādākhye) is Kramaṇa;⁶²⁵ in that of pleasure (upasthākhye) is Ghanānanda; in the manas is Saṃkalpa. (149)

Haṃkṛti is in the tranche of ahaṃkāra; Buddha is located in buddhi; Trideha is in guṇa; in [secondary] matter (pradhāne) is Pradhānaka. (150)

In the tattva of the [bound] soul is Sūkṣmadeha; in rāga is Kāmada; in [impure] knowledge (vidyākhye) is Vedavijñāna; in limited power to act (kalātmake) is Jñānabindu. (151) and intermediate directions. But it should be noted that they are arranged above and below one another in each group in the Mataṅga (this is clear from, e.g., vidyāpāda 18:110 and 19:38). Furthermore it is possible that the account of the Śivadharmasāstra is archaic, that is to say that it lists kṣetras without any mention of a link with bhuvanas beyond for the reason that that text predated such a conception, and not simply because it did not share tantric notions of the upper reaches of the cosmos.

⁶²¹M^y is wrongly reported as reading sparsākhyo in GOODALL 1998:lv, fn. 121. As I have remarked (GOODALL 1998:liv), placing anything at all in this group of tattvas—those of the five subtle elements and the eleven faculties—is anomalous. No tantra places worlds in them. The Mataṅga, however, (vidyāpāda 18:56ff) does assign them adhidevatās, but this list is not that of the Parākhyas Tattveśas. And the account of the adhipatis of the tanmātras in Svacchanda 10:896–909 is quite different again, it being part of a homologisation of the eight names of Śiva as aṣṭamūrti with the corresponding aspects: the five elements, the sun, the moon and the yajamāna.

⁶²²*ex conj.* The transmitted reading, which I previously printed without apparent hesitation (GOODALL 1998:lv, fn. 121), is uninterpretable.

⁶²³BRUNNER (1998: Planche 1, fn. 4) explains the appropriateness of the name thus: '... "le Voleur", bien trouvé pour le nez qui "dérobe" les aliments'.

⁶²⁴The reading of the manuscript here again was wrongly reported (as vayai ca tūrṇaka) in GOODALL 1998:lv, fn. 121. Note that BRUNNER (1998: Planche I) records the variant tṛṇakṛt, which might make sense in this context: 'he who makes [manure and thereby] grass'.

⁶²⁵*ex conj.* This emendation is perhaps unnecessary, but Kramaṇa seems a more appropriate name than Ramaṇa for a Rudra of this tattva; the Dhātupāṭha entry for √kram reads (1.502): kramu pādavikṣepe. The name is missing from a couple of the sources consulted by BRUNNER (1998: Planche 1), and she reports the others as giving the form Rāmana, which is still less likely.

In binding fate (niyatyāhve) is Niyāmaka; in time is Kāla,⁶²⁶ in primal matter (māyākhye) is Gahaneśāna, the overlord of all the Rudras. (152)

All these Rudras who are in the lower path⁶²⁷ inhabit various worlds, are rich in various forms, are endowed with various powers, are surrounded by many crores of various Rudras, have pure bodies and places of support for their faculties (śuddhāṅgakaṛaṇādhārāḥ), and are caused [viz. their embodiments are caused] by a pure cause.⁶²⁸ (153–4)

They are enjoined [to perform tasks] below the level of māyā; they bestow salvific grace on all. In pure knowledge (śuddhavidyāyām) is Śambara,⁶²⁹ and Ananta is in Īśvaratattva. (155)

In Sadāśivatattva is Brahmā, the locus of bindu, nāda, and kalā.⁶³⁰ Beyond that is the Lord Śiva, who is at the culminating point of all the tattvas and of the kalās (sarvatattvakalāntagaḥ).⁶³¹ Beyond that there is no further entity that is pure[r], [more] pervading. (156–157b)

Above māyā is the pure path (śuddhamārgaḥ), in which pure powers are made use of (śuddhaśaktiparigrahaḥ).⁶³² Creation (prapañcaḥ) in that [pure path] is brought about by those [pure powers] (tatkṛtaḥ),⁶³³ it ⁶²⁶Observe that here the order of the five kañcukas is different from that implied elsewhere. Of course it is well known that their order varies and that, as I have observed (GOODALL 1998:209, fn. 151, referring to Aghoraśiva's commentary ad Tattvapraśāsa 41), the variation can be justified by assuming that they can be listed not just in śṛṣṭikrama or saṃhārakrama but also in pravṛttikrama or in an order showing which derives from which. Although the Parākhya elsewhere frequently implicitly refers to kalā as the first of the evolutes of māyā (e.g. 4:1d, 4:3b, 4:14a, 4:28a, 4:61b, 4:63c, 4:65b, 4:128a, 4:149b), there is one other place in which it is implied that kāla is in some sense at the top of the ladder of the impure universe, and that is in 14:76.

⁶²⁷I.e. in or below māyā.

⁶²⁸The point is, I think, that, as with Ananta, their embodiment is not caused, as it is for us, by the impure cause that is karman, nor is it made up of the coarse elements of which our bodies are made up. Cf. the discussion of Ananta and his body in Kiraṇa 4:5c–14.

⁶²⁹We need not emend here to śambarāḥ and translate 'mantras': Śambara is simply the name of the next Tattveśa.

⁶³⁰As we shall see in fn. 648 on p. 323 below, it is not clear how this is to be interpreted.

⁶³²That is to say that Śiva himself does not directly make use of māyā, which is also sometimes described as a śakti (e.g. Kiraṇa 4:19c) or as replete with śaktis (e.g. Parākhya 4:154).

⁶³³Or 'is brought about by Him'.

is expanded for the sake of enjoyment (prathito bhogahetutaḥ).⁶³⁴ (157c–158b)

‘Positions’ [in this pure path] (sthānam) are [said metaphorically to be] situated higher and higher (ūrdhvām ūrdhvaṃ sthitam) in accordance with their excelling other ‘positions’ (sthānāntarotkarṣāt), [that is to say] in accordance with their having yet higher qualities (utkrṣṭa-guṇayogataḥ).⁶³⁵ [Such] a ‘position’ refers to an office [with which a soul is invested by the Lord] (adhikāranidarśakam). (158c–159b)

This ‘position’ is [thus] the investiture (saṃskāraḥ) with [a given] office (adhikārasya) †...†.⁶³⁶ Since a position has a cause, its destruction must have a cause, for there must be destruction of whatever arises, and so it is that same omnipotent Lord (prabhuh) who has been presented at length above (pūrvaṃ prapañcitaḥ) who is the creator and destroyer. (159c–161b)

[He is] the Lord who resides in every tattva (sarvatattvāśrayaḥ), the cause of every cause (sarvakāraṇakāraṇam). He is the agentive cause in this [world], the fruit to be attained through all mantras and rituals. (161cdef)

This creation—which is the locus [of the activity] of mantras, [and whose nature has been] determined by the means of knowledge that is [constituted by] the teachings of scripture, which has issued forth from the lotus-like mouth of the Lord, the controller of matter and souls—has been taught tattva by tattva (skandhāt), in as much as it exists in divisions that proceed from the variety of ‘palaces’ that are particular tattvas (skandha-viśeṣaharmyavibhavaprasyaṇḍabhāgasthitaḥ), [and] position by position

⁶³⁴This is ambiguous, for bhoga commonly refers to the experience of the fruits of past actions. But here it probably refers to Śiva’s ‘enjoyment’ and is the second member of the triad of laya, bhoga, and adhikāra (for which see, e.g., 2:99).

⁶³⁵As Dr. BISSCHOP has suggested to me (letter of 25.iv.2001), this could be taken literally to mean ‘A position is situated higher and higher in accordance with its excelling other positions, on account of its having yet higher qualities’. But I prefer to assume it to express the notion that height in these ‘upper’ reaches of the cosmos is metaphorical. Cf. Mālinīvijayottara 2:60ab: yo hi yasmād guṇotkrṣṭaḥ sa tasmād ūrdhva ucyate (quoted by Sadyojyotis at the end of his Svāyambhuvavṛtti on 3:11 and by Abhinavagupta in Mālinīvijayavārttika 213). Our discussion also recalls the Lord’s reply to Garuḍa’s question in Kiraṇa 4:5c–7b.

⁶³⁶Perhaps one could consider sthānavad adhikārasya saṃskāras ta<<dguṇāśra>>yaḥ: ‘Investiture with office is like a ‘position’ [in as much as it is] endowed with the properties of that [i.e. of a position]’.

(sthānāt), in as much as it is replete with⁶³⁷ states of being in which there is the use of the rays of the powers of the soul when it is in [particular] positions (sthānagatātmaśaktikiraṇavyāpārabhāvottaraḥ).⁶³⁸

Thus the fifth chapter, an exposition of a consideration of the topic of the 'womb', in the great tantra called the Supreme.

PARĀKHYATANTRA CHAPTER VI⁶³⁹

Prakāśa spoke:

[The topics of this chapter are:] the raising of mantras (mantroddhāraḥ), the arising of the phonemes, the connection of words and sentences with meaning, the defining characteristic of mantras and their convention (mantralakṣaṇasaṅketah),⁶⁴⁰ how the fruits of particular mantras are attained.⁶⁴¹ (1)

At the time of creation that omniscient one, the supreme Lord, makes manifest from the drop (bindoḥ) the seed sound[s]⁶⁴² [and this making manifest is] for the sake of [enabling the attainment of] the goal of souls (puruṣārthaprayojanām).⁶⁴³ (2)

The bindu was shaken because of his will; then there came into being the totality of sounds. It came into being in two parts, [that is to say] as vowels and [as consonants]. Through its division into [two] parts (khaṇḍa-bhedaḥ),⁶⁴⁴ with its sixteen vowels and with its remaining thirty-three ⁶³⁹The text and annotated translation of the first twenty-eight verses of this chapter appeared in GOODALL 2001a, from which they have been incorporated here, with such modifications as now seem necessary.

⁶⁴⁰*ex conj.* But perhaps the transmitted °saṃveśaḥ could be retained and interpreted as °saṃniveśaḥ: 'the definition and the structure of mantras'.

⁶⁴¹Like 1:15 and the initial verses of subsequent chapters, this verse gives an agenda of the topics that are next to be discussed; this time, however, the list is neither comprehensive nor in order: the raising of mantras is covered in 6:29–39, the arising of the phonemes in 6:2–8, the connection of words and sentences with meaning in 6:9–24, the characteristic of mantras and their convention (i.e. that they have a convention) in 6:40–50, how the fruits of mantras are attained covers from 6:51–80, after which there are two verses that conclude this chapter and introduce the next.

⁶⁴³*ex conj.* Also possible would be emendation to °prayojanāt, suggested by Dr. ACHARYA.

⁶⁴⁴This enjambement now seems preferable to me to taking the expression with the rest of verse 3 as a clumsy repetition of what has already been conveyed with khaṇḍa-dvayena, as I did in GOODALL 2001a:340.

consonants,⁶⁴⁵ this is [known] in the world [as] the “mother”, [being] the matrix of the utterance of sounds.⁶⁴⁶ (4)

It is made manifest out of bindu because of the will of the supreme Cause. And so the material cause is bindu, since phonemes [can]not [exist] without a material cause (tad vinā). (5)

Since they are taught to be plural, and since they are insentient, these [phonemes] are effects.⁶⁴⁷ The instigating cause of them is the Lord; the ⁶⁴⁵ ex conj. It is more usual to count kṣa too and thus arrive at a total of fifty. Cf., for example, Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 5:3 (quoted in fn. 648 on p. 323 below) and Kiraṇa 11:4–5:

navakhaṇḍayutaś cādyah punaḥ ṣoḍaśabhiḥ svaraiḥ daśārdhākṣaraniṣṇātāḥ pañca khaṇḍā vyavasthitāḥ khaṇḍadvayaṃ caturvarṇaṃ śeṣaṃ kūṭākhyayā sthitam evaṃ jñeyaṃ śatārdhātma varṇaśaktivibhedataḥ.

‘Then (punaḥ), together with the sixteen vowels, [this] primordial [group of sounds] [became] divided into nine divisions: there are five groups [viz. velars, palatals, retroflexes, dentals and labials] that are complete with five sounds [in each]; two groups [viz. semivowels and the sibilants with ha] have four sounds [each]; and the remainder [viz. kṣa] is called the anvil (kūṭākhyayā sthitam). And so you should know that, because it is divided into the powers that are the [individual] sounds, it is fifty-fold.’ Cf. also Pauṣkara 8:13ab: tābhyah [scil. ambikādibhyah śaktibhyah] sarve samutpannās triṃśad varṇāḥ savimśatiḥ. Note, however, that Umāpati ad loc. (p. 572) understands the fiftieth letter to be not kṣa but la: atra lakārasyāntarbhāvābhiprāyeṇa pañcāśattvaṃ bod-dhyam, ata eva pāṇinīye śivopadiṣṭe akṣarasamāmnāye lakārasyopadeśo na kṛtaḥ. yady api pāṇinīye kṣakārasyaṃ upadeśo nāsti, tathāpi ‘akārādikṣakārāntā varṇāḥ pañcāśad eva tu’ ity ākara eveśvareṇopadiṣṭatvāt kṣakārasya pṛthag varṇatvaṃ boddhyam. The letter la is also reckoned as the fiftieth elsewhere, e.g. in Ajitāgama 1:20c.

⁶⁴⁶ Accounting for the name māṭṛkā in this fashion is commonplace in such contexts: compare, for example, Kiraṇa 11:6a māteva māṭṛkā saiva; Pauṣkara 8:21cd sarvajñā māṭṛkā jñeyā jagato māṭṛvat sthitā; Pauṣkara 8:24cd jñānaśaktis tathā jñeyā māṭṛkā lokamāṭṛkā. In the light of the first two of these parallels one might consider emending either to māṭṛkeva matā loke or to māṭṛkeyaṃ yathā loke.

⁶⁴⁷ It is clear that the text here speaks of the supposed invariable concomitance of plurality and insentience with the fact of being an effect, which is a tenet of the Śaiva Siddhānta. Cf., for example, Mṛgendravṛtti ad vidyāpāda 2:15ab, p. 72: yac cācāitanye saty anekam, tat kāraṇāntarapūrvakam and Mṛgendravidyāpāda 9:6ab (and commentary ad loc.), p. 190: yad anekam acit tat tu dṛṣṭam utpattidharmakam. Jñānaprakāśa offers no commentary on this half-verse when it occurs in the Pauṣkara (8:20ab), but Umāpati interprets it in this way, and one might consider adopting his reading into the text here: bahudhā saṃsthitā varṇāḥ kṛtakā ‘cetanā yataḥ (this reading’s aśā double sandhi is an awkwardness that is in its favour). Umāpati comments as follows (p. 575): varṇāḥ kṛtakā ity arthaḥ. supāṃ sulug ityādinā jaso luk chāndasaḥ. yataḥ yasmāt bahudhā anekatvena saṃsthitāḥ acetanāś ca ata ity arthaḥ. varṇāḥ kṛtakāḥ, anekatve sati jaḍatvād ity anumānaprayogo draṣṭavyaḥ. I have nevertheless hesitated to adopt Umāpati’s reading, because I suspect that it is a clarificatory improvement (kṛtakāḥ material cause is the great bindu (bindurāt).⁶⁴⁸ (6)

being clearer than kṛtāḥ) of what we find in M^y and the Siddhāntasamuccaya. (The reading cetanāvataḥ of IFP MS T. 284 transmitting the Siddhāntasamuccaya I had earlier accepted, assuming it to be a nominative plural, but the distribution of the reading cetanā yataḥ shows the reading of IFP MS T. 284 to be unlikely to have been primary.)

⁶⁴⁸In the developed accounts of the emanation of sound of Śaiva exegetes (e.g. Śrīkaṇṭha's Ratnatrayaparīkṣā, Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha's Mṛgendravṛtti ad vidyāpāda 13:160c–162b, Rāmakaṇṭha's Kiraṇavṛtti ad 3:23cd) this label is ambiguous, because there are two bindus: from the supreme bindu (also referred to variously as kuṇḍalinīśakti, mahāmāyā, paranāda, aghoṣā vāk—these, and other synonyms, are listed in Nādakārikā 16c–17) there first evolves nāda, and from that in turn there evolves a further bindu (for a fuller discussion see GOODALL 1998:290–6). The sequence is succinctly delineated in Ratnatrayaparīkṣā 171c–173b—and this, along with Mṛgendrakriyāpāda 1:2, may be one of the first Saiddhāntika works in which it appears:

jñānaṃ parāmṛtopāyahetuḥ parikaraḥ paśoḥ tac ca śabdānuvedhena śabdarāśer abhūd asau śabdarāśiś ca bindūttho bindur nādād asāv api bindor anāhatād eṣa kāraṇaṃ śuddhavartmanaḥ

'For the bound soul scripture is the wherewithal that is the cause of [understanding] the means to [attain] the supreme nectar [of liberation]. And that [scripture], because it is permeated by language, arose from the alphabet, and that alphabet arose from bindu, and bindu arose from nāda, and that (asāv api) arose from the unsounded bindu. That is the [material] cause of the pure path [of the universe].'

In what survives of the Parākhyā, however, there seems to be no clear evidence of such a progression. The possibility cannot be ruled out that the Parākhyā presupposed knowledge of the progression (Parākhyā 5:156ab might be supposed to suggest this: sadāśive sthito brahmā bindunādakalāśrayaḥ); but Parākhyā 6:3 leads one to understand that there is a single bindu from which the varṇas directly evolve, and there is no statement in the rest of the chapter or in the rest of the surviving text that contradicts this.

Moreover the accounts of the emanation of sound in other demonstrably early listed Saiddhāntika scriptures are similarly bald and do not obviously display knowledge of this progression. While the account of the Parākhyā makes no mention of nāda, that of the Sārdhatrīśatikālottara (chapter 1) makes no mention of bindu, and that of the beginning of Kiraṇa 11, though difficult to interpret in all its details, plainly does not have the classical progression. That of the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha makes no mention of either bindu or nāda (Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 5:1–5):

kāraṇaṃ mokṣadaṃ, brahman, 'brahma' brahmadeviduḥ 1 tasmāt sarvaprado devo śabdarāśir iti śrutaḥ navaparvāśatārdhātmā yonibījātmakaḥ paraḥ 2

śeṣā yoniś catustriṃśad avyayā hy akṣarātmikā 3
sā śaktir devadevasya tayā vyāptam idaṃ jagat

This effect [that is the totality of sound thus] has three causes.⁶⁴⁹ And jñānaṃ śaivaṃ paraṃ sūkṣmaṃ yat tat tāraṇam uttamam 4

 (Immediately following this is the account of the Saiddhāntika canon quoted in GOODALL 1998:412–13.)

It would be wrong to conclude from this, however, that the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha does not know of the pair, for it is included in its chapter on yoga, where it is taught that the sādhaka can aim for different achievements by meditating upon Śiva as six different things (lakṣya): vigraha, bhuvana, mantra, bindu, nāda, and, at the highest level, vyoman (Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 20:38–43). (For further discussion of the six lakṣyas see VASUDEVA *2000:188–223.) The pairing of bindu and nāda is indeed unquestionably old; I am observing only that it is not found in early Saiddhāntika accounts of the emanation of sound. It is not impossible that its appearance in later accounts of emanation results from understandable systematising attempts to harmonize accounts of, for example, mantroccāra (in which bindu and nāda might once but need not now be interpreted quite differently) with accounts of emanation.

In the elaborate uccāra of Kiraṇa 58, for example, the first sound of the mantra begins (in the heart) with brahman (32), in the course of enunciation it then passes through Viṣṇu (37), Rudra (44), Sureśvara (45), bindu and nāda (56), Kuṇḍalinī (59), śakti (61) and culminates in niṣkala (63).

The account of the opening verses of chapter 11 of the Svacchanda, however, though it speaks of the first stage as vyoman (11:4b) and does not use one of the more usual synonyms, and though it elaborates the other stages, may be considered to reproduce a version of the emanation of sound that came to be accepted by the post-scriptural exegetes of the Śaiva Siddhānta.

The Pauṣkara's account of the emanation of sound is more difficult to reconstruct with certainty. Pauṣkara 7:72cd charts a course of development typical of late systematised accounts: nādasya bindoḥ prasṭiḥ, śabdānāṃ niḥṣṭis tataḥ. In its eighth chapter, however, it begins with brahman (8:2), which is probably here to be understood to be identified with kāraṇaṃ parameśvaraḥ (8:3d), then śāstra as nāda (8:6b: śāstraṃ nādasvarūpataḥ), then a (four-fold) bindu (8:7), from that a power called Ambikā (8:8ab), from that Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā, and Raudrī and a group of sixteen other powers (8:9–12)—Jayā, Vijayā, Ajitā, Aparājitā, Nivṛtti, Pratiṣṭhā, Vidyā, Śānti, Indhikā, Dīpikā, Rocikā, Mocikā, Vyomarūpā, Anantā, Anāthā, Anāśritā; from these arise the fifty phonemes.

Considerations of space restrain me from quoting and discussing here the archaic accounts of the emanation of sound to be found in the Sarvajñānottara ('mantra-tantrotpattiprakaraṇa' IFP T.334, p.23) and in Nivāsa uttarasūtra 1 (f.24^r).

⁶⁴⁹The necessity of there being three causes for an effect was taught in 2:29–30. Observe also that in the passage of the Śataratnollekhinī that comments on that unit (quoted in a note to the translation ad loc.), it is implied that nṛkarma here refers not to the human effort of enunciation, but, improbably, to the retributive force of past these consonants (varṇās ca) [become] word[s] from conjunction with the vowels,⁶⁵⁰ and with these [words] we maintain [that] sentence[s arise]. (7)

From these [sentences] (tasmāt) comes about the understanding of meaning, which is the basis for worldly interaction.⁶⁵¹ Worldly interaction otherwise, [i.e.] without the act of uttering words, cannot be accounted for (anyāyyaḥ). (8)

Pratoda spoke:

Since phonemes perish in an instant, sphoṭa must be that which effects the understanding of meaning. This all-pervading, eternal entity, manifestable by the phonemes, is, they say (kila), what makes the meaning clear. (9)

Prakāśa spoke:

Sphoṭa does not exist as another entity (arthāntarasthitiḥ)⁶⁵² separate from the phonemes. [If such a thing exists] it [must be either] distinct [from them] or not distinct. [If it is] separate from them, it is not established to exist [as an ontologically independent thing] in the way that external objects [exist]. [Therefore] there are just the phonemes. We do not hear [a word] separately as two things [both sphoṭa and phonemes] in actions.

⁶⁵¹The feminine ending leads us to expect that this word is a bahuvrīhi, but the sense requires that it be used adjectivally as a tatpuruṣa. Cf. 6:45b and see introduction, p. lxxxii.

the same way.⁶⁵³ (10–11b)

[Objection of a sphoṭavādin opponent:] It is sphoṭa manifested by the many sounds that conveys meaning. Do we not directly experience that many things can be revealed from a single lamp? [Just] by the phonemes when uttered we would not grasp the meaning in another place [than their place of utterance]. (11c–12)

[Reply of the Siddhāntin:] Do we not experience that perceiving the smell of rain [is possible] in another place [than where the rain has fallen]? Admittedly the phonemes perish [as soon as they are enunciated]; [but] there is a trace that is born of the phonemes. The final phoneme, together with the traces born of the previous phonemes, conveys the meaning.⁶⁵⁴ (13–14b)

⁶⁵⁴ This is a paraphrase of a well-known statement in the Śābarabhāṣya (p. 38, line 13): pūrvavarṇajanitasamśkārasahito 'ntyo varṇaḥ pratyāyakaḥ. This Mīmāṃsaka view runs counter to Rāmakaṇṭha's position as outlined in the Nāḍakārikā (see particularly verses 11 and 12). Although Aghoraśiva goes to some length in his Nāḍakārikāvṛtti ad 6–7 to refute sphoṭa, Rāmakaṇṭha's theory of nāda as the entity that conveys meaning is a sort of sphoṭavāda, and indeed both Jñānaprakāśa (as is clear from his Pauṣkara-vṛtti on Pauṣkara 8:35c–36) and Umāpati (for example, in his alternative interpretation of Pauṣkara 8:20ab [=Parākhya 6:7cd], p. 575: svarasamyogād iti varṇavyaṅgyanāda-rūpasphoṭadvārety arthaḥ) appear to understand the terms nāda and sphoṭa to be interchangeable. Aghoraśiva is aware of the discrepancy, for he cites Parākhya 6:14ab in his Nāḍakārikāvṛtti ad Nāḍakārikā 12: katham punaḥ śrīmatparākhya "pūrvavarṇajasamśkārayukto 'ntyo 'rṇo 'bhidhāyakaḥ" ity uktam? nāḍābhivyañjakatvenopacārād ity adoṣaḥ. 'How is it then that the venerable Parākhya teaches that "The final phoneme, together with the traces born of the previous phonemes, conveys the meaning"? There is no fault [in the position here], because [the Parākhya speaks] figuratively [of the final phoneme being that which conveys meaning] because of the fact that it makes nāda [which is in fact the conveyer of meaning] manifest.' In fact Aghoraśiva is misrepresenting the position of the Parākhya, according to which the varṇas are emanations of bindu which themselves convey meaning. Aghoraśiva's characterisation of the view of the Parākhya is exactly that of the opponent in 11cd above, and it is exactly the view of an earlier portion of the Pauṣkara: tato varṇair abhivyakto nādaḥ syād arthavācakaḥ (Pauṣkara 6:315b)... samśkrīto 'rṇas tu paścimaḥ/ arthānām vācako bhūyād iti cet tan na śobhate (Pauṣkara 6:316c–317b)... tataḥ sthūlais tathā varṇair vyakto nādas tu vācakaḥ. The eighth chapter of the Pauṣkara, however, does not clearly support this view, and, as has been mentioned above, the chapter has long been regarded as suspect, for Jñānaprakāśa prefaces his commentary on it by observing that predecessors of his had wished to expunge it on the grounds that it repeats much from the [Rejoinder of the sphoṭavādin opponent:] [But] the phonemes do not come together into a unit in such a way that memory of them would be possible. If memory of this [previously enunciated group of phonemes] is not possible, how will it [viz. the final phoneme] release the meaning? (14c–15b) [Reply of the Siddhāntin:] Therefore [we know] by an arthāpatti-type inference (arthanirṇayāt) [that] understanding of the meaning must come about through a trace [of the previously enunciated phonemes]. (15cd)

The trace is a power born of the phonemes through which they are empowered to achieve the [revealing of the] meaning. By means of these phonemes, which are equipped with their own powers and which convey meaning, worldly interaction is possible. (16)

Pratoda spoke:

Which [among the various types] is determined to be the connection between word and meaning? For devoid of a connection words cannot denote their meanings.⁶⁵⁵ (17)

Prakāśa spoke:

It is not the connection that exists between cause and effect,⁶⁵⁶ since meaning (asau) has another cause [than the word].⁶⁵⁷ [Since] the object text of a chapter of the Kāmika:

*punarukṭibāhulyāt na pauṣkarapaṭalaḥ, kin tu kāmikaḥ vaktāraḥ tantrāvatārapaṭala evātra kaiścit prakṣipta iti sphuratīti guravaḥ kathayanti.
praśnottarakṭiḥ kathañcit kiñcitprakārāntaragītīmatīti na punarukṭitvaṃ kṣamata iti punaḥ kathayanti kecit.*

- kāmikavaktāra°] BD; kāmikavartāra° AC • sphuratīti]
- BCD; spurantīti A • praśnottarakṭiḥ] ABD; praśnottarakṭiḥ C
- °prakārāntara°] ABC; °prakārāntara° D

Jñānaprakāśa's manner of phrasing this remark suggests that he might not himself have been aware of the overlapping passage, and indeed I have not located such a passage in the various versions of the Kāmika at my disposal (Pūrva-Kāmika, Uttarakāmika or in the two transcripts of the so-called Kāmikavidyāpāda (both in IFP T. 830)); but the chapter is certainly plagiaristic, for it draws half of its 45 verses from the Parākhya (see introduction, p. cxiii). It is unlikely, but perhaps just conceivable, that the Parākhya in turn was drawing on the now lost Ur-Kāmika known to us only from quotations in the works of Kashmirian commentators (see Goodall 1998: xlv, fn. 103).

⁶⁵⁵The ensuing discussion derives (directly or indirectly) from the Śābarabhāṣya (pp. 36ff).

⁶⁵⁶Both the commentators on Pauṣkara 41c are aware of the awkwardness of the syntax of this pāda and both explain it away in the same fashion: bhāvanirdeśa iti kāryakāraṇabhāvaḥ (Jñānaprakāśa); ayaṃ ca bhāvapradhāno nirdeśaḥ; kāryakāraṇa-bhāva ity arthaḥ (Umāpati, p. 584). The construction recurs in 6:19a.

⁶⁵⁷I assume that this pāda is intended to formulate the same idea as Pauṣkara 8:41d, denoted is on the ground and the word is in the [speaker's] mouth, [it cannot therefore be the connection of saṃyoga]. And it is not the relation of inherence.⁶⁵⁸ (18)

It is not the relation of that which proves and that which is proved, [since the connection between word and meaning] is not established to be invariable.⁶⁵⁹ [Now] the relation of that which causes one to understand and that which is to be caused to be understood⁶⁶⁰ depends on a further connection, since without a relation (*vinā bhāvena*⁶⁶¹) [between the two]

as read and understood by Umāpati: yato 'sau nārṇahetujaḥ: 'since that [meaning] is not born of the cause that is the sounds.' Jñānaprakāśa's odd reading (yato 'sāv arṇahetujaḥ) he interprets as follows: yato 'sau arthaḥ na varṇajaḥ, kin tv arṇahetujaḥ: varṇanimitākāśavāyavādijanyaḥ. 'Since the object is not born of the phonemes, but is rather born of the causes that give rise to the phonemes, [i.e.] born of [the elements], starting with ether and air, which are the causes of the [gross] phonemes.'

⁶⁵⁹Cf. Ślokaṃvṛttika sambandhākṣepavāda 16–19. The same idea lies behind the versions of our half-verse that are transmitted in the Pauṣkara: instead of niyato na vyavasthitaḥ, the Pauṣkara reads sa tu bandhanavatsthitaḥ. Umāpati's Pauṣkarabhāṣya comments (p. 585): *sa tu sambandhaḥ bandhanavatsthitaḥ pūrvokta-sambandhadvayavatsu sthitaḥ. tad uktam [Mataṅgavidyāpāda 3:9abc] 'dharmaṇa sādhyate dharmī kvacit kāryeṇa kāraṇam/ kāraṇena kvacit kāryam' iti. Jñānaprakāśa's Pauṣkaravṛtti here is essentially the same and concludes with the same quotation: sa tu bandhanavatsthitaḥ pūrvoktadvisambandhavatsu sthitaḥ. tad uktam 'dharmaṇa sādhyate ...'. I understand the commentators to mean that the relationship in a formal argument between the hetu and the sādhyā must always in turn depend either on a relationship of cause and effect (thus smoke, which is caused by fire, allows one to infer the presence of fire) or on a relationship of inherence (thus the taste of a mango, which inheres in a mango, causes one to infer that the fruit one eats in pitch darkness must be a mango). (Although the two commentators seem throughout the rest of the chapter to diverge so much from each other and without ever referring to each other's interpretations, here one suspects that there may have been some relationship between their texts.)*

⁶⁶⁰This pāda (19c), as well as 20c, has a ra-vipulā but without the required caesura after the fourth syllable. This perhaps accounts for the alteration of the corresponding half-verse in the version of the Pauṣkara.

⁶⁶¹This is an anomalous use of bhāva to mean 'relation', extrapolated presumably from such usages as kāryakāraṇabhāva, which comes to be used in the sense of 'the relationship between cause and effect', but literally means 'the being cause and effect [with respect to each other of two things]'. This passage is not in the Pauṣkara, but the same usage occurs in Jñānaprakāśa's reading of Pauṣkara 8:42c (≈ Parākhya 6:19a) above.

smoke could not be a pointer to the existence of fire. This [particular instance of a] relation of that which causes one to understand and that which is to be caused to be understood is not [direct] like [that between] sight and form.⁶⁶² (19–20)

Words do not of themselves without their having been connected cause one to understand⁶⁶³ objects [that they denote]. (21ab)

[Objection:] But if you say that (vā), [one might reply that] understanding can arise from a written letter and there is no link [with the meaning] in that. (21cd)

[Siddhānta:] In that case [of writing] we know that there was a creator of a connection.⁶⁶⁴ Since [the connection of word and meaning is] created by the intellect, the creator of the connection cannot have been the word; the creator of the connection between them is a person. (22)

Until someone has declared that [a particular word] is used to denote a [particular] meaning, [another person,] who does not know the other's convention, does not grasp the meaning. (23)

[Such] convention we know from direct experience in worldly interaction can be artificial. Without convention people cannot understand a particular meaning. (24)

⁶⁶²Prakāśa is acknowledging that this is the kind of relation between word and meaning, but asserts that it requires convention to link it. Jñānaprakāśa is happy to accept this straightforward interpretation: tarhi paryavasitaḥ sambandhaḥ ka ucyate? antarpūrvakam saṃketādivivekapūrvakam pratyeyapratyayākhyas tu jñāpyajñāpakalakṣaṇas tu sambandhaḥ. Umāpati, however, wishes to have the text accept saṃketa itself as a distinct fifth type of sambandha, and so interprets as follows (p. 585): turīya-pakṣam dūṣayati pratyeyeti: pratyeyapratyayākhyo hi jñāpyajñāpakabhāvaḥ. sa ca sambandhāntarpūrvakam hastihastipakāder iva sambandhāntaram antareṇa jñāpyajñāpakabhāvādrṣṭer iti bhāvaḥ. evaṃ pakṣāntarāṇi nirākṛtya pauraṣeyasaṃketa eva sambandha iti vaktum tatra lokadrṣṭam hetum āha: yojaka iti... The recognition of saṃketa as the crucial factor that links words and meaning allies the Parākhyā with the Naiyāyikas and Vaiśeṣikas (see Vaiśeṣikasūtra 7.2.15–24 [Candrānanda's text] quoted, discussed and translated by HOUBEN, 1995:48–53).

⁶⁶⁴Literally 'In that case [of writing] a connector is remembered' or perhaps 'commemorated'; but it seems unlikely that the text refers to a tradition or myth about a particular creator of writing. Presumably the redactor was familiar with the use of a variety of scripts and regarded it as obvious that script was conventional (as it is accepted to be by Kumārila, for see Śloka-vārttika śabdānityatādhikaraṇa 9), and so what must instead be meant is that there must have been a creator. Note that the Paṇḍikā's text has dropped verses 20–1, so that it cannot help us here to reconstruct the intended argument.

Pratoda spoke:

The world has [always] been just as it is; convention too must [always] have been just as it is. Now a [supposititious] creator of convention could not [have created it] either gradually or all at once.⁶⁶⁵ (25)

Prakāśa spoke:

Just as this universe was created all at once by the will [of the creator], so too was the convention created; people learnt it by His will. (26)

Since creatures (jagat) are not capable of independent action, being occluded by the darkness of the bonds, whatever action is found in them is produced by Him, and so (yataḥ tena) Śarva was the creator of the convention [that connects words with their meanings in language], since he is established to be the root cause. And the conventions of mantras too were forged by Him alone. (27–8)

These many [conventions] which are established in this system (atra) are indicated by the word 'matrix' (mātrkāpadalakṣitāḥ).⁶⁶⁶ The base (prakṛtiḥ) [of the central mantras] in this system (atra) is the final phoneme [namely HA];⁶⁶⁷ the suffix (pratyayaḥ) is that by which the head-ornament is formed [i.e. it is the anusvāra or candrabindu] (vyaktaśekharaḥ);⁶⁶⁸ the infix (āgamaḥ) is that which stands upon the end of

⁶⁶⁶ In the following section (up to 6:34), the composition of mantras is homologised with grammatical analysis of worldly language. The details are not entirely clear to me, but I assume that the text is describing the central bījamantras of the cult, viz. the śivamantra and then HĪM, HEM, etc. for the brahmantras, and HĪM, HAIM, etc. for the aṅgamantras. This is assuming that their base (prakṛti) is H, as in the Sārdhatrīśatikālottara, but see the next footnote.

⁶⁶⁷ I assume that the last phoneme is HA on the grounds that the grounds that 6:4 speaks of their being forty-nine phonemes. But it is possible that KṢA, although not counted earlier, was held to be the final phoneme by the author of the Parākhya. The base for the principal bījamantras is commonly H, following the Kālottara tradition (see, e.g., Sārdhatrīśatikālottara 1:9); but in the Kiraṇa these central bījas are built up from KṢM (or KṢMY) in 12:4–9 (see fn. 674 on p. 332 below).

⁶⁶⁸ ex conj. ACHARYA. The transmitted vyaktaseśvaraḥ could perhaps be defended: 'the suffix is that by which [the particular apu] which is subservient to the Lord is made manifest'. In other words it could be a statement to the effect that the base is invariable but the suffix is what distinctively expresses the various mantras. But if it were such a statement, it would not add any element to the śivamantra, which is what 6:31 tells us is here being described. It would also mean that no reference would be made to the nasalisation of the mantra, though this need not be problematic since the addition of nasalisation could be treated as self-evident (cf. Sārdhatrīśatikālottara 1:10ab anusvāro bhaven netraṃ sarveṣāṃ copari sthitāḥ).

[i.e. after] the fifth, which [in turn] is placed upon the sound that is the result of the action [upon itself] of vṛddhi (vṛddhivṛttadhvanisthitāḥ).⁶⁶⁹ Going beyond that is the power;⁶⁷⁰ disappearance of sound (lopaḥ) is that ultimate state. (29–30)

Compounding (samāsaḥ) is the enunciation of the mantra (taduccāraḥ). [This is the] definition of the mantra which is called Śiva.⁶⁷¹

⁶⁶⁹This is the suggestion of Dr. ACHARYA. The sound after the fifth is the sixth vowel, Ū; it is followed by the vowel produced by vṛddhi of itself, namely AU. Thus the mūla-mantra or śivamantra that results is probably either KṢŪAUM or HŪAUM. One could understand pañcamāntasthaḥ to mean 'the phoneme at the end of the fifth [group of consonants, viz. M]', thus giving us a base of HM or KṢM (as in the Kiraṇa), but this would leave us without vowels for the śivamantra, unless one is somehow contained in vṛddhivṛttidhvanisthitāḥ. The mūlamantra HŪAUM is what results from one of the more natural interpretations of Sārdhatrīśatikālottara 1:11 mentioned and rejected by Rāmakaṇṭha:

śivaṃ tat tu vijānīyaṃ mantraṃ mūrtiṃ sadāśivam.

The interpretation in question is as follows (Sārdhatrīśatikālottaravṛtti pp. 21–2):

anye tu 'pañcamam ākāśaṃ, tadvācakatvād yat pañcamam hakārabījam uktam, tasmin ṣaṣṭhaṃ ūkāraṃ trayodaśāntaṃ ca ṣoḍaśakalāsāṅkhye-yaukāraṃ niyojayet. bindus tatra "sarveṣāṃ copari sthitāḥ" ityanenaiva siddhaḥ' iti vyācakṣate.

Others comment as follows: 'The fifth designates ether [viz. H], because it expresses that. He should join the sixth [vowel, namely] Ū, and the one after the thirteenth, [namely] AU, [as] numbered among the sixteen divisions [that are the vowels, and not thirteenth in the list from which the 'neuter' vowels have been removed] onto that fifth, which is taught to be the bīja H. It is proven that the anusvāra is [to be joined] to that by [the teaching] "and it rests upon them all" [Sārdhatrīśatikālottara 1:10b].'

⁶⁷⁰Here I cannot identify some category of grammar that is being homologised with something in the mantra. The text appears to be describing a further ascent in the course of the resorption of the sound back into its subtle cause. Other tantras present more complex sequences: ... bindu→nāda→nādānta→śakti and beyond, but, as we have seen above (6:1–6 and fn. 648 on p. 323), the Parākhyā's account of the upper reaches of sound appears archaic in its simplicity. For more complex accounts see Svacchanda 4:263–7a and Somaśambhupaddhati nirvāṇadīkṣāvidhi 231–7b, richly annotated with parallels by BRUNNER (1977:380–96). See also PADOUX 1992:404–11.

⁶⁷¹This is I think the intended sense, but śivākhyam actually qualifies lakṣaṇam. I

Defined (lakṣitaḥ) by this 'grammar' (lakṣaṇena), [it is] He [that] grants all desires. (31)

[The base] thus [mentioned above] placed upon the short vowels becomes SADYOMŪRTI (mūrti),⁶⁷² VĀMADEVA (*guhya*⁶⁷³), AGHORA, TAT-PURUṢA (nara), ĪSĀNA.⁶⁷⁴ Placed upon the long [vowels]⁶⁷⁵ it becomes the aṅgamantras: the HṚDAYA, the ŚĪRAS, together with the ŚĪKHĀ and the KAVACA, and the ASTRA.⁶⁷⁶ (32–33a) suppose that the author wished to write śivākhyamantralakṣaṇam, but that he split it in the middle to avoid the metrical solecism of a string of iambi. Cf. 2:35d.

⁶⁷²*ex conj.* Note that SADYOJĀTA is said to be the Lord's mūrti in 2:85a, and that the name SADYOMŪRTI is preferred (over SADYOJĀTA) in Parākhyā 2:94c–95 and in Mṛgendravidyāpāda 3:13, in both of which a nirvacana of the name is given.

⁶⁷³*ex conj.* Cf. Parākhyā 2:93c–94b.

⁶⁷⁴We may assume that the text is referring to the brahmamantras, for compare Sārdhatrīśatikālottara 1:9cd brahmāṇi hrasvā proktāni dīrghā hy aṅgāni ṣaṇmukha (where hrasvā and dīrghā may have been intended as neuter plurals) and Kiraṇa 12:9a, for which see below. The short vowels are not here those ordinarily considered short by grammarians but the odd-numbered vowels, excluding the so-called 'neuter' ones (ṛ, ṝ, ḷ and ḹ). This is discussed at length by Rāmakaṇṭha in his Sārdhatrīśatikālottaravṛtti ad 1:9c–10b (pp. 18–20) and is made implicitly clear by Kiraṇa 12:8–9a (though here, as remarked in fn. 667 on p. 330 above, the base is KṢM not HA):

dvitīyena caturthena ṣaṣṭhadvādaśakena tu ṣoḍaśena vibhinno 'yam bhavet kūṭo 'ṅgapāṇcakam hrasvā brahmāṇi vijñeyā

'The kūṭa [viz. KṢM*] combined (vibhinnaḥ) with Ā (dvitīyena), Ī (caturthena), Ū (ṣaṣṭha-), AI (-dvādaśakena), and AḤ (ṣoḍaśena) gives the [bījas of the] five aṅgamantras. [The] short [versions of these, viz. the kūṭa combined with A, I, U, E, O] are the [bījas of the five] brahmamantras.'

*Though the kūṭa has been defined by Kiraṇa 11:5b to be kṣa, Rāmakaṇṭha explains (in his Kiraṇavṛtti ad 12:8) that it has been redefined for the purposes of this chapter of the Kiraṇa as KṢM by 12:4cd: karṇikāyāṃ nyaset kūṭaṃ kālayugmāntasaṃsthitam. Here kāla is code for makāra; but Rāmakaṇṭha's analysis of -yugmāntastham has been damaged in transmission (IFP MS T. 290, p. 149). Professor SANDERSON, aware of Rāmakaṇṭha's interpretation (in the damaged form in which it survives) has proposed (letter of 14.xi.98) that it is more natural to divide kālayug ('with M') māntasaṃsthitam ('on that which is after M [viz. Y]'), and so to interpret the mantra-base to be KṢMY rather than KṢM.

⁶⁷⁵As will be clear from the previous footnote, just as the short vowels are not those usually called short by grammarians, so too the long vowels are not those ordinarily called long. The vowels in question here are those listed in Kiraṇa 12:8, quoted immediately above.

⁶⁷⁶*ex conj.* Slightly closer to our transmitted syllables would be hṛc chikhā suśivaṃ balam (where SUŚIVA would be a synonym for the 'head'-mantra, as in 3:75, and bala stands, as in Mṛgendrakriyāpāda 3:10 and 3:20, for KAVACA); but this order would give us the wrong vowels for the aṅgamantras. Dr. ACHARYA has pointed out to me that what we have is comparable to a compressed list of aṅgamantras in the unpublished ancient Saurasaṃhitā of which he is preparing an edition (2:30c): hṛc chirah saśikhā-varma. On the strength of this parallel, I could perhaps also have adopted hṛc chirah saśikhābalaṃ. A further problem with this listing is that it is implicit that the ASTRA is assigned a long vowel, whereas we expect it, on the basis of parallels, to terminate in aḥ (see Sārdhatrīśatikālottara 1:10: saṃsargam bhaved aṣṭam anusvāravivarjitam, and see also Kiraṇa 12:8). It is possible that the redactor of the Parākhya intended this too but thought that it did not need specifying, or that he considered aḥ to be one of the long vowels, or that the following syllables (cādhō) mask a corruption that would have specified that aḥ should be the termination of the ASTRA (but see the following note for the interpretation offered of adhah).

[The base] together with R placed below it (adho yuto reṇa) and with the fourth [vowel, namely ī] with an anusvāra: this is the mantra of the Vidyēśvaras when expanded by [adding their respective] names at the end.⁶⁷⁷ (32–3)

⁶⁷⁷Cf. Kiraṇa 12:10c–11b:

binduyuktam anantasya vācakatvena saṃsthitam

In the Kiraṇa this mantra (HRĪM) alone is that of Ananta only, and different mantras for each of the remaining Vidyēśvaras are given in the subsequent verses. My interpretation—that the Parākhya uses only the seed-syllable HRĪM and then adds the name of the intended Vidyēśvara, presumably in the dative—is a guess, but it is similar to what we find in Mṛgendrakriyāpāda 1:6ab: svābhīdhānam caturthyantam vāgīśa-patidighṛtām..., '[The mantras] of the Vidyēśvaras (vāgīśa), the Gaṇeśvaras (pati), the Lokapālas... [consist of] their own name[s] ending in the dative'. In the Mataṅga (kriyāpāda 1:64c–69b) we find padas 6–13 in its word-division of the VYOMAVYĀPIN mantra (all of which have dative endings) assigned to the Vidyēśvaras.

One might have expected some such core mantras of the Saiddhāntika cult to be the same in all the early Siddhāntas; but this appears not to have been the case. As Trilocanaśiva remarks in his Siddhāntasamuccaya (IFP T. 206, p. 94): ...mantrādhvā tu kvacin netraravajitāṅgabrahmaśivamantrātmā, kvacin navavyūhamantrarūpaḥ. śivādi-mantrāś ca pratitantram bhidyante. na ca mantrabhedaḥ kriyābhedaś ca tantravivirodhasya hetuḥ... In fact the central mantra-system varies not only from tantra to tantra but also from part to part of the Niśvāsa: thus the main mantra-system of the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha, the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha, the Mataṅga and the Niśvāsa guhyasūtra (16 and 17, ff. 110ff) also teaches a mantra-system of which the ten-syllabled VIDYĀ is the central mantra. The mantra-system of the Niśvāsa uttarasūtra is the NAVĀTMAN, a mantra consisting of nine seeds (bīja), while in the Niśvāsa mūlasūtra it is that of a bījamantra that the text refers to by the name TATTVA (e.g. in 1:19 and 7:7, ff. 19^r and 20^r) but that may be the same as the PRĀSĀDA (also called PRASĀDA), the central mantra of the Kālottara scriptures, whose mantra-system has been adopted in the

This mantra (*manuḥ*⁶⁷⁸) in this system (atra) is one, five, and three of the principal mantras (?). May it not be accepted to be expressive of meaning (*kiṃ nāpto*⁶⁷⁹ vācakatvena) like the [ordinary non-mantric] word 'cow'? (34)

Thus these [mantras] are to be understood to be equipped with inflections (*sajātayaḥ*⁶⁸⁰), made up of phonemes (varṇagāḥ), created by Śiva. They end in the words NAMAḤ, SVĀHĀ, VAṢAṬ, VAUṢAṬ, HUM and PHAṬ. (35)

NAMAḤ and SVĀHĀ are suited [respectively] for recitation and for oblation; VAṢAṬ is fitting (hitā) for filling (āpyāyane);⁶⁸¹ VAUṢAṬ is for great paddhati-literature. (Note that both Niśvāsa mūlasūtra 6 and Sārdhatrisatikālottara 19 share verses detailing eight inflections of the basic bījamantra.)

The use of adhaḥ (unless cādhō is an error for ca+atho or for something else) recalls the way bīja-mantras are written (at least in Nepalese MSS), successive consonants in these clusters being written beneath one another. The usage is to be found in Kiraṇa 12:15 (which, as reconstructed by VIVANTI partly on the basis of Rāmakaṇṭha's commentary, gives the mantra YLOṢ for the Vidyēśvara Trimūrti):

bhāntādhaḥ sthito rānto dvādaśāntena bheditaḥ bindunā bhūṣito mūrdhni trimūrter vācako mataḥ.

⁶⁷⁸For other instances of such a usage of the term see, e.g., Kiraṇa 26:7b, 29:7b, 56:54b, Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 21:21c and 27d, and Mṛgendrakriyāpāda 1:1 and commentary ad loc. It is possible however that it is code for the number fourteen. The verse is obscure to me. The first half-line could be speaking about the same base being used to form the all the principal bījamantras, the 'one' being the śivamantra and the 'five' referring to the two groups of five brahmamantras and five aṅgamantras; but the eight Vidyēśvaras and the trikaḥ are left unaccounted for, unless we read 'five' a third time and add it to the three. No more likely is the possibility that the half-line speaks only of HRĪṢ: 'This is the one mantra among the principal mantras which is five and threefold [i.e. which is used eight times, once for each of the Vidyēśvaras.]'

⁶⁷⁹A tentative conjecture of Dr. ACHARYA.

⁶⁸⁰*ex conj.* Jāti is a technical term usually reserved for words such as namaḥ that are added to the ends of mantras (e.g. in the end of the description of the damanotsava in the Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati quoted by BRUNNER 1968:345), but here, as is evident from 6:37, to be applied also to elements that are added to the beginning.

Here one could consider emending instead to ṣaḍ jātayaḥ, since this is a standard list of six mantra terminations. (The reading of MSS C and E reveal that we must correct svadhā to tathā to yield a list of six in ṣaṣṭhavarga 21 of the Śaivāgamapari-bhāṣāmañjarī.)

⁶⁸¹For B's correction to this form, proposed independently by ACHARYA, cf. Svacchanda 6:96a vaṣaḍ āpyāyane śastaṃ, 6:96a, which is quoted in the Tantrāloka viveka ad 1:117-22 with the reading śastaḥ. In our passage VAṢAṬ is treated as feminine, presumably because that is the gender of the noun jāti. (In Pūrva-Kāmika 2:165ab, it

oblation; HUM is for recitation (śāstre) and PHAṬ for the destruction of enemies. (36)

Since it nourishes the sounds of the mantra, therefore it causes its sounds to 'open'.⁶⁸² These are known as the final *jāti*s; OM is the jāti [that is placed] at the beginning. (37)

In due order (kramāt) [a mantra has] its power⁶⁸³ at the beginning and at the end and in the middle [too] is situated its power. This [power] that is in the body of the mantra is known by those who know mantras to be [thus] threefold. (38)

This power, together with its functions(?), is yoked by the practitioner (sādhakena) at the beginning [of a ritual act(?)] (āditah). It is in seed-syllables, in clusters of phonemes, in words and sentences. The power does not increase because of its sounds (?), †tasyātra phalasamsthite†. (39)

Pratoda spoke:

Since a mantra is of the nature of language (śabdātmakah), that which defines language [viz. grammar] must be a property of that [mantra] (tatsvaṃ śabdasya lakṣaṇam). Therefore [a mantra] may be said to be one in which the words are correct (sādhūśabdaḥ), or [it may be] incorrect (asādhuh) [if] devoid of those [scil. correct words] (tadbahiḥsthitah). (40)

Prakāśa spoke:

If words are known to be correct or incorrect on the basis of something that defines them [viz. grammar] (lakṣaṇena), then is that [a property that is] innate in them or is it something else [outside them] (tat kiṃ nijam athānyad vā)? If it is [an innate property of] their own (yadi svam), then it would be pointless (tan nirarthakam).⁶⁸⁴ (41)

If it is something else outside, then it would have to be [defined] by other words, which have bases and suffixes and so forth. And since these [other words] share the common property of being words [and would therefore themselves require defining], an infinite regress would result. (42)

Otherwise [you might accept that] (athavā) without [having to be is implied that VAṢAṬ is masculine: svāhā namaś ca śeṣās ca strīklībapuruṣātmakāḥ.) For other lists of the functions of these *jāti*s see Kiraṇa 16:41–2 and that quoted in GOODALL 1998:xxvi, fn. 58.

⁶⁸³ The reading tacchaktir could however be an error for tajjātir and the result of confusion because of the proximity of the word śaktir.

⁶⁸⁴ Perhaps what is meant is that it would be pointless to postulate the existence of some invisible property inseparably part of each word that validated it. One might as well instead concede each word to be self-validating.

validated by] that [which defines it] (tad vinā) a word (saḥ) may cause one to understand the meaning that it is intended to express (vācya-padārthapratipādakaḥ). We directly observe that both the [correct] word go and the [incorrect] word gāvi convey their meaning.⁶⁸⁵ (43)

Pratoda spoke:

These words go, gāvi, etc., how can they be denoters of their meaning for us⁶⁸⁶ if it is not because of that [i.e. because of the grammar that defines words] (yadi no tena) that meanings are properly conveyed? (44)

Prakāśa spoke:

All words that are the basis of worldly interaction (*vyavahārāni-bandhanaḥ*⁶⁸⁷) are linked with conventions. Some meaning[s] may be contrived from a [single] vowel [or phoneme beginning with a] consonant⁶⁸⁸ [as a] word. (45)

This [meaning, then,] can be understood from the [particular word] that expresses it (*vācakena*⁶⁸⁹) in accordance with different contexts (anyasaṅgataḥ). [The words] 'a' and 'ka' have the meanings [respectively of] Viṣṇu and Brahmā; [the words] 'ka' and 'kha' have the meanings ether

⁶⁸⁵ ex conj. Gāvī is the first example in a list of *apaśabdā*s of the word go given in the Paspasāhnikā of Patañjali's Mahābhāṣya: ekaikasya śabdasya bahavo 'pabhraṃśāḥ. tadyathā gaur ity asya śabdasya gāvī, goṇī, gotā, gopotaliketyevamādayo bahavo 'pabhraṃśāḥ (vol. 1, p.2, lines 23–5 of KIELHORN's edition). Metre requires that we read gāvi and not, as in the Mahābhāṣya, gāvī.

The same example is discussed in later literature too; cf., e.g., Śābarabhāṣya 1.3.8.24 (with Tantravārttika ad loc.), Part 1, p.252–3: gaur gāvī goṇī gopotalikā ityevamādayaḥ śabdā udāharaṇam. gośabdo yathā sāsānādimati pramāṇam, kiṃ tathā gāvīdayo 'py uta neti sandehaḥ. kim atraikaḥ śabdo 'vicchinnaṇāpāraṃparyo 'rthābhīdhāyī, itare 'pabhraṃśāḥ, uta sarve 'nādayaḥ? sarva iti brūmaḥ. kutaḥ? pratyayāt. pratīyate hi gāvīyādibhyaḥ sāsānādimān arthaḥ. Cf. also Śloka-vārttika śabdānityatādhi-karaṇa 276.

⁶⁸⁶ ex conj. Instead of conjecturing katham no, we could assume corruption of katamāḥ: 'which of them are [really] the denoters of their meaning?' Whether katham or katamāḥ is more appropriate depends on how one interprets Prakāśa's reply: is he stating that it is by saṅketa that a given word conveys a given meaning, or is he giving examples of particular words that are conventionally linked to certain meanings and then pointing at those to say that they are instances of denoters of meaning?

⁶⁸⁹ ex conj. Without this emendation (retaining M^v's vācako na) the sentence might perhaps be interpreted: 'That then, unaccompanied by anything else, is to be understood to be that which conveys meaning.' But the point of the following examples seems to be to underline the arbitrariness of the meanings which convention can assign to particular sounds: the meanings can be conveyed by other words.

But 'a', 'mā', 'no' and 'na' (amānonāḥ) [can be used] in the sense of a negation (pratiṣedhe); [and] sometimes⁶⁹⁰ [na is] three short [syllables, and mā is] three long [syllables] (trilaghus triguruḥ kvacit). †...†.⁶⁹¹ (47)

Its grammar (tatsvalakṣma) has been taught by a sage; he has expounded [its] convention[s].⁶⁹² In the same way the conventions of the śivamantra, the aṅgamantras and the brahmamantras were created by Śiva. (48)

It was established with consonants together with vowels (sasvarair akṣaraiḥ), with consonant clusters [without vowels] (kūṭaiḥ), with words, with sentences. Even in the Veda such conventions are set forth as [those of] svarga and Urvaśī.⁶⁹³ (49)

We can create conventions linking words to meanings; †[but] this is not possible in the case of elements of mantras (na jātiṣu)†.⁶⁹⁴ Mantras, ⁶⁹⁰I.e. in metrical literature. The example probably derives from the Śābarabhāṣya ad 1.1.5 (p. 181 of Bṛhātī edition): ... tathā makāreṇa apiṅgalasya na sarvagurus trikaḥ pratīyeta.

⁶⁹¹Dr. ACHARYA has suggested to me that this line could be speaking about technical Mīmāṃsaka senses of prakṛti and pratyaya. If we were to emend to prakṛtipratyayau 'nyārthau vedādimatacoditau (assuming a double sandhi), it might be interpreted thus: '[The words] prakṛti and pratyaya are taught by Mīmāṃsakas to have other meanings [than those which are common].' The reason for choosing to mention the Mīmāṃsakas' technical senses of these words (for after all other thinkers, for instance the Sāṅkhyas, have technical senses of these particular words) would be that it is the Mīmāṃsakas who contest the conventionality of language.

⁶⁹³Cf. Pramāṇavārttika 1:320ab: svargorvaśyādiśabdaś ca dṛṣṭo 'rūḍhārthavācakaḥ. 'We find [in the Veda] words such as svarga and Urvaśī that [according to exegetes] express meanings that are not [the] conventional [ones known in the world].' This may be the source of Parākhya 6:49ab, which may appear to be saying the reverse, but Dharmakīrti's auto-commentary reveals that he is speaking of the use in the Veda of words that are interpreted as having senses that are unknown in worldly usage.

which have been defined above, [are used] in the sense of what they mean (arthe) because of Śiva's convention. (50)

Pratoda spoke:

Mantras are produced from the palate and such [other places of articulation in the mouth], and since they are [thus] composed of phonemes (varṇātmakāḥ), they are the same as [words,] which share the same phonemes. Mantras are not distinct from those (na mantras tadviśeṣataḥ). (51)

Prakāśa spoke:

The same quality of having solid form⁶⁹⁵ is observed in both a gem and a rock; nevertheless one of them has [the power to give] great rewards (mahāphalam) because it is possessed of fiery power (tejaḥśaktisamāyogāt). (52)

In the same way [the quality of being a] word⁶⁹⁶ is common [to both a mantra and to an ordinary word of the language], and yet (tathāpi) one of them has [the power to give] great rewards. Its rewards are in many functions (bahukṛtyeṣu), since those are directly observed to be accomplished by it.⁶⁹⁷ (53)

In pulling out splinters, in possession by fevers, in subduing Nāgas, spirits and fevers (nāgabdhūtajvarakṣaye), in subjecting others to one's will, attracting others, inspiring hatred, dispelling, and destroying poison (vaśyākaraṇavidveṣaproccāṭaviṣanāśane)—and so we see its fruit in visible cases (tad dṛṣṭe tatphalam dṛṣṭam) and therefore we can infer (meyam) [that mantras can accomplish also] the supreme reward [of liberation]. (54–55b)

If it is sometimes⁶⁹⁸ true (tathyam) and [sometimes] false (mithyā) [i.e. if mantras sometimes produce results and sometimes do not], then, since there is [then] discrepancy (vyabhicāre), the [mantra's power to produce its] reward is disproved (gatam). For what is established [sometimes] to hold true [and sometimes] not to hold true (tathyam sthitam atathyam yat) cannot be the result of that [mantra] (tatphalam), because of the ⁶⁹⁵The compound kāṭhinyarūpatā seems to contain an illogical bahuvrīhi and one could consider emending to kāṭhinarūpatā.

⁶⁹⁶I have translated śabdaḥ as though it were śabdatā, because that is what the argument seems to require.

⁶⁹⁷More literally 'since they are directly observed to be things which have that [viz. mantra] as that which accomplishes them.'

⁶⁹⁸Understanding kiñcit as if it were kvacit, which may not be possible.

insufficiency [of the mantra as a cause] (vaikalyāt). (55c-56b)

But it is not observed to be random (kādācitkaṃ) as a result of insufficiency [i.e., if there is insufficiency, then the result is not achieved], just as in the case of the appeasement of a spirit that possesses someone (grahaśāntivat).⁶⁹⁹ (56cd)

The property of being a mantra (mantratvam) that belongs to Śiva (śivasamśrayam) is [to be accounted for] because it has the properties of causing to think and saving (mananatrāṇadharmitvāt).⁷⁰⁰ Because they are conjoined with Him and with [His] power, their mantratva is of two kinds (ubhayātmakam).⁷⁰¹ (57)

The connection between that which is expressed and that which expresses [viz. the mantra] (vācyavācakasambandhaḥ) is created by Him (tatkṛptaḥ) for the sake of accomplishing the fruits [of mantras] (phalahetutaḥ). And [so], since the fruit has Him as its agent, Śiva resides in the mantra (mantrasthitaḥ).⁷⁰² (58)

Pratoda spoke:

The deity must be no more than the word; that which [purportedly] expresses is not [in fact] different from it. And all words (sarvaśabdo 'pi) are necessarily auxiliaries to the rite (kriyāṅgaḥ). The fruit [therefore—e.g. svarga—] is that of the rite.⁷⁰³ (59)

⁶⁹⁹I assume that Prakāśa means that no randomness is perceived in appeasing spirits (they are appeased if the right procedure is correctly followed, but not if there is any deficiency), but it is conceivable that he means that randomness is indeed perceived when such appeasement is attempted.

⁷⁰⁰For similar nirvacanas, see the apparatus here. The list is not exhaustive.

⁷⁰²One might also consider the possibility that mantraḥ sthitaḥ (of which the transmitted form is an orthographic variant) is intended: 'Śiva is established to be the mantra'.

⁷⁰³This Mīmāṃsaka objection is to be found in the Mṛgendravṛtti ad vidyāpāda 1:7 and is presented in greater detail by Trilocanaśiva in his Siddhāntasamuccaya, after which follows his commentary on Prakāśa's response which I have quoted in the next footnote. Since Trilocanaśiva's statement of the objection appears to be a commentary on Pratoda's question, I quote it below (IFP MSS T. 284 [=A], p. 134-5, T. 206 [=B], pp. 63, and GOML R 14394 [=C], pp. 7-8):

is ordered in words and sentences (padavākyagatakramaḥ) [can]not [be] devoid of meaning (artharahitaḥ). (60)

And [so] that which is denoted (vācyaḥ) [must be] separate from that which denotes it (vācakād bhinnāḥ), just as is the case with words like 'Devadatta' [for which there are corresponding entities that are denoted]. And what denoting word, according to you (te), could cause understanding (pratyeti)⁷⁰⁵ [though being itself] devoid of [a corresponding] meaning? (61)

Therefore the deity is certainly what is denoted (vācyā) [and] that [is] distinct from that which denotes it (sā vācakād bhinnā), since we understand words that qualify it (viśeṣaṇaṃ yatas tasyāḥ . . . pratipannam), expressing its actions and form (karmarūpābhidhāyakam). And the deity is especially praised in such sentences of the Veda because [it is] through praise [that] the deity (sā) becomes attentive (abhimukhī bhavet).⁷⁰⁶ (62-3)

You may say that [such] qualifying words applied to the deity are because of arthavāda. [But, we reply, even] if these [qualifying words] (tat) [were understood to be] absolutely true (paramārthena), what sort of contradiction would arise? (64)

Pratoda spoke:

There is a contradiction, since the deity, in [your] doctrine (mate), is taught by scripture (śrūyate) to be corporeal (mūrtā): since it is corporeal, how can it then be close by (sānnidhyaṃ sā katham vrajet) in many sacrifices?⁷⁰⁷ (65)

[And] if this deity is not corporeal, then it cannot be that which accomplishes the purpose of the worship. Therefore it must be of words because of the arguments based on these two contradictions (virodhadvayayuktitaḥ). (66)

Prakāśa spoke:

- °saubharyādivat] AC; °saubhāryādivat B • yugapad aneka°]
 - BC; yutabataneka° A

⁷⁰⁵ As above in 6:21b, this form is used with causative sense. Alternatively one could emend kaḥ to kaṃ and understand 'And what [object], according to you, could a denoting word that was devoid of [a corresponding] meaning cause one to understand?'

⁷⁰⁶ The enjambement is awkward, but we have seen elsewhere that the author of the Parākhya occasionally aspires to the high kārikā style of which this would be typical (see introduction, p. lxxix).

⁷⁰⁷ Cf., for the argumentation here, Mṛgendravidyāpāda 1:8ff.

The [existence of the] deity is attested in scripture. From that [deity one attains] the great reward. Because of his being endowed with great power he will accordingly be present (sthāsyati) at [every] sacrifice. (67)

Just as for the followers of the Vedānta (vedāntavādinām) His embodiments are infinite,⁷⁰⁸ so too [here in the Śaiva Siddhānta] He has the power to shine forth His embodiments for the sake of [accomplishing] the rituals (kriyārtham).⁷⁰⁹ (68)

That strength [of His continues to be a part] of [the deity] who has taken on the form of sound (tad vīryam śabdasaṁsthāyāḥ). His own nature does not alter (tatsvabhāvo na hanyate). He approaches those [sacrifices] (tatra sānnidhyatām iyāt) [when called] by means of a word that expresses a summons (āhūtīvācīśabdena).⁷¹⁰ (69)

And so the fruit is produced by the rite (kriyājanyam), [but] in fact (tathyam) it is dependent on the deity (tad devatāśrayam): the action [of the rite] (bhāvaḥ) is produced by the deity (devatāvihitaḥ)⁷¹¹ [and] the deity resides in the mantras (mantrasaṁśrayā). (70)

Otherwise there would not be the two types of action (nānyathā dvidivho bhāvaḥ), one directed towards the attainment of a goal and the other not (kāmākāmaṇilakṣitaḥ).⁷¹² Now if this action (sa ca bhāvaḥ) is an auxiliary to [the principal] action (kriyāṅgaḥ), then the fruit appropriate to it is of that [principal action] (tasyās taducitaṁ phalam). But if it is the principal [rite] (prādhānyena sthito vā syāt), then it is [itself] in control (prabhuḥ) with regard to the whole [body of subsidiary rites] (sarvasva-viṣaye). (71–72b)

⁷⁰⁸ ex conj. ISAACSON. The conjecture is tentative, but seems to me preferable to, for example, anantatvāt tanugrahaḥ, 'because of the infinitude [of His power] He takes on bodies', or anantas tadanugrahaḥ, 'His grace is infinite'. Another possibility, suggested to me by Dr. ACHARYA, was to read anantatvaṁ tanugrahaḥ and to interpret: '[He is both] infinite [and yet He] takes on bodies'. Such ideas would not be particularly distinctive of Vedāntavādins.

⁷⁰⁹ The final cadence is unmetrical, and one could therefore consider emending, with B, to °vibhājane, but see introduction, p. lxxxvi.

⁷¹² The difference between a mukhya and a gaṇa rite (bhāva) depends on whether the bhāva is or is not directly connected with the fruit. What might be meant here, therefore, is that a bhāva may be kāmya if it is mukhya, but if it is subservient to another bhāva (i.e. if it is gaṇa) then it is not kāmya.

The one who coordinates these [actions] (teṣāṃ saṃyojakāḥ) is the most important [factor in the attainment of the fruit], since it is by him that these are employed (yena te tena yojitāḥ). They are demonstrated to have their own particular functions (svavyāpārāḥ pradṛśyante); they are not capable of [performing] the coordination which belongs to the creator. The world praises (praśaṃsati) Him who is the creator (kartā) of all things. (72c-73)

Therefore the action is not the most important [factor in the attainment of the fruit]: the deity is the one who joins [the soul] to the fruit [of the rite]. [Someone might argue:] let rather the [individual] soul be the crucial factor in this (mukhyo naro 'stu vā tatra): why bother with other supposititious [entities]? (74)

[We answer that:] one factor that links the rite with that [fruit] (ekas tatra kriyāyogaḥ)⁷¹³ is dependent on the agent who is the cause; another is bound by the instruments [required in the rite]; another depends on the causes.⁷¹⁴ (75)

Therefore (tena) if you say (atha) 'we do not perceive the deity', for [the existence of] which there is no compelling ground (yanniyamo nāsti), [we reply:] how then do you perceive the heaven (svargaḥ) that is [according to you] brought about [as the fruit] by a ritual? (76)

Just as pleasure of him [who performed the rite] (tatprītiḥ) [which you claim to be referred to by] the word svarga (svargaśabdena) is not established as certain fact for you (niścītā na te), [so too,] then, there is no certain knowledge of the Creator, of His body, of His senses. (77)

The fruit of that rite, which is not amenable to the senses (parokṣam), must be believed in (pratipattavyam) in accordance with His word (tad-vākyāt), and therefore this [deity] (sā) must be understood to be exactly as has been taught there [viz. in scripture, which is His word].⁷¹⁵ Thus the ritual [of the cult] is of God (ity aiśvarī kriyā). (78)

[Since] all [mantras] that are characterised as divya and adivya (divyādivyopalakṣitāḥ)⁷¹⁶ [and that are used] in [everyday rites, such as]

⁷¹³I am not convinced by my translation here of kriyāyogaḥ.

⁷¹⁴It is not clear to me what other causes are intended since the agent and instruments have already been mentioned. Perhaps one should consider emending 74cd to read: anyo 'dhikarāṇāyattaḥ karaṇāpekṣayāparaḥ. 'another depends on the locus; another on the instruments'.

⁷¹⁵*ex conj.* The interpretation of this verse is tentative; the pronouns could be understood differently.

⁷¹⁶It is not clear to me what these labels signify.

removing demons, fevers, poisons [and] in other power-seeking rites of adepts (?) (siddhayogeṣu)⁷¹⁷ [have been] directly perceived together with the tasks that they perform,⁷¹⁸ therefore (tena) mantras should be used (yojyāḥ) in [the performance of] regular and occasional obligatory rites (nityanaimittike) [too] †plavādiṣu†.⁷¹⁹ (79)

[Thus] the vidyāpāda was taught to me by Śiva (apūṛṇendumaulinā), complete with the four pieces of jewellery that are its padārthas (artha-māṇikyaiḥ),⁷²⁰ which are clusters of the gems that are its realities (vastu-ratnasamcayaiḥ). (80)

Now this topic called 'liberation'⁷²¹ is to be investigated in its entirety. And I shall [now] describe the procedure of rituals (kriyākramam), ⁷¹⁷It is not clear to me what this label signifies.

⁷¹⁸This assumes an aśā double sandhi of savyāpārāḥ and akhilāḥ. Cf. introduction, p. lxxxiii.

⁷¹⁹Dr. ACHARYA has suggested to me that one could consider emendation to savādiṣu, 'in sacrifices and so forth'.

⁷²⁰*ex conj.* ISAACSON. These are paśu, īśvara, vidyā, and yoni, the first four padārthas of the list of five given in 1:5. The fifth, mukti, is to be the subject of the next chapters, as the next verse tells us. The dictionaries do not attest māṇikyā in the sense of 'piece of jewellery', but is evident from the qualification that follows that they cannot here be single gems. As I have argued (GOODALL 1998:lxiv–lxv, where I have quoted this verse, but at a time before I had been able to return to Mysore to puzzle out a crucial aḥṣara) this usage of the expression vidyāpāda may reflect that the Parākhya was divided into pādas or may have been unconsciously used in a way that allows this interpretation. Since the immediately following chapters are missing, we cannot tell whether they were once organised into a kriyāpāda and caryāpāda. Chapter 14 by itself might have formed the yogapāda (a single chapter in the Mṛgendra is so intended), but chapter 15 does not obviously belong to any of the pādas. What is evident is that the Parākhya has very systematically grouped the bulk of its doctrinal teachings in the first six chapters in such a way that they form a 'pāda' in the developed sense (of 'one of four large text-divisions') that we find implicit in the Mataṅga and the Mṛgendra. For a full discussion of the term pāda and its apparently earlier sense (of 'group of topics related by theme but not necessarily organised into a single text unit') see GOODALL 1998:lviii–lxv and 182–5.

⁷²¹*ex conj.* The transmitted text makes good sense but the cadence (the metrical unit whose laws are least frequently broken) is impossible. My conjecture assumes the use of the unfamiliar arthapada with the same sense as the familiar padārtha, by which it was then supplanted by some transmitter of the text. I know of no such usage elsewhere. If the text really used the expression arthapada, it is perhaps conceivable that it was a conscious echo of Nyāya terminology, for the fourth in the group of arthapadas enumerated in the Nyāyabhāṣya is adhigantavyaḥ [apavargaḥ] (ad 1.1.1, p. 2 of THAKUR's edition): heyam tasya nirvartakam hānam ātyantikam tasyopāyo 'dhi-gantavya ity etāni catvāry arthapadāni samyag buddhvā niḥśreyasam adhigacchati.

together with the occasions for use of [particular] mantras (samantra-viṣayam). (81)

Since (yat) this own definition of theirs has [now] been taught in full, therefore (tena) all these rites that are to be performed by means of mantras (mantrair vidhānaṃ nikhilaṃ vidheyaṃ ... tat) [and] that require little intellectual power (alpacittam) are here [i.e. in the following chapters] determined (atra ... niścitam);⁷²² they are the cause of the purification of souls' natures (bhāvaviśuddhihetuḥ). (82)

Thus the sixth chapter, a consideration of mantras, in the great tantra called the Supreme.

⁷²²*ex conj.* Both the interpretation and constitution of the text are most uncertain here. Perhaps particularly strained is the interpretation of the compound alpacittam. But it would not be inappropriate that the text should here imply that ritual is an easier path to liberation than the path of knowledge, which is for the gifted. Although Rāmakaṇṭha's commentary distorts the passage, this is plainly what is intended in the introduction to the kriyāpāda of the Mataṅga (kriyāpāda 1:1-2).

⁷²³*ex conj.* Reporting an emendation of the colophon may seem to suggest that I regard the colophons as a primary part of the text. I am aware that the form they have in M^y may be largely or entirely secondary. I have here expunged °padārtha-pratipādana° on the grounds that it must have been mechanically supplied by someone copying the structure of one of the other colophons: mantravicāra is not one of the padārthas enumerated in 1:5. A similarly garbled colophon has been corrected at the end of the fourteenth chapter.

PARĀKHYATANTRA CHAPTER XIV

Prakāśa spoke:

The series of injunctions about the places, postures, means of yoga, and about its practice; the excellence of the knowledge possessed by yogins; the description of the attainment of its fruits.⁷²⁴ (1)

In a lonely place (ekaliṅge),⁷²⁵ or a grove, or in an agreeable mountain cave, or in an earthen hut⁷²⁶ that is thoroughly secluded (suvibhakte),⁷²⁷ free from insects, draught and damp. (2)

⁷²⁴Some might prefer to take the first line as an irregular (because not neuter) samāhāradvanda: 'The places, postures, means of yoga, and the sequence of injunctions about its practice'. As in other chapters, we open with a programme verse: the places for yoga are covered in 14:2-3; the postures in 14:4-9; the treatment of 'means' may here refer to the definitions given of the aṅgas in 14:10-17b; the injunctions about its practice cover 14:17c and following. The supreme knowledge of yogins is spoken of in 14:83 and following. As for the account of the attainment of the fruits of yoga, that could be considered to begin with 14:90, or perhaps to the discussion introduced by Pratoda's question about the meaning of the expression 'yoga' in 14:95.

⁷²⁵This prescription is shared by Siddhayogeśvarīmatatantra 6:2 and Kubjikopaniṣat 7.99. Dr. ISAACSON has pointed out to me that it is found incorporated in Buddhist tantric texts: see Sādhanaṁālā No. 101, p. 209 and Guhyasamāja 12:34b and 14:54c. According to APTE (s.v.), it is 'a place in which for five krośa's there is but one liṅga'. It is possible, however, that a particular kind of (small?) Śaiva shrine might be intended, since in other texts a Śaiva shrine is commonly recommended (cf. śivasamśraye in Kiraṇa 58:4, quoted in the next footnote).

⁷²⁶According to Mrgendrayogapāda 17b, this should have three walls: trikuḍyāveṣṭite gr̥he. For a comparison with the accounts of other tantras as to appropriate places in which to perform yoga see VASUDEVA's annotation on the beginning of Mālinī-vijayottara 12 (*2000:184-7). I repeat here only the prescription of the Kiraṇa (58:4abcd), since VASUDEVA comments on its brevity and quotes it from E_D, which is here defective; the text immediately after the verse listing the aṅgas (for which see fn. 735 on p. 351 below) should read:

girikandaradurge vā vijane śivasamśraye
gr̥he vāpi śubhe sthāne yogī yogam samārabhet.

- girikandaradurge vā vijane śivasamśraye] N₁M^Y; om. G₃M₂E_D
- śubhe] N₁M^Y; śiva° G₃M₂E_D

⁷²⁷This could perhaps mean 'well-partitioned' instead and refer to a similar notion

There yoga is to be undertaken by one who is free of dualities and who is self-possessed (kṛtātmanā), who has engaged his decided mind(?), who is free of cravings, who is discerning. (3)

His posture should be comfortable in the lotus pose, or the svastika, daṇḍa, or half-moon.⁷²⁸ In the lotus pose he should have his feet resting on either thigh (parasparorusaṁśliṣṭau), [with the soles] facing upwards.⁷²⁹ (4)

to that expressed in Mṛgendrayogapāda 17b quoted in the above footnote. VASUDEVA (*2000:186, fn. 14) reproduces the unconscious emendation of my first transcription, śucibhakte, which he renders 'smeared [so as to be] pure'. [VASUDEVA's quotations from this chapter are drawn from my first transcription, and so deviate in a few instances.]

⁷²⁸Śaiva sources for yoga tend to give a relatively narrow repertoire of simple poses, since the emphasis is not on physical exercise (as in popular conceptions of yoga today) but on being comfortable for the purposes of meditative exercise. The lists are, however, quite various: Mataṅgayogapāda 2:13cd lists four: panyaṅkaṁ kamalaṁ bhadraṁ svastikaṁ cācalaṁ dṛḍham, and these are then discussed in the following verses; Kiraṇa 58:4e-5 (following on immediately from the prescription cited in fn. 726 above) lists eight:

ardhacandraṁ ca vīrākhyāṁ yogapaṭṭaprasāritam panyaṅkaṁ ca yathāsaṁstham āsanāṣṭakam ucyate*

The Kiraṇa too discusses these in subsequent verses. The Sarvajñānottara lists six postures (yogaprakaraṇa 9: N₁, f. 48^v; IFP MS 47818, p. 5; Adyar edition, pp. 217-18. I am missing the relevant pages of the Tanjore edition.):

padmaṁ svastikaṁ vāpi upasthāñjalikaṁ tathā pīṭhārdham ardhacandraṁ vā sarvatobhadraṁ eva vā āsanāṁ ruciraṁ baddhvā.

- upasthāñjalikaṁ] N₁; upasthāpy āñjaliṁ 47818 E_A
- pīṭhārdham] N₁, 47818; pīṭhārtham E_A. [Note that this passage is quoted at greater length by VASUDEVA (*2000:306-7).]

Of these the text provides no description (as Aghoraśiva not very helpfully remarks [IFP MS 47818, p. 5], padmādyāsanalakṣaṇaṁ saṁhitāntarād avadheyam). Essentially the same list as that of the Sarvajñānottara, but with the addition of daṇḍāyata, is given by Kaunḍinya in his commentary on Pāśupatasūtra 1:16. The Svacchanda too provides only a list without details of execution (7:290c-291b):

āsanāṁ svastikaṁ baddhvā padmaṁ bhadraṁ eva vā sāpāśrayaṁ sārđhacandraṁ yogapaṭṭaṁ yathāsukham.

The Mālinīvijayottara and the Mṛgendra's yogapāda, by contrast, list no postures at all.

⁷²⁹Thus too other sources, e.g. Mataṅgayogapāda 2:18-19b:

he should bend the left knee, [which should remain] resting on the ground, [such that the left foot comes] towards the right [leg's inner thigh]; that [namely the right foot] he should bring in the same way onto the upper surface [of the left leg] (prṣṭhataḥ).⁷³⁰ That is the svastika posture. (5)

dakṣiṇorugataṃ vāmaṃ pādaṃ vāmoruṣamsthitaṃ dakṣiṇaṃ tu samāvidhya tajjaṅghe tu parasparam etad dhi kamalaṃ nāma vidhāv āsanam uttamam.

This position is illustrated in Fig. 11 in the back of the volume (the position of the hands in the picture is described in Parākhya 14:8).

⁷³⁰ ex conj. Heavy emendation and rather free translation of the terms vilomāt and prṣṭhataḥ allow me to reach this interpretation. I think that the posture is the same as that of the lotus, except that only one foot, the right, is raised up upon the other leg; the left foot is to remain on the ground. This may or may not be what Kṣemarāja describes in his Svacchandatanetrodyota ad 7:290c–91ab: paryāṅkasthasya jaṅghā-vyatyāsāt svastikaṃ (unfortunately Kṣemarāja does not there discuss the paryāṅka), but this interpretation is, I think, borne out by the Mataṅga and the Kiraṇa.

The Mataṅga's account of the svastika is as follows (yogapāda 2:20c–22b):

saṃkocya vāmapādaṃ tu tatpārśṇiṃ ca sphicāvadhim kṛtvādhō dakṣiṇasyetthaṃ dharaṇyāṃ jānumaṇḍalam vāmāt kṛtvetaraṃ pādaṃ vāmajaṅghorupīḍitaṃ svastikaṃ nāma vikhyātaṃ caturtham idam āsanam.

- ca sphicā°] em.; ca sphijā° Poona MS, Nepalese MS; tu sphicā° BHATT
- kṛtvādhō] Poona MS, BHATT; kṛtvā vo Nepalese MS (misread by BHATT)
- vāmāt kṛtvetaraṃ pādaṃ] conj.; vāmaṃ kṛtvetaraṃ pādaṃ Nepalese MS; vāmapādetaraṃ pādo Poona MS; savyaṃ kṛtvottaraṃ pādaṃ BHATT
- °pīḍitaṃ] BHATT; °samsthitaṃ Poona MS. [For the Poona MS to which I refer here, BORI MS 235 of 1883–84, a Śāradā manuscript of the Mataṅgavṛtti which BHATT did not use, see introduction p. xciii.]

A tentative interpretation of this rather tentatively repaired text is as follows: 'Drawing in the left leg and [making] its heel [reach] up to the buttocks, he should put it thus below the right [leg], [and he should keep] the knee on the ground. He should place the leg other than the left [in such a way that it is] pressing upon the thigh and calf of the left leg. This fourth posture is called the svastika.'

Rāmakaṇṭha's commentary on the above quoted passage reads (Poona MS, f. 49^v of last pagination): vāmapādaṃ ca saṃkocya tadagraṃ vāmabhāgaṃ nītvety arthaḥ. tad āha 'tatpārśṇiṃ ca sphicāvadhim (em.; sphijāvadhi MS) kṛtvā' iti. itatataṃ tam dakṣiṇasyetthaṃ eva dakṣiṇabhāgasamkocitasyādhāḥ kṛtvā tam pādād itaraṃṭ dakṣiṇam eva vāmajaṅghopari sthitaṃ kṛtvā jānūdvayaṃ ca dharaṇyāṃ kṛtvā svastikaṃ badhnīyād ity uktaṃ śrīmatkīraṇe [58:6]:

tiryak tad dviguṇaṃ kṛtvā jaṅghālagnaṃ tu svastikaṃ.*

Stretching out the thighs (prasāryoruyugam) [in such a way that they are] touching one another (saṁśliṣṭam) [and keeping] one's [upper] body [stretched out too] is the daṇḍaka posture.⁷³¹ Folding both knees and

- vāmapāde tu dakṣiṇam] Kiraṇa MS M^Y; vāmapādan tu dakṣiṇaḥ Kiraṇa MS N₁; vāmapādaṁ tu dakṣiṇam Kiraṇa E_D; vāmapādasya dakṣiṇam Poona MS of Mataṅgavṛtti • tiryak tad] conj.; tiryak taṁ N₁, Poona MS of Mataṅgavṛtti; tiryak ta M^Y; tiryaksthaṁ E_D
- °lagnaṁ tu] N₁M^Y, Poona MS of Mataṅgavṛtti; °lagnaṁ ca E_D

I cannot pretend to understand Rāmakaṇṭha's analysis of the Mataṅga's prescription, but it is clear that he wishes it to be understood to be the same as the Kiraṇa's, and that might be translated as follows: 'Drawing the right [leg], bent in two [at the knee], onto the upper surface on the left leg, he should put that [left leg], bent in two [beneath the right leg and with its foot] pressed against the buttocks.'

I think it unlikely that any of these accounts of the svastika describes the (for me) uncomfortable posture depicted in BHATT's Fig. 13 in the 2nd volume of the Mataṅga (a sort of kneeling posture in which one squats upon one's heels with the lower legs crossed at the ankles). The prescriptions are of course difficult to interpret, but one reason why BHATT may have avoided understanding the svastika in the way I have (that is to say as similar to the padmāsana, with the difference that the left leg is for its entire length on the ground and the right foot only is raised up on to the left thigh) is that in later non-Śaiva yoga such a posture came to be known as the siddhāsana (see, e.g., Gheraṇḍasaṁhitā 2:7). The svastika is then in later non-Śaiva yoga understood to mean having the legs crossed with both feet underneath rather than on top. This we find, e.g., in Vācaspatimiśra's Tattvavaiśārādī ad Yogasūtra 2:46: savyam ākuñcitam caraṇaṁ dakṣiṇajaṅghorvantare dakṣiṇaṁ cākuñcitam vāmajaṅghorvantare niḥṣipet; etat svastikam. (Cf. also Gheraṇḍasaṁhitā 2:13).

In fine, it seems possible to me that the Saiddhāntika sources, the Mataṅga, the Kiraṇa, and the Parākhyā, do all mean the same posture when they speak of the svastika, but it is clear that the posture is elsewhere understood otherwise.

⁷³¹This uncertain interpretation requires that we assume unnatural word order and that we supply a ca. The name might seem to suggest that the whole body should form a straight line, but of course the posture names usually describe in some way the position of the legs only. It seems to me that three possible interpretations fit this verse: 1) the body is fully stretched out upon the ground, 2) the body forms an L-shape with the legs stretched out on the ground and the upper body 'stretched out' perpendicular to them, 3) the upper body is stretched out prostrate over the legs, which are stretched out upon the ground. The first two possibilities are covered by the translation offered above. For the last possibility one might emend to svāṅgasamśliṣṭam or one might interpret the half-line thus: 'He should stretch out the thighs, [and bring] his own upper body in contact [with them]; that is the daṇḍaka.'

The second possibility seems to me the most likely, and it is supported (by the use of upaviśya) in Vācaspatimiśra's Tattvavaiśārādī ad Yogasūtra 2:46: upaviśya śliṣṭāṅgulikau śliṣṭagulphau bhūmiśliṣṭajaṅghorūḥ pādaḥ prasārya daṇḍāsanam abhyaset.

joining the [soles of the] feet to one another; that is the half-moon pose.⁷³² By this [adopting of a pose] he is at all times fit for dhyāna and the others, and therefore he should adopt [one]. (6–7)

He should adopt one of these [four],⁷³³ placing his hands with the palms arranged [facing upwards] in his own lap, expanding his chest evenly.⁷³⁴ (8)

Slightly closing his two eyes, he should focus on the tip of his nose. Remaining thus he is fit for yoga and he should then begin its sequence.⁷³⁵ (9)

Withdrawal (pratyāhṛtiḥ), then dhyāna, and control of the breaths, and dhāraṇā, tarka, samādhi; these are yoga; and this whole that has six ⁷³²This appears to be the same as the Kiraṇa's conception of this pose (58:8abc):

tadvat pādadvayaṃ talānyonyasusamsthitam
ardhacandraṃ bhaved evaṃ

- talānyonyasusamsthitam] N_1 ; svatalānyonyasamsthitam M^Y ; svaralolyonyasamsthitam G_3 ; svaralolo 'nyasamsthitam E_D
- ardhacandraṃ] $M^Y G_3 E_D$; ardhacandra N_1

I imagine that what is meant is that both legs are in contact with the ground for their entire length, and that the feet are pressed against each other sole to sole. But note that Kṣemarāja's account of this pose ad Svacchanda 7:290c–293b is plainly different: etac cārdhacandra viśeṣaṇam: bhūmiṣṭhaikacaranoruprṣṭhanyastottānadvitiyacaraṇam ardhacandram.

⁷³³Other texts concur in allowing the yogin to adopt any of the prescribed postures he chooses. Cf. Mataṅgayogapāda 2:12ab, Kiraṇa 58:12cd, Sarvajñānottara yogaprakaraṇa 6a (quoted in fn. 728 on p. 348 above).

⁷³⁴14:8c–9 teaches what is in the Mataṅga referred to as karaṇa (Mataṅgayogapāda 2:14 and 22c–28), which describes a state for beginning yoga that is neither entirely a posture nor a mental attitude but in between the two. My interpretative translation of the opaque hastau ca talasamsthitau is based on Mataṅgayogapāda 2:23:

ubhayor jaṅghayor madhye hastāv āñīya tiryagau kṛtvottānau samau vidvān vāmasyopari dakṣiṇam.

'The wise man should bring his hands [so that they are arranged] cross-wise [i.e. not pointing out away from the body] in between his thighs [viz. in his lap], placing them together face upwards, the right above the left.'

⁷³⁵Observe that the description of *āsana*s is here regarded as a preliminary to yoga and not as one of its aṅgas. Early Śaiva sources generally transmit an archaic ṣaḍaṅgayoga, rather than the aṣṭāṅga system of Patañjali (GRÖNBOLD 1983 has drawn attention to ṣaḍaṅgayoga; but for more about its treatment in Śaiva sources see VASUDEVA *2000, particularly his annotations to Mālinīvijayottara 17, and see also SANDERSON *1992), and none includes āsana as one of the aṅgas. The one apparent exception is the Kiraṇa, in the edition of which āsana is listed among the aṅgas, but it is plain from the distribution of readings that it was not originally part of the Kiraṇa's list, which should probably read (Kiraṇa 58:2c–3):

parts is itself [to be counted as an extra entity].⁷³⁶ (10)

There is repeated (prati prati) withdrawal (samāhṛtiḥ) of the mind

śaḍaṅgaḥ sa ca boddhavyas tasyāṅgāni śṛṇuṣva tat

Only late South Indian sources transmit the reading āsanaṇ ca, and it is clear that the other reading was known in South India in the twelfth century, for Vaktraśambhu cites the verse with tarkaś caiva in his Mṛgendrapaddhatiṭikā (IFP MS T. No. 1021, p. 67). VASUDEVA suggests (*2000:288) that the incorporation of āsana may have been 'an attempt to approximate the yoga of the Kiraṇa to the classical system of Patañjali'.

VASUDEVA's useful table 17.1 (*2000:289) tabulates the yogāṅgas listed in or inferred from a wide range of Śaiva and non-Śaiva sources. As Dr. BISSCHOP has pointed out to me (letter of 7.xi.2001), the early Skandapurāṇa too makes reference to a yoga with six aṅgas: 27:50 and 179:36.

⁷³⁶Somdev VASUDEVA has pointed out to me that this is probably what is intended, because the corresponding list of the Mṛgendra is as follows (yogapāda 3):

prāṇyāmaḥ pratyāhāro dhāraṇā dhyānavikṣaṇe
japaḥ samādhir ity aṅgāny aṅgī yogo 'ṣṭamaḥ svayam.

This is also comparable to, but probably not the same as, the idea expressed in Mataṅgayogapāda 1:6–7b:

pratyāhāras tathā dhyānaṃ prāṇyāmaś ca dhāraṇā tarkaś caiva samādhiś ca śaḍaṅgo yoga ucyate aṅgebhyo 'nyo 'tiriktaḥ san yoga ity upavarṇyate.

The term yoga is of course ambiguous, since it can refer to the process or the result. Where yoga appears tagged on to lists of constituents of yoga in this fashion, it is used in the sense of the result, a particular kind of 'union', according to Aghoraśiva in his Sarvajñānottaravṛtti ad yogaprakaraṇa 1–2 (who there quotes the above quoted unit of the Mataṅga) and later ad yogapāda 23–24b (part of a group of verses clumsily omitted from the Adyar edition, for see fn. 838 on p. 381 below): aṅgī tu yogo dhyeyavastu-sākṣātkārātmako viśeṣasambandhaḥ... (IFP MS T. 985, p. 7). The Parākhyā's own discussion of the term is to be found in 14:95 and following.

Note that Aghoraśiva's remarks in the Sarvajñānottaravṛtti ad yogaprakaraṇa 1–2 are quoted by BRUNNER (1994:429)—from Nirmalamani's quotation of them (Prabhāvyaḥkhyā, pp. 361–2)—under the mistaken impression that '[i]n all likelihood, the commentator of the Sarvajñānottara has introduced the present formulation in order to bend the āgamic teaching towards the position which is characteristic of the Tamil school of Śaiva Siddhānta, according to which the difference between the worshipper

(cittasya), which goes out to external objects; that [mind] is drawn (āhṛtam) into the space of the heart (hṛdākāśe): because one establishes [the mind there, this process] is called āhṛti.⁷³⁷ (11)

Because of being withdrawn into that [heart] (tatsamāharaṇāt) the mind becomes firm and a suitable locus for yoga (yogagocaram). (12ab)

And [as for the next on the list, viz. dhyāna, it is] reflecting upon whatever one desires (yathā cābhimatadhyānam),⁷³⁸ †and therefore (tena), if it is reflected upon (yady anusandhitam)†again and again, it is [called] dhyāna. †...†.⁷³⁹ (12c–13b) and the Worshipped can never be suppressed.’ Aghoraśiva’s Sarvajñānottaravṛtti is in fact, in the main, a rather far-fetched attempt to read the non-dualist Sarvajñānottara as though it were dualist.

As for the other yogāṅgas, they are stated here in the order of application, which may seem surprising to some. The order of practice in Pātañjala yoga would be yama, niyama, āsana, prāṇāyāma, pratyāhāra, dhāraṇā, dhyāna, and samādhi (see Yogasūtra 2.29). That of the Mālinīvijayottara, by contrast, is: prāṇāyāma, dhāraṇā, tarka, dhyāna, samādhi, and pratyāhāra. It is evident that with such variation, if the various orders are meaningful, pratyāhāra must be understood differently in different texts. As VASUDEVA observes (*2000:286–7),

While the majority of surviving Śaiva scriptures generally agree on which these six auxiliaries are, there is no consensus as to their order, their definition, or even their subdivisions. Such disagreement reflects doctrinal divergences in the various Śaiva Tantras and also indicates deliberate shifts of emphasis. . . . these systems are not simply indiscriminately reshuffled versions of an original ‘correct’ order.

The various differing sequences in Śaiva sources are tabulated by VASUDEVA (*2000:289) in his annotation to the Mālinīvijayottara, the logic of whose order he defends (*2000:284–7). VASUDEVA speaks of a lack of a consensus in their order, but we may observe that the sequence we find in the Parākhya, excluding the addition of yoga at the end, is the commonest among the early Siddhāntas, and VASUDEVA’s fn. 12 on p. 287 (which draws upon SANDERSON *1992) shows that it is shared by a large number of sources, all using essentially the same formulation: Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 7:5 = Wṛhaspatitattwa 53; Mataṅgayogapāda 1:6 = Bṛhatkālottara yogapāda 1c–3b = Śrīkaṇṭhīyasamhitā 40; Gaṇapatitattwa 3; and Kiraṇa 58:3.

⁷³⁷ All this is by way of justification by nirvacana for the name pratyāhṛti. Perhaps one could instead understand āhṛtam as a noun: ‘The drawing of that [mind is pratyāhṛti]; because one establishes the mind in the space of the heart [after drawing it in there], it is called āhṛti.’

⁷³⁸ VASUDEVA (*2000:188, fn. 23) points out that this echoes Yogasūtra 1:23: yathābhimatadhyānād vā.

⁷³⁹ The text appears to be corrupt. Perhaps emending to yac cānusandhitam or to yad dhy anusandhitam might be considered. 12c–13a might then be rendered: ‘The repeated reflection by that [mind] in whatever way concentration is desired(?) is dhyāna.’ The aīśa past participle anusandhita may be authorial, for cf. 14:90b and M^V’s reading

The repeated stretching (bhūyo bhūyo ya āyāmaḥ)⁷⁴⁰ of the entity inside the body that moves to and from the [heart] lotus (abjacāriṇaḥ) called the breath (prāṇākhyasya), once it is controlled (yatasya),⁷⁴¹ is called prāṇāyāma. (13c–14b)

By [these] stretchings the inner spaces are purified (koṣṭhaśuddhiḥ); by this purification one conquers the fixations (dhāraṇājayaḥ). The fixations (dhāraṇāḥ) have their own maṇḍalas, seed-syllables, and locuses (svabīja-maṇḍalādhārāḥ)⁷⁴² and they are associated with (?) the [characteristic] functions of the [five] elements (bhūtakarmagāḥ). (14c–15b) of 2:29d. But it may also be the noun anusandhi with the suffix tasil.

The last corrupt phrase (14:13b) might have been intended to distinguish smaraṇa from dhyāna (smaraṇaṃ bhedataḥ sthitam) or to suggest that smaraṇa, perhaps in the sense of īśvarasmarāṇa, must be its cause (smaraṇe hetutaḥ sthite, or smaraṇaṃ hetutaḥ sthitam): ‘remembering [Śiva] is established to be its cause’.

⁷⁴⁰In this neutral definition the Parākhyā’s position is close to that of Mṛgendrayogapāda 4, which defines prāṇāyāma as a stretching and exercising of the breath:

prāṇaḥ prāḡ uditō vāyur; āyāmo 'sya prakhedanam preraṇākṛṣṭisaṃroddhalakṣaṇaṃ kratudoṣaṇat.

As SANDERSON points out (*1992:1), Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha reiterates this notion in his Mṛgendravṛtti ad kriyāpāda 3:4–5, where he glosses prāṇān āyāmya with dairghyaṃ nītvā. Elsewhere, as VASUDEVA points out (*2000:292–6), it is control of the vital breath that is stressed (see, e.g., Mataṅgavidyāpāda 2:11cd).

⁷⁴²The maṇḍalas and seed syllables are given below, but the ādhāras are not. One might therefore wish to render this compound ‘have as their locuses their own maṇḍalas and [they have their own] seed-syllables’. But I assume that ādhāra refers to the places in the body where it is held to be possible to retain the breath. Cf. Mālinīvijayottara 17:13–14b:

pratyāṅgadhāraṇād vāyur na ca cakṣuṣi dhārayet nābhihṛttālukāntasthe vidhṛte maruti kramāt catasro dhāraṇā jñeyāḥ śikhyambviśāmr̥tāt̥mikāḥ.

VASUDEVA (*2000:310 and 317) translates: ‘One should not retain the air in the eyes after holding it in a minor limb. According as the air is retained in the region of the navel, the heart, the palate and the crown of the head there are four fixations: Fire, Water, Sovereign and Nectar’.

Cf. also Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 20:4–7b:

āgneyīm dhāraṇāṃ paścād dhārayen nābhimaṇḍale yayā dahati pāpāni bhraṃśakārāṇi susthitaḥ hṛdaye dhārayet saumyāṃ sadā somasamāśrayām āpyāyayati sarvatra yayā yogapathi sthitaḥ dhārayen mūrdhaniśānīm sarveśānīm vicakṣaṇaḥ yayā tu yoginaḥ sarve prayānti paramaṃ padam amṛtā dhāraṇā yā tu śa sarvatra vyavasthitā.

Judgment (tarḥaḥ) is realisation (lokaḥ) which takes place within meditation (dhyānagataḥ) [and] is accompanied by reasoning and resolve (yuktikalpasamanvitaḥ). It is because of his judgment (tadūhataḥ) that [the soul] does not get stuck in [any] blockage that arises from that resolve [?] (tasmāt kalpāt).⁷⁴³ (15c–16b)

I quote here the text established by VASUDEVA (*2000:319, fn. 115; 320, fn. 119; 322, fn. 122, and 324, fn. 125) on the basis of a collation of the Mysore edition, the early Nepalese manuscript, and IFP MS T. 39. The places assigned to each dhāraṇā correspond to those given in Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 7:6–9.

As VASUDEVA mentions in his annotation (*2000:315–16), the Īśānaśivagurudeva-paddhati lists eighteen such places (yogapāda 3:57–9) and the Śāradātilaka sixteen (25:24–5).

Our text does not specify what the ādhāras for the individual dhāraṇās are, and for a list of five there seem to be three possibilities. We may follow Rāmakaṇṭha's Sārdhatriśatikālottaravṛtti on 2:2–3b, where he associates them, starting from that of earth, with the five granthis in the heart, throat, palate, forehead and dvādaśānta. These are the loci of the five Kāraṇeśvaras, which our text will list in 14:73–4. In this Rāmakaṇṭha may be following a paddhati by his guru (perhaps Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha) which he here quotes; but he observes both here and in the Sārdhatriśatikālottaravṛtti ad 8:38c–39 that other commentators understand the sequence of ādhāras for the dhāraṇās in bhūtaśuddhi to begin with the kanda. (He does not make explicit how this sequence would continue.) A third anomalous list of loci is provided by Svacchanda 7:299c–300:

vāyavī dhāraṇāṅguṣṭhe āgneyī nābhimadhyataḥ
māheyī kaṇṭhadeśe tu vāruṇī ghaṇṭikāśrayā ākāśadhāraṇā mūrdhni sarvasiddhikarī smṛtā.

'The dhāraṇā of wind is in the big toes; that of fire is in the navel; that of earth is in the throat; that of water has the uvula as its locus; the dhāraṇā of ether is in the head. It is taught to bestow all powers.'

Note that not all of these ādhāras are located along the suṣumnā, as they are asserted to be in definition 3 (s.v. ādhāra) in Tāntrikābhīdhānakośa, p. 191.

⁷⁴³This is not clear to me. Should kalpa be understood in the sense of vikalpa, 'option' instead? In that case we might interpret thus: '... accompanied by dilemmas [that must be resolved by] reasoning. It is because of his judgment that the soul does not get stuck in any blockage that arises from such dilemma[s].'

For the function of ūha/tarka being ensuring that the soul does not get stuck, cf. Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 20:30:

cittavṛttim sthitām mārge nudann ūhaḥ pravartate prāpayitvā paraṃ sthānam ūho 'gre vinivartate

- nudann ūhaḥ] em. VASUDEVA (this pāda quoted in the Mṛgendravṛtti ad yogapāda 8); nudanūha Ed (Mysore).

VASUDEVA's quotation of the passage in which this verse occurs (*2000:327–8) omits (even in his apparatus) the awkward second half of the verse. In this he follows the Nepalese MS (NGMPP Reel No. A 30/6, f. 46^v); but it is probable that the half-line is

Samādhi, in which there is dissolution into the supreme reality level (paratattve), is what accomplishes union (yogasādhakaḥ). [The soul is] 'placed' (samāhitaḥ) in the supreme reality level, and that is why (tena) it is called samādhi. (16c-17b)

Once withdrawal has been performed (pratyāhāre kṛte), [and then] meditation (dhyāne),⁷⁴⁴ he should perform the stretchings of the vital breath (prāṇāyāmān). (17cd)

With these he conquers the breaths (samīrajayaṃ kuryāt). Of those [breaths] prāṇa is taught to be the chief, since by the controlling of prāṇa (prāṇāyāmāt) their life-force (teṣāṃ jīvanam) is restrained (saṃhṛtam).⁷⁴⁵ (18)

It is [really] that [prāṇa] alone [that is the various breaths when differentiated] because of the various tubes (nāḍibhedena) and then because of the variety of its functions.⁷⁴⁶ Therefore [i.e. because the chief breath is prāṇa]⁷⁴⁷ his heart is [its] locus. He should draw [the prāṇa] out (utkṛṣya) and void (virecayet) the heart (tat). And having then filled it (āpūrya), he should hold that [prāṇa] in the chamber of the heart, [and this sequence of voiding, filling and holding should be performed] again and again. (19-20b)

The prāṇa is known to be the force in which all life resides.⁷⁴⁸ There-original and has dropped out in the Nepalese text because of eyeskip, since both half-lines end with °vartate. Note that √ūh means 'push'. One might interpret as follows: 'Discrimination (ūhaḥ) acts by impelling the mental processes that are stuck on the path. Having caused them to reach the highest level, discrimination ceases [being no longer necessary] thereafter.'

⁷⁴⁴The syntax here is awkward, if correctly understood. I assume that kṛte is taken both with the word which precedes it and then with that which follows (dehalīdīpanyāyena).

⁷⁴⁶The syntax is awkward here. It is possible that a half-line or so of text has dropped out here that stated that the breath was fivefold, or various. It is possible also that the transmitted text should be emended. The short i in nāḍi is permitted in compound, and it yields a pathyā; nevertheless it could be emended to nāḍī, for that would yield a ma-vipulā with the correct preamble. It is also possible that eva is an error for evaṃ (in which case nāḍi would be metrically required), and that it be interpreted thus: 'This [prāṇāyāma functions] like that because of...'

⁷⁴⁷The tena is awkward here, and perhaps it is here that some portion of text has dropped out. And perhaps it is to be connected differently with 18cd: since by control of the prāṇa one controls the others, therefore we start here with the prāṇa. Nor is the interpretation of tena the only awkwardness in the line.

⁷⁴⁸For the treatment of samāśraya as though it were at the end of a bahuvrīhi agreeing fore he should then keep that prāṇa, the source of all the breaths (sarva-marudbhavam), in the heart. (20c–21b)

Having in the same way mastered that [breath] that is called the apāna he should, similarly, keep it in his navel.⁷⁴⁹ This [breath] is [called] apāna since it is taught to be situated in the navel, below (adhaḥ) the heart.⁷⁵⁰ Therefore he should restrain [apāna], †with its flow first broken and then swollen [?] (chinditāpūritāvaham)†,⁷⁵¹ in the navel. (21c–22)

This [breath called] samāna is located in the chest: [it is so called because] it resides in equilibrium (samasthaḥ) in the chest. Therefore he should hold this [samāna] there in equilibrium [?] (samabhāvataḥ). (23)

The udāna he should hold in the throat: it is [so called] (sthitāḥ) because of its movement upwards (ūrdhvato yānataḥ).⁷⁵² (24ab)

After expelling and filling the vyāna he should hold it in the back. Vyāna [is so called] since it is that which, by bending [a man's] body (aṅgavināmena),⁷⁵³ bends his back. It should be held in his back; [then] it is considered to be controlled by the yogin. (24c–25)

First he should draw together all his limbs; thus, like a tortoise, he with bala even though the structure of the compound is not that of a bahuvrīhi see fn. 294 on p. 227 above.

Note that the breaths, treated here and in the following verses, were briefly discussed above in 4:114–16.

⁷⁴⁹Alternatively: 'Having thus conquered that [prāṇa], he should hold [the breath] called apāna in his navel.'

⁷⁵⁰I have supplied a visarga after prokta and assumed hiatus between the pādas on the grounds that this seemed more likely than that the redactor should have resorted to an unusual aiśa sandhi (prokta adhaḥ for proktaḥ + adhaḥ). The reason for the separation between adhaḥ and hṛdaḥ (which is the word it governs) is presumably that this line is giving a partial nirvacana: Prakāśa is accounting for the sounds a and nā (in apāna) by the juxtaposition of adho nābhisthitaḥ. But this interpretation may be wrong; note that Mataṅgavidyāpāda 20:13ab seems to specify that apāna is below the nābhi: nābher adhaḥ yo vāyus tena sandhukṣyate 'nalaḥ. Perhaps we should therefore consider emendation, possibly to adho nābheḥ sthito hy ataḥ.

⁷⁵¹The form chindita is anomalous, and the intended sense eludes me. I assume that, if it is correct, it is intended to be a past participle of √chid erroneously formed from the weak present stem of the 3rd person plural, chindanti. Is the compound intended to refer simply to recana and pūṛaka? As Dr. ISAACSON has pointed out to me (letter of 16.vii.2001), one could consider emending to the regular optative chindīta: 'he should cut [it] off [once] its flow has been swollen(?)'. One could also consider emending sandhārayen to taṃ dhārayen, in parallel with 14:21a and 14:23c.

⁷⁵³This is a nirvacana justifying the sounds vi and na in vyāna. Compare 4:116cd, in which the same nirvacana appears, and see fn. 418 on p. 266 above.

should make [himself] hunch-backed⁷⁵⁴ and [he should make his] breath [remain] fixed, as though gathered together into a lump (piṇḍībhūtam iva sthīram).⁷⁵⁵ (26)

Then the yogin should let [the breath] expand out through the hole ⁷⁵⁴This seems more likely than that he should make his breath hunch-backed. Dr. VASUDEVA has suggested to me that the posture referred to here may be similar to that which is prescribed for kumbhaka by Svātmārāma in Haṭhayogapradīpikā 2:46, a posture in which one lowers the chin, tightens the anus and sucks in the stomach in order to force the breath into the central nāḍī:

*adhastāt kuñcanenāśu kaṇṭhasaṃkocane kṛte

The translation (in the Adyar edition) of Srinivasa IYANGAR, as revised by A. A. RAMANATHAN and Radha BURNIER reads (1972:30): 'Contracting the throat [in the Jālaṃdhara-bandha], and the anus [in the Mūla-bandha] at the same time, and by drawing back the abdomen [in the Uḍḍiyāna-bandha], the Prāṇa flows through the Suṣumnā (Brahma-nāḍī).' (Cf. Gheraṇḍasaṃhitā 3:10-12.)

of the principal channel (mukhyānāḍībilena).⁷⁵⁶ When [the yogin has] control (vidhāraṇā) of the breath (tasya) for such measure of time as it takes to milk a cow (godohamātrakam yāvat),⁷⁵⁷ [then] all the breath in his inner chambers (vāyuh koṣṭhago 'khilaḥ) becomes thus thereby conquered. Because of these winds being conquered his body is light, without desire for †other ... †.⁷⁵⁸ (27-8)

'After performing meditation he should then gradually perform the three types of control of the breath: 'filling', 'holding' and, as the third, 'expelling'. 'Filling' [is so called] because one fills [oneself] with air; holding because one blocks that [air inside oneself]; expelling is so called because of the expulsion [of the air]. He should practise this triad with the praṇava mantra. By practising it until [one can hold one's breath for] as long as it takes to milk a cow, [one achieves breath control that is] thought to be supreme. After repeated practice, there is the drawing in, the holding and blocking and the expulsion of [bad] substances, [and] in the same way of strife; and he becomes at all times an accomplished yogin.'

It will be clear from the above (and from almost every passage about yoga that I have occasion to quote) that the edition of the Kiraṇa (E_D) is no less woefully inadequate for these later portions of the text than it is for the earliest chapters.

For further discussion of prāṇāyāma see VASUDEVA's annotation to Mālinīvijayottara 17 (*2000:292-305).

⁷⁵⁸ No satisfactory emendation has occurred to me for the cruxed portion. I have translated as though the cruxed element were the first part of a tatpuruṣa, but perhaps also possible would be a compound such as avyādhiniḥsṛṣṭhā, 'free of disease and without desires'.

⁷⁵⁹ ex conj. Cf. the expulsion of '[bad] substances' in the Kiraṇa's account (in fn. 755). The suspicious element -aghā (if it is not an error for, e.g., -ādyā), or perhaps the mysterious plutigatiḥ, could be referring not to substances but to other negative things, such as, in the Kiraṇa, strife. But the Kiraṇa's variously transmitted account is itself suspicious at this point, and one could assume kalahasyaivaṃ to be an error (by metathesis compounded with further confusion) for M^Y's sakalasyaiva, which one could then construe with dravyasya, understood in the positive sense of 'wealth'. In other words, it is possible that both here and in the Kiraṇa the yogin is said to have control by means of prāṇāyāma of positive things, and not just the power to expel negative ones. But it is with purification that prāṇāyāma is associated in a wide range of other works. Cf., for example, Pāśupatasūtra 1:12-17. And cf. Sarvajñānottara, (pūrayet) [himself with] air; of his own will he may block it [inside himself] (taṃ nirodhayet); and (evam) the yogin may of his own will expel the air. To the best of his ability (svaśaktitāḥ) he should draw together (ākaraṣayet) [into himself bad] substances from afar, [and, once they are] formed into a round lump (vartulīkṛtam) in the process of pūraka (pūraṇe), he should block them (nirodheta) by means of kumbhaka, †nirodhagataśaktitāḥ†.⁷⁶⁰ By recaka he should expel everything, since by expulsion he will be strong (balavān). His power to do so having been kindled by the power of Śiva (śivaśaktīddhasāmarthyāḥ), he is capable of sending forth everything. Having thus achieved the conquest of the breaths (vāyujayam), he should next perform the fixations (dhārayed dhāraṇāḥ punaḥ). (29–32)

Five fixations (dhāraṇāḥ) are established, starting with [that of] earth and ending with [that of] ether.⁷⁶¹ The fixation of earth (pārthivī) should yogaprakaraṇa 18:

prāṇāyāmair dahed doṣān dhāraṇābhis ca kilbiṣam pratyāhāreṇa saṃsargān dhyānenānīśvarān guṇān.

I quote this verse in the form that VASUDEVA gives it (*2000:296–7). VASUDEVA there shows that it occurs in a number of other works too (including in the Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa, as 36:10, to which Lakṣmīdhara's early twelfth-century Kṛtyakalpataṛu attributes it) and quotes also other sources that express the same notion (including Manusmṛti 6:71). Note that the verse also forms part of a passage quoted in the Ratnaṭīkā (see HARA 1982:194).

⁷⁶⁰Dr. ISAACSON (letter of 16.vii.2001) has suggested to me the emendation nirodhagataśaktitāḥ: '[Their] "being blocked" [is spoken of] because their power has gone'.

⁷⁶¹The Parākhyā's dhāraṇās are simply those of the gross elements. The Mālinī-vijayottara starts with these five (chapters 12 and 13) and then moves on to give many more; other Siddhāntas commonly prescribe four dhāraṇās: thus Rauravasūtra-saṅgraha 7:6–10 and Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 20:4–7 (quoted in fn. 742 on p. 354 above) give Āgneyī, Saumyā, Aīśānī, and Amṛtā; Mataṅgayogapāda 2:36–64 teaches the same four in the same order, but with Vāruṇī and Īśānī as the labels for the second and third; the Mālinīvijayottara too, though it prescribes many other dhāraṇās in earlier chapters, gives this same group of four in 17:14cd when presenting its account of śaḍaṅga yoga. The Kiraṇa 58:19–26 gives the same four but reverses the order of the last two. The Mṛgendra, whose yogapāda appears to be the least conventional, speaks of twelve dhāraṇās (verse 49).

In short, the above-mentioned four dhāraṇās are evidently typical of the early Siddhānta. But VASUDEVA (*2000:318, fn. 114) points out that, aside from in the Parākhyā, the five fixations of the coarse elements are taught in Svacchanda 7:299c–300, and in Sārdhatrisatīkā 2:2–4b (where they are part of the process of bhūta-suddhi).

A fairly full treatment of the topic of dhāraṇās, including quotations of relevant parallels from published and unpublished literature, is to be found in VASUDEVA's be meditated upon (dhāryā) as having a maṇḍala that has the form of earth (pr̥thivīrūpamaṇḍalā). (33)

Earth is yellow, adorned with its seed-syllable, square, marked by thunderbolts.⁷⁶² It is heavy by nature: since this is a characteristic of earth (pr̥thivīviśeṣāt), [the maṇḍala] has heavy thunderbolts (guruvajra-kā).⁷⁶³ (34)

It is square †davaṃjambhaḥ sarvāṃgaḥ†;⁷⁶⁴ it is in all objects (sarva-vastugā). It is yellow [on account of its] being largely heavy with gold (svaṇaguruprāyā);⁷⁶⁵ being equipped with the strength of its own seed mantras (svabījāṇubalā)⁷⁶⁶ it can paralyse immediately (atyāśu)⁷⁶⁷ the movement of elephants, horses, chariots and so forth (vṛttam...gajavāji-rathādikam). (35–36b)

The water fixation should be performed as having as its only diagram a half-moon [and is] marked by white lotuses; [it is] soothing (saumyā), accompanied by its own seed-mantra (nijabījaparigrahā).⁷⁶⁸ (36c–37b)

Since water is nectareous (amṛtamayāḥ), soothing, the locus of the discussion of Mālinīvijayottara 12, 13, and 17 (*2000). His re-editions of the relevant passages of the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha, which in the Mysore edition are often unintelligible, are especially useful.

⁷⁶²This corresponds, as VASUDEVA points out (*2000:236, fn. 157), to the meditation of oneself as the svarūpa of earth in Mālinīvijayottara 12:22bcd: ... dhyāyed ananyadhīḥ/svadehaṃ hemasaṅkāśaṃ turyāśraṃ vajralāñchitam. These characteristics of earth and of the other elements that follow are standard attributes that are to be found in accounts of bhūtaśuddhi: see, e.g., the account in Aghoraśiva's Kriyākramadyotikā, pp. 57–8 and in the Somaśambhupaddhati (BRUNNER 1963:120–7).

⁷⁶³Perhaps one could instead split at the pāda-break and interpret: 'Earth is by nature heavy; because of this particular characteristic [its maṇḍala] has heavy thunderbolts'.

⁷⁶⁴What we expect here is some justification of the maṇḍala's being square.

⁷⁶⁵Or is this perhaps interpretable as 'about as heavy as gold'?

⁷⁶⁶The compound is clumsy but conceivable, and its structure is repeated in 14:42b below. We are not told what the seed mantra is. The elements are widely homologised with the semi-vowels: earth, water, fire, air, and ether are associated respectively with l, v, r, y, and h. It is possible that here, as in the accounts of the dhāraṇās in other Siddhāntas, slightly elaborated seed-syllables involving these sounds are intended. In Aghoraśiva's Kriyākramadyotikā (p. 58) the bījas are HLĀM, HVĪM, HRŪM, HYAIM, and HAUM respectively.

⁷⁶⁷*ex conj.* This guess may be quite wrong; perhaps the element aśma should be retained and the intention is to say that movement can be paralysed and the moving object is rendered like a stone; but if so I cannot see a way to emend the text.

⁷⁶⁸*ex conj.* Cf. svabīja in 14:34a and 14:35d above. Other forms would be possible, such as svaka- or svākya- (for which see fn. 396 on p. 258), but the omission of nija- is most easily explained (by haplography) and is paralleled in 14:41b below.

moon/nectar (somāśrayāḥ),⁷⁶⁹ therefore [it has a] crescent-moon-shaped maṇḍala (khaṇḍendumaṇḍalaṃ tena), which displays the excellence of its powers. (37c–38b)

The lotus is born from water, cool, [and so] conforms with cool nectar and water (śītāmṛtajalānugam). So too is its bīja; it [viz. the dhāraṇā] is rich in those;⁷⁷⁰ filled with its powers it can shower upon those afflicted with heat (secayed agnisantaptam), and can sustain those afflicted by disease (kṣayārtam).⁷⁷¹ By being meditated upon (dhyānāt) it can make [to grow] anew a stick [such that it becomes] a tree, [or it can make to grow] a seed (bījam).⁷⁷² (38c–40b)

The fire fixation (āgneyī dhāraṇā) should be meditated upon as being marked by a triangular maṇḍala (tryaśramaṇḍalamāṇḍitā). It is red, marked by zig-zag shapes (śṛṅgātakāviṣṭā),⁷⁷³ strong with the qualities of its own seed-syllable (nijabījaguṇotkaṭā). Since fire has flames, [the dhāraṇā] is marked by flames that are zig-zag shapes (śṛṅgāṭakaśikhāṅkitā).⁷⁷⁴ (40c–41)

⁷⁷⁰For the bījas of these dhāraṇās see fn. 766 on p. 361 above.

Note that, as in the other parallel cases (e.g. 14:35d–36b and 14:42b–43b), it is the dhāraṇā that is made the subject of the exercise of special powers. Of course it is likely that the logical subject is in all cases nevertheless intended to be the yogin. A possible motivation for this mode of expression is to convey the yogin's complete identification with the element in question. This self-identification with the object in a dhāraṇā is not made explicit in the Parākhyā, but this is clearly the way dhāraṇās are conceived in the Mālinīvijayottara, for see 12:22 (quoted above in fn. 762 on p. 361), 13:2, 13:21, 13:34cd, 13:44cd.

⁷⁷³The intended meaning of the term śṛṅgāṭaka in this context is doubtful. APTE (1957, s.v.) records the meanings 'A mountain with three peaks', 'A place where four roads meet', 'A kind of pastry' [perhaps a tetrahedral samosa: Dr. ACHARYA informs me that a cognate-sounding modern Nepali expression for a samosa is simgaḍā], and 'A door'. Fire is commonly said to be marked by svastikas (e.g. in the passages of the Kriyākramadyotikā and Somaśambhupaddhati referred to in fn. 762 on p. 361 above). It is conceivable, therefore, that these are what are meant here, but since 14:41cd justifies this marking by adducing as a reason for it that fire has flames, it seems more likely that a zig-zag shape, perhaps three-peaked, is intended, or a triangle. (APTE's omission of the well-attested sense 'triangle' is no more than a slip; we find it duly recorded by BÖHTLINGK and ROTH (1855–75).)

⁷⁷⁴*ex conj.* A feminine ending is required, as in the parallel construction in the

[Since fire] is red (raktavarṇayutaḥ), therefore [this fixation] has that [colour] (tadyuktā); when it has the power of that [fire] (tadbalā satī), it can reduce to ashes a towering mountain, a forest, a wood, a city, a palace, an enemy army or a cruel wish-fulfilling tree (krūraṃ kalpa-pādapam).⁷⁷⁵ (42c–43b)

He should perform the fixation, of wind, whose maṇḍala for visualisation is round, marked by six drops (ṣaḍbindulāñchanā),⁷⁷⁶ grey, [and] empowered by its seed-syllable (svabījaparitoṣitā). (43c–44b)

[Its form is such] because wind is round, being capable of surrounding all [one's(?)] limbs (sarvāṅgāliṅgane kṣamaḥ). [The wind] is lovely with drops, [because it is] of great strength;⁷⁷⁷ it [viz. wind] has the colour of smoke, being grey with dust. Since the whole [of the fixation] is filled with the seed-syllables that belong [to wind], †it is proper that it should partake of the strength of wind (yuktā sā vāyuvīryagā)†. (44c–45)

It can toss aside a hostile army, it can move demons and Rākṣasas (cālaye bhūtarākṣasān), [even] Kūṣmāṇḍa, together with his flesh-eating demons and other[attendant]s (sapiśācādi), [as well as] trees and even mountains.⁷⁷⁸ (46)

The fixation of ether should be meditated upon; [its maṇḍala is a] void following half-line, and the ātmakaḥ is not appropriate in the context, so emendation to °śikhātmikā would be insufficient.

⁷⁷⁵I suppose that this last item refers to the circumstance in which a tree that ordinarily grants people's desires, or that has the power to do so, 'cruelly' refuses to grant one. Of course it is possible that the text here is corrupt.

⁷⁷⁶*ex conj.* VASUDEVA (*2000:244) proposes this emendation, which is widely supported, e.g. by the parallel prescription given in Mālinīvijayottara 13:34 and by the two accounts of bhūtaśuddhi referred to in fn. 762 on p.361 above. Those two accounts differ, however, in specifying a black, hexagonal maṇḍala rather than a grey, round one.

⁷⁷⁷*ex conj.* This is probably intended to be a justification for six drops being the marks that distinguish the maṇḍala. Perhaps we could consider emending instead to mahāvāyur, which might be intended as a synonym for the bindu from which the phonemes emanate in 6:3. (I know of no other such usage, but cf. the expression paramākāśa used of a level of subtle sound, e.g., in Kiraṇāvṛtti 3:23.11.) The intended sense might then be: 'it is [said to be] lovely with drops [for the drops are appropriate because] bindu [can also refer] to the 'great wind' [that is subtle sound]'.⁷⁷⁸

kruddhaś cālayate śakraṃ sabhṛtyabalavāhanam.*

marked by nothing (śūnyā śūnyalāñchanā),⁷⁷⁹ the pure support of its own seed-syllables (svabījavimalādhārā). It is held to be the fifth fixation. (47)

It is void (śūnyā sā), because it [viz. ether] is an empty entity (śūnya-vastutvāt). It is located in a form [i.e. a maṇḍala] which is marked by the same [viz. emptiness] (tenaivāñkītarūpagā). Because it has the power of its seed mantras,⁷⁸⁰ it exerts itself in the tasks of emptiness (śūnya-karmakṛtodyamā): it can effect the removal of poison or making void of the entire universe. (48–49b)

By performing a hundred udghātas the conquest of these fixations is achieved: a mātrā [is measured] by circling [the knee or something with] the measure of the knee [once with the hand]; now a tāla is [this unit] multiplied by twelve (tālas tu dvādaśāhataḥ); next, the time-span of an udghāta is of a hundred tālas (tālaśatas tato 'dghātasamayah).⁷⁸¹ With ⁷⁷⁹ Contrast Mataṅgayogapāda 4:59–60b, which does not allow that one can focus on nothing:

mataṅga uvāca—yad amūrtam anādhāram avikāritakāraṇam anādyakāraṇam yasmāt tat katham sādhyate vibho parameśvara uvāca—avakāśena dharmeṇa śabdenātmaguṇena ca.

⁷⁸¹ ex conj. To arrive at this interpretation no doubt other conjectures are possible: pāda a, for example, might read instead jānum āveṣṭya tan mātrā; pāda b might be read tālas taddvādaśāhataḥ: 'a tāla is a multiplication by twelve of that'; and some might prefer to avoid the aśa sandhi in pāda c. Furthermore one might wish to emend to reach an entirely different interpretation, for the figures vary considerably for these units. VASUDEVA has shown in his annotation on Mālinīvijayottara 17:11–13b (*2000:310–16) that even the early Siddhāntas differ widely. The Mrgendra, for instance, agrees that twelve circuits about the knee make a tāla, but holds that twenty-four and forty-eight tālas constitute middling and superior udghātas respectively (yogapāda 27c–28b). The Sarvajñānottara, however, agrees about the number of tālas making up the inferior, middling, and superior levels, and it stipulates that twelve mātrās make up a tāla, but it differs in defining a mātrā as being one circuit about the knee followed by a snap of the fingers (choṭikā). (This definition of the mātrā is shared by the Skandapurāṇa as cited by Brahmānanda in his commentary on Haṭhayogapradīpikā 2:12.) The Mālinīvijayottara's counting of all units is entirely different. One early account VASUDEVA does not cite, perhaps because in the edition it is barely recognisable as a discussion of the same topic: the Kiraṇa's treatment appears, at least in the verse transmitted by M^Y, to be essentially the same as that of the Parākhyā as I have reconstructed it (Kiraṇa 58:27–8):

these he conquers those [dhāraṇās].⁷⁸² (50)

Having [thus] achieved the conquest of the fixations, [and being Udghāta is of two types: ordinary and special. Now a mātrā is [measured] by circling the knee with the hand. A tāla is made up of twelve of these; an [ordinary] udghāta is [measured] by a hundred of those. [This] ordinary type should be used. Invariably he will [then] conquer the fixations.

It will be observed that in the Kiraṇa and the Parākhya the amount of time taken for an udghāta is thus vastly greater than in other sources. What my reconstructions of their accounts prescribe may be impossible to practise.

As for the nature of an udghāta, this too is variously conceived. Once again VASUDEVA's annotation on the same passage of the Mālinīvijayottara (17:11–13b) is invaluable because it quotes a number of accounts. The account of Rāmakaṇṭha in the Sārdhatrīśatikālottaravṛtti ad 2:3c–4b is as follows:

ūrdhvaṃ ghāto vāyor udghātaḥ dvādaśāntaṃ tṛyāvan nādavṛtṭiyā preraṇam. yad uktaṃ trayodaśaśatike prāṇenoccāryamāṇena apānaḥ pīḍyate yadā gatvā cordhvaṃ nivarteta etad udghātalakṣaṇam.

The uninterpretable cruxed portion is a conjecture of the editor, whose negative apparatus ambiguously reports the readings of the two manuscripts as being yannāda-pūjā. . . pūraṇam (MS A) and yannāda pratyā° (MS Ā). BHATT was not able to consult IFP MS RE 47635, which reads (f. 152^r): yannādam vrajatyā (and which has apāne for apānaḥ in pāda b of the quotation).

VASUDEVA concludes his discussion of the topic of udghāta thus (*2000:316):

To summarise, “eruption” appears to be the yogic term for the sensation of a spontaneous upward surge of vital energy brought on in the early stages of self-induced asphyxiation.

⁷⁸² ex conj. Cf. Kiraṇa 58:28cd, which is quoted in the previous footnote.

thereby] successful in achieving the rewards that are the strengths of those [fixations] (tadvīryaphalasādhakaḥ), the yogin should engage in yoga[-meditation] (saṃyojayed yogam) upon the cage that is [the earthly] body (dehapañjare), [and which is for his practice of yoga] the most important element (pradhāne). (51)

Even yoga cannot accomplish its fruits if it is devoid of a support (nirālambaḥ). Its support is the body, which is covered with a network of tubular vessels (sirājālāvātānitam). (52)

Some among these are gross vessels; others are subtle and extremely subtle. They are called nāḍīs; in those take place the movements of the wind in this body. (53)

The wind in the vessels (nāḍikāsthō 'nilaḥ) kindles the fire in the belly.⁷⁸³ †That [fire in turn] troubles (bādhate) the eater, and therefore that (tat)⁷⁸⁴ is brought into equilibrium by [the wind called] samāna (samānasamīkṛtam)†. (54)

It moves about (sarpitam) in the form of rasa (rasātmakena bhāvena)⁷⁸⁵ in the tubes that are these channels (nāḍīrandhreṣu). It constantly causes the increase of the group of substances semen, marrow and bone (śukramajjāsthisaṅghasya), and also of blood, flesh and phlegm (raktamāṃsakaphasya ca), as well as of its (tasya)⁷⁸⁶ tubes. (55–56b)

⁷⁸³ ex conj. The conception here may not be the same as that of the Aṣṭāṅgahrdaya, but cf. therein śārīrasthāna 3:56:

sandhuḥṣitaḥ samānena pacaty āmāśayasthitam audaryo 'gnir yathā bāhyaḥ sthālīsthaṃ toyataṇḍulam.

'The stomach's fire, kindled by samāna, cooks [the food] that is in the upper stomach, just as an external [fire cooks] the water and rice that is in a pot.'

⁷⁸⁴ Perhaps the change of gender means that we are now talking about the ingested food (anna) rather than the fire. The text is obscure to me.

⁷⁸⁵ Perhaps what is meant is rather that the air moves about together with whatever has been eaten and transformed by the first stage of decoction into the nutrient fluid rasa.

⁷⁸⁶ ex conj. Or could the pronoun refer back to attāram? We may again refer to the medical conception, as represented by the Aṣṭāṅgahrdaya (śārīrasthāna 3:61–3b):

*kiṭṭaṃ sārāś ca tat pakvaṃ annaṃ sambhavati dvidhā.
tatrācchaṃ kiṭṭaṃ annasya mūtraṃ vidyād; ghaṇaṃ śakṛt.
sāras tu saptabhir bhūyo yathāśvaṃ pacyate 'gnibhiḥ rasād raktaṃ tato māṃsaṃ māṃsān medas tato 'sthi ca asthno majjā tataḥ śukraṃ śukrād garbhaḥ prajāyate.*

'The cooked food becomes two: waste matter and essence. Of these, the liquid waste matter of the food one should understand to be urine; the solid is excrement. Now

The tubes that are located in the navel (nābhīsthāḥ) reach below that to the bulb above the testicles (kandam āśritāḥ).⁷⁸⁷ The tubes that are located there (tatrasthāḥ) [viz. in the *kanda*⁷⁸⁸] spread outwards in all directions: sideways, upwards, downwards. Among these there are eight principal ones that go to the extremities of the petals of the lotus of the man's heart (taddhṛtpadmadalāgragāḥ).⁷⁸⁹ (56c-57)

Aindrī, that in [the direction of] Agni, Yāmyā, Nairṛtyā, Āpyā, that in [the direction of] the wind, Kauberī, and the tube Śāṅkarī; they are the locuses of the deities of the directions (sthitā digdevatāśrayāḥ).⁷⁹⁰ (58)

the essence is cooked again by seven fires individually. From the nutrient fluid [arises] blood, from that flesh, from the flesh fat, from that bone, from the bone marrow, from that semen; from the semen arises the foetus.'

The Parākhyā here names five of this standard list of seven dhātus, starting in the reverse order, omitting medas (rasa has of course already been mentioned) and adding kapha (the humour 'phlegm') to the end of the list. The author of the Parākhyā may have followed a different tradition about the transformation of nutrients into bodily substances, or he may have followed this same medical tradition but corruptions in our text have obscured his intentions. As Dr. MEULENBELD has kindly pointed out to me, a handful of variant lists are cited by JAMISON (1986:175-7), but the Parākhyā's corresponds to none of them: it is possible also that the Parākhyā's is no more than a randomly selected and ordered group of bodily substances (cf. 4:122).

⁷⁸⁸But this could be interpreted to mean 'in the nābhi'. Cf. Svacchanda 7:7c-8b:

nābhyadho meḍhrakande ca sthitvā vai nābhimadhyataḥ tasmād vinirgatā nāḍyas tiryag ūrdhvaṃ adhaḥ priye.

Here the referent of the pronoun (tasmāt) is probably nābhi, but note that Kṣemārāja refers to another interpretation, following which tasmāt refers back to the kanda: kecit tu nābhicakrata iti pāṭhaṃ pūrvatraiva yojayitvā, tasmād ity anena kandapadaṃ pratyavamarṣṭavantaḥ.

⁷⁸⁹I assume that pradhānāṣṭau is an aiśa double sandhi for pradhānāḥ + aṣṭau. Accounts of the nāḍīs are very various indeed, and the Parākhyā's appears not closely to parallel any that I know of. Three principal channels, iḍā, piṅgalā, and suṣumnā, are almost invariably encountered, either on their own or—as in Sārdhatriśatikālottara 10:3-4 and Svacchanda 7:13-16, which list ten principal channels—counted among others. The Parākhyā makes no mention of these names, but it does give an account below of a central, left, and right channel that rise above the heart (14:70c-71). Here it gives as its eight principal channels ones which appear to reach from the kanda to the extremities of the eight petals around the heart, perhaps passing through the karnikā. These are named after the eight cardinal and intermediate directions, names given in Sārdhatriśatikālottara 10:25-7 to the petals of the lotus of the heart.

In these [tubes]⁷⁹¹ the soul (kṣetrī), [usually] situated in the pericarp [of the lotus of the heart] (karnikāsthah) moves about from petal to petal. Whatever be the nature of the deity of the direction, he then [i.e. upon moving into that direction] becomes of the nature of that [deity].⁷⁹² By moving into the gaps between those petals the bound soul becomes empty-natured (sūnyabhāvaḥ sthitah):⁷⁹³ he thinks (vetti) himself to be as it ⁷⁹¹We could assume here that tāsu refers rather to the directions (which would presuppose that the emendation in 14:58d must be correct), since it is not clear whether the tubes run directly from the kanda to the extremities of the heart petals, or whether they pass through the heart. (See previous footnote.) That they should not pass through the heart might seem the most natural interpretation of 14:57, and so the movement of the soul among the petals of the heart might therefore not be movement in the tubes; but it is implied that it is in the tubes in 14:67 below. I am assuming therefore that the 'petals' are the openings of the tubes, and thus that when the soul is conceived of as moving about from petal to petal this can be described as moving about among the tubes.

⁷⁹²*ex conj.* But the transmitted text of 14:59cd could be accepted as authorial (after correction of the sandhi).

⁷⁹³This same doctrine appears in Sārdhatrisatikālottara 10:25–28b:

The readings of the Nepalese manuscript N (NAK MS 5–4632, f. 7^r of third sequence of foliation) are all reported; but for the sources used by BHATT I have given an incomplete apparatus, and that only for the portions which have been corrected on metrical grounds and so differ from BHATT's accepted text. A number of TORELLA's divergences from the text of BHATT are merely the result of TORELLA's not having recognised that the metre is āryā (and upagīti). The text and the apparatus in both editions are at this point not free of faults (it is not clear how their sources read), and Rāmakaṇṭha's commentary, as so often, does not reveal how he read. In short, as already implied in a sketch of the aiśa language of the Sārdhatriśatikālottara as preserved in a single Nepalese manuscript (GOODALL 1998:lxvi–lxviii), it is clear that more could be done towards establishing the text of this tantra: in particular the surviving Nepalese manuscripts have yet to be collated. I interpret the above passage (which I must acknowledge that I have not properly edited) as follows:

Situated in the eastern petal [of the lotus of the heart, the soul] has the pride of a king [i.e. takes on the nature of Indra] or [he becomes] fiery; there arises [for him] a desire to devour, [or] pain, in the petal in the direction of Agni. In the southern [petal he takes on] the nature of Yama; in the south-western [petal it] is taught [that he takes on the nature] of a Rakṣas; in the western petal [he takes on the nature of] Varuṇa; in the north-western petal he takes on the nature of Marut; in the northern [petal he takes on] the nature of Kubera; and in the north-eastern [petal it] is taught [that he takes on the nature of] Īśa. In the upward direction [he takes on the nature] of Brahmā; †below it is taught [that he takes on the nature of] the prince of serpents†. Whichever direction he goes to, he takes on entirely the nature of that [direction's presiding deity]. [And] from being located in any of the spaces between the petals his self then appears as though it were emptiness.

Observe that when the Sārdhatriśatikālottara earlier in this chapter (10:16) speaks of the movement of the soul (jīva), Rāmakaṇṭha (ad loc.) interprets this to refer to the movement of the subtle body. This is a response to the implicit problem that the soul is all-pervading and so cannot be said to move. Pratoda states this problem explicitly below (14:62), but Prakāśa's resolution is, as we shall see below (in 14:63–9), quite different from Rāmakaṇṭha's.

'moves about' (carati) in all directions, since, when situated there, the individual (pudgalaḥ) observes (ālocayati) everything. For when it is situated there (sannidhāne sthitas tasmin),⁷⁹⁴ [the soul] is said to be especially all-pervading. (61)

Pratoda spoke:

The soul's (tasya) 'going' (cāraḥ) is stated to be [a kind of] movement (gatiḥ), [since] that is well-known as the meaning of that root (tad-dhātvarthaprakāśitā).⁷⁹⁵ And his moving is impossible (na ca sā tasya), since this soul has been taught above⁷⁹⁶ to be all-pervading. (62)

Prakāśa spoke:

The word cāra [is used] in the sense of 'movement' (gatau); but in certain places it is used in the sense of 'knowing' (jñāne pravartate). In such a place (tatra) all words that have the meaning 'movement' are taught [also] to have the meaning 'knowing'.⁷⁹⁷ (63)

Since he is all-pervading, the soul cannot be said to move: [in fact what happens is that] in each petal (dale dale) [there occurs] the revelation of [a particular] 'knowledge' (jñānavyaktiḥ)⁷⁹⁸ that informs the knower of its object (jñātur arthanivedikā) and that can carry various particular forms (nānākāraviśeṣārḥā). (64)

Pratoda spoke:

First the soul was taught to be all-pervasive, of the nature of knowledge, indestructible; his knowledge exists eternally. How can he have various forms? (65)

Prakāśa spoke:

The divisions [that are perceived to occur] within the eternal knowledge (nityajñānasya yo bhedaḥ) are [merely] the result of adventitious qualifiers (upādhivaśāt), and so [the soul's knowledge] should be understood to be [only] superficially (bahirmukham) of various forms⁷⁹⁹ as a result of ⁷⁹⁴ ex conj. ISAACSON. This conjecture is made on the assumption that this may be an aiśa construction equivalent in sense to sannidhāne sthitas tasya, for which cf. 2:25a.

⁷⁹⁵ See Dhātupāṭha 588–91: abhra, vabhra, mabhra, cara gatyarthāḥ.

⁷⁹⁶ See Parākhya 1:15 and 1:36–9.

⁷⁹⁷ This idea is widely known and very variously expressed, and so it probably cannot be regarded as an allusion to a particular work. Hemahansaṣaṇi's Nyāyasaṅgraha (ABHYANKAR 1967:110) includes the following as his 110th grammatical paribhāṣā: gatyarthā jñānārthāḥ.

⁷⁹⁸ Or perhaps '[there arises] a particular "knowledge" '.

⁷⁹⁹ Or perhaps 'should [only] be understood to be of various forms when it is externally directed'.

adventitious qualifiers. (66)

That [knowledge] is [thus superficially] various (bhinnaṃ) because of the variousness of faculties of sense, just as a crystal [appears to be different only] because of adventitious qualifiers (sphaṭikopādhībhedavat).⁸⁰⁰ Similarly these tubes are various in accordance with the variousness of the natures of the deities [in whose directions they belong]. (67)

Knowledge appears to be differentiated (bhinnaṃ ivābhāti), and [yet] it is not differentiated, since it perdures [eternally] (sthiraṭvataḥ). †For the perception [of variety(?)] (upalabdhiḥ) that can be produced (kāryā) [is something that] has as its sphere the 'movement' inside the tubes (nāḍisañcāragocarā)†.⁸⁰¹ (68)

It is that wind called prāṇa and jīva,⁸⁰² because of the movement of that (taccārāt) we speak figuratively of movement [of the soul] (upacārataḥ/ gatiṃ uktā), since without it we say that [a body is] dead (prakhyaṇyate mṛtaḥ). The manifestation of consciousness (cidvyaktiḥ) has that [breath] as its locus (tadādhārā); where [the breath] goes, there it [viz. the manifestation of consciousness] will be.⁸⁰³ (69–70b)

Above the lotus of the heart there are two principle channels to the left and right of it.⁸⁰⁴ That which passes on the left (vāmagā) is mild [and] belongs to the moon (candragā); that which passes on the right ⁸⁰⁰The crystal, which is of itself clear, appears red when it happens to be placed next to some red object and blue when placed next to a blue object. Its 'redness' is thus an adventitious 'property' that belongs to something to which it happens to be, but need not be, connected.

⁸⁰¹The second half is obscure and perhaps corrupt. Prefer perhaps: 'The [various] perceptions that must [in order to account for the facts of experience] be produced belong to [i.e. are to be explained by] movement [of the the soul] in the tubes.'

⁸⁰²It is also conceivable that the text means to distinguish prāṇa as a name for the ingoing breath and jīva as a name for the outgoing breath, or vice versa. We find prāṇa as a name for the ingoing breath in Svacchanda 4:257, and we find the terms paired together as opposites in Vijñānabhairava 24ab (quoted in fn. 821 on p. 376 below), where prāṇa is, however, the ingoing breath.

⁸⁰³Cf. Svacchanda 4:357:

*tiṣṭhet sa yatra vai prāṇa ātmā tadgatim āpnuyāt
tat tad rūpaṃ bhavet tasya sthānabhāvānurūpataḥ.*

⁸⁰⁴*ex conj.* Note that here and in the ensuing account of the control of the movement of the 'breath' attention is focussed on the three principal tubes and on the region between the heart and the dvādaśānta; all the tubes below this are ignored. In Tantrāloka 6:46c–51 and in the *Tantrāloka*viveka thereon, movement in the lower tubes is said to be automatic (svārasika); guided breath is possible only above the level of the heart.

(dakṣiṇagā) is fiery [and] belongs to the sun (arkagā).⁸⁰⁵ Adorned with the moon and the sun (somārkākālpitā)⁸⁰⁶ is the central channel (madhyā), which is foremost among all the channels (sarvanādīpuraḥsarā). (70c–71)

That [breath] moves—by the middle course (madhyacāreṇa) or (ca) by the right [or] by the left—to the heart, the throat, then the palate the middle of the brows, the tip of the nose (nāsikāntaram). (72)

From there it travels up twelve digits (māsāṅgulaṃ yāvat) and returns from that place. Brahmā is in the heart, Viṣṇu in the throat, Rudra in the palate, and Īśvara is between the brows, and at the tip of the nose is Sadāśiva.⁸⁰⁷ [Thus] the various places are taught in accordance ⁸⁰⁵These correspond to iḍā and piṅgalā respectively. Cf. Sārdhatriśatikālottara 10:24ab: saurah savyo mārgaś cāndramasaś cetaraḥ samākhyātāḥ. The association of these two channels with the moon and the sun is in turn connected with the association of the ingoing and outgoing breaths with the moon and the sun respectively, as taught, e.g., in Sārdhatriśatikālottara 11:9:

*āyāmo dehamadhyasthaḥ somagrahaṇam iṣyate
dehātītaṃ tu taṃ vidyād ādityagrahaṇam budhaḥ.*

⁸⁰⁶I suppose this to be a way of referring to its having the mild and fiery channels to the left and right of it. But perhaps the intended sense might rather be 'not formed by sun and moon', The central channel is commonly associated with fire (see, e.g., Svacchanda 7:148), and with udāna, the rising breath. For the association of udāna, the breath that rises in the central channel, with fire, see, e.g., Īśvarapratyabhijñānakārikā 3.2:20. Cf. also Kṣemarāja's comment on Netratānta 1:30ab (sūryācandramasau vahnis tridhāmaparikalpanā): sūryeti: icchādiśaktitraya eva madhyadakṣiṇāvāmamārgeṣu vahnisūrya-somakalpanā; antar bahir api cecchādiśaktisphārarūpā eva sūryādayaḥ.

⁸⁰⁷These are the five Kāraṇaśvaras, though it should be noted that this terminology (kāraṇa, kāraṇaśvara, kāraṇeśa) is not used and appears to occur only once in the early Saiddhāntika canon (Mṛgendra kriyāpāda 8:202). It may have entered the Saiddhāntika paddhati-tradition (see, e.g. Somaśambhupaddhati 1.3:19ff [KSTS 134ff]) from the Svacchanda (e.g. 4:205, 207).

Cf. Sārdhatriśatikālottara 23:9c–12b:

*brahmā viṣṇuś ca rudraś ca īśvaraḥ śiva eva ca pañcadhā pañcadaivatyaḥ sakalaḥ paripaṭhyate brahmaṇo hṛdayaṃ sthānaṃ kaṇṭhe viṣṇuḥ samāśritāḥ

• nāsāgre] TORELLA, BHATT's MSS I, Ī, U; nādānte BHATT

The same passage occurs without substantive variation also in the Dviśatikālottara (Trivandrum MS 4509, f. 29^v and IFP MS T. No. 176, pp. 45–6).

with [their] various deities (devatābhedaṭṭaḥ), for the purpose of [gradual] resorption. (73–4)

The deities each pervade their own paths (svasvādhvavyāpakā devāḥ),⁸⁰⁸ extending up to the limits of the range of their pervasion (tadvyāptiviṣayāntagāḥ): Brahmā extends up to Prajā (prajāparyanta-gāḥ);⁸⁰⁹ Viṣṇu extends up to the limit of [the tattva of] rāga (rāgāvasāna-

As VASUDEVA has argued (*2000:217–19), the reading nāsāgre is to be accepted rather than BHATT's nādānte, for the Sārdhatrīśatikālottara, the Kiraṇa, and the Parākhya appear here to represent an alternative tradition. It is however not beyond dispute what the term means. VASUDEVA interprets it as being 'at the external limit of twelve (bāhyadvādaśanta-)' (i.e. in contradistinction to the 'ordinary' dvādaśānta, which is identified with the brahmarandhra). He explains (*2000:218–19): 'As the breath curves back down towards the nose, the jīva- descends with it and exits through the nostrils, coming to a standstill at the external dvādaśānta-, twelve digits from the tip of the nose.' In support of this VASUDEVA adduces Sārdhatrīśatikālottara 23:14cd:

dehātītaṃ tu tad vidyān nāsāgrād dvādaśāṅgulam

- nāsāgrād] conj. VASUDEVA; nāsāgre BHATT, TORELLA; nāsāgra BHATT's MS A; nāsāgraṃ BHATT's MS Ā

VASUDEVA translates (ibid.) 'One should know that [manifestation of Śiva, which is] beyond the body, [located] twelve digits from the tip of the nose.' As VASUDEVA there points out, this interpretation is also supported by Kiraṇa 58:72c–73b:

*athavā bhāvayec chambhuṃ †khandehan tu kalātmakam†
kham ākāśaṃ paraṃ śāntaṃ nāsāgrād dvādaśāṅgule*

- chambhuṃ] M^YE_D; chambhuḥ N₁ • khandehan tu kalātmakam] N₁; khe dehāsukalātmakam M^Y; svadehāṇṭarātmakam E_D • kham ākāśaṃ] N₁; samākāśaṃ M^Y; svamatācca E_D
- nāsāgrād dvā°] E_D; nāsāgrādvī° N₁; nāsāgrādvā° M^Y

Aghoraśiva, however, in his Dviśatikālottaravṛtti (Trivandrum MS 4509, f. 29^v and IFP MS T. No. 176, p. 46) wishes to understand the nāsāgra to be synonymous with the brahmarandhra: ... nāsāgrasya brahmarandhrasya ca samānatvāt (176; samāna-mānatvāt 4509) nāsāgrāśabdena brahmabilam ucyate. VASUDEVA explains (*2000:217 and fn. 107) that the two terms can be identified because nāsā can refer to the central channel, but it is not clear to me that this was in Aghoraśiva's mind.

⁸⁰⁸*ex conj.* The notion appears to be that each occupies a tranche of tattvas. The term adhvan (particularly in the collocations śuddhādhvan and aśuddhādhvan) conveys this meaning: see, e.g., Kiraṇa 3:26cd.

⁸⁰⁹I interpret this to mean that Brahmā's range is from the lowest tattva (earth) up to that of puruṣa. I am not aware of any other passage in which prajā is used to refer to puruṣatattva, but it seems to me conceivable that the name should have been employed here on the grounds that it resonates with a possible name of Brahmā: Prajāpati.

gaḥ); Rudra extends up to [the tattva of] kāla;⁸¹⁰ Maheśa is located in his own abode (nijadhāmani).⁸¹¹ Sadāśiva resides in his own power (svaśakti-sthaḥ): his body is the five brahmamantras (pañcamantraniketanah).⁸¹² (75–6)

By passing higher and higher (uttarottarasañcārāt) one attains (bhavantī) higher and higher worlds (uttarottarabhūmayah), which are located in particular places in [the paths of] these [deities(?)]⁸¹³ (tadviśeṣasthāḥ), possessed of (saha) their particular properties (tadviśeṣagūṇaiḥ). (77)

Or rather (vā) there is but one supreme Lord who has different forms (bhedaiḥ sthitah) that are [different] in [no more than] their names (nāmagaiḥ): [He is called] Brahmā because he is great (bṛhattvāt), because He fills (bṛṇhakatvāt), or because He possesses brahman (vā brahmayogataḥ). [He is called] Viṣṇu because it is His nature to be powerful (prabhavaśīlatvāt), because He is the source of the universe (prabhavo jagataḥ), He is omnipotent (prabhuh).⁸¹⁴ (78)

Because He drives away affliction (rujaṃ drāvayate) He is called Rudra, since the affliction is destroyed (rujaḥ kṣayāt).⁸¹⁵ Because He possesses all the attributes of sovereignty (sarvaiśvarya-guṇaśleṣāt)⁸¹⁶ the sovereign Lord (īśvaraḥ) [is called] Maheśvara. (79)

He is Sadāśiva [because He is] always favourable (sadākāntah), or [be-⁸¹⁰ In Parākhya 5:151–2 rāga is placed immediately above puruṣatattva and kāla is placed immediately below māyā (see fn. 626 on p. 317 above). Thus Viṣṇu would extend across rāgatattva alone, and Rudra would cover (in ascending order) the tattvas of vidyā, kalā, niyati and kāla.

⁸¹¹ This must refer to īśvaratattva; what is unclear is whether or not the text intends that he should also extend across the tattvas that intervene between him and Rudra, namely māyā and pure vidyā.

⁸¹² Perhaps the choice of words here is partly intended to convey that Sadāśiva's 'place' is not to be conceived of spatially.

⁸¹³ But perhaps we must supply yogins as the subject of the second half of the verse.

⁸¹⁴ More common is the etymologisation of Viṣṇu cited by APTE (1957, s.v.):

yasmād viśvam idaṃ sarvaṃ tasya śaktyā mahātmanah tasmād evocyate viṣṇur viśadhātoḥ praveśanāt.

Here viṣṭam, as we find in a couple of the versions of this verse cited by TRIPĀṬHĪ (1988:166–7), would make better sense. Cf. also Hevajratantra I.v.13b: viṣṇād viṣṇur ucyate.

⁸¹⁵ This nirvacana has been alluded to twice above: in 2:48 and in 5:143.

⁸¹⁶ ex conj. Emendation to °guṇaiḥ śleṣāt (suggestion of Dr. ISAACSON) is perhaps equally likely.

cause] Śiva [means] situated in rest.⁸¹⁷ Thus there exists, [called] with various names, only one Lord of the universe. (80)

It is He who bestows the fruit, and that depends on the goal [at which the yogin aims(?)] (lakṣyasamāśritam).⁸¹⁸ The goal is located in the breath; †it is the 'soul' (jīvam) in the breath (vāyugam) of the embodied person (sakalātmanah)†.⁸¹⁹ (81)

The [individual] soul (ātmā), it seems (kila),⁸²⁰ †is He (saḥ) ⊐ joṃgo bindukārapuṭīkṛtam†.⁸²¹ He resides in all bodies saying 'haṃso ⁸¹⁷Or perhaps 'in śānti[-kalā'].

⁸¹⁹The accusatives are not accounted for, but, since I have no confidence in my having understood the text, I am reluctant to emend. Perhaps the text assumes a distinction between prāṇa as haṃ and jīva as sa, which might have been alluded to in 14:69ab, and which is to be found in Vijñānabhairava 24ab (quoted in fn. 821 on p. 376 below).

⁸²⁰For the (for me) unexceptionable, though not particularly common, use of kila in the first position in a sentence see GOODALL 1998:169, fn. 26. At the time of writing that footnote I was not aware that Gopendratippabhūpāla understands kila to have been intended in the list of particles adverted to by Vāmana in Kāvyaḷaṅkārasūtra 5.5 (na pādāḍau khalvādayaḥ) as words that should not be used in initial position. This shows that initial kila was known to but frowned upon by Gopendratippabhūpāla and possibly also Vāmana. It is presumably added here to emphasize that this is a yogic exercise rather than a doctrinal statement of truth.

⁸²¹Because of what follows we may suppose that the text is here offering an interpretation of the 'mantra' haṃso haṃsaḥ based upon its similarity to a repeated assertion of the form ahaṃ saḥ! ahaṃ saḥ!: 'I am that! I am that!'. The inward breath is the sound haṃ (ending in an anusvāra) and the outward breath is the sound saḥ (ending in a visarga). This is explained by Sārdhatriśatikālottara 23:3 and by Rāmakaṇṭha's Sārdhatriśatikālottaravṛtti ad loc., which is corrupt in the text offered by the edition, but can fortunately be at least partly repaired with the help of Dviśatikālottara 7:3 and Aghoraśiva's Dviśatikālottaravṛtti (IFP MS T. 176, pp. 43 and Trivandrum MS 4509, ff. 27^v–28^r), which is nearly identical:

Rāmakaṇṭha's reading of the verse is not straightforward, as the later part of the commentary reveals, but the portion of the commentary cited may be interpreted as follows:

Since, with the sound haṃ, which is the motion of the inward breath, and with the sound sa, which is the motion of the outward breath, the movement to and fro of the breath is established, because of invariable concomitance, to be inseparable from the action of speech, [therefore] he who by its mere movement to and fro may at every moment speak—[and here the optative is used] in the sense of [stating a] possibility—with a word that is an address in the vocative 'haṃsa, haṃsa' ([for] as they say, 'in contracting and expanding there are the two sounds haṃ and sa'), such a special person alone, who knows the two powers of the breaths that are words, attains at first Sadāśīva, [the] Sakala [Lord].

In BHATT's text there is an explicit analysis: ... "yo 'haṃ so 'haṃ saḥ' iti..." ('This "I" is "He" '); but this is impossible if the ensuing identification of what precedes the iti as a vocative (āmantraṇa) is correct. This analysis is also implicit in the discussion in the svātmasākṣātkāropadeśaprakaraṇa of the Sarvajñānottara that culminates with the following (13cd, IFP MS 47818, p. 64): yaḥ śīvaḥ so 'haṃ eveti advaitaṃ bhāvayet sadā. See also Śivayogarātna 4–5 and 27. But such a notion is of course widespread outside the Siddhānta too, for see, for example, Kṣemarāja's Śivasūtravimarśinī ad 3:27, and see PADOUX 1992:140ff and 1987:145–7.

Perhaps just conceivable as an emendation of our line is the following: kilātmā <<haṃsabījāṅgo>> bindukārapuṭīkṛtaḥ; 'The soul, it is said, is embodied in the seed syllables haṃ and sa contained between two dots.' As for the two dots, could these perhaps be the two end points of the prāṇacāra, namely the heart and the bāhyadvādaśānta? Cf. Vijñānabhairava 24ab: ūrdhve prāṇo hy adho jīvo visargātmā paroccaret. SINGH (1979:19) interprets this as follows:

His thoughts intent on this goal (tallakṣyagatacittātmā), his breath having the attribute of 'movement' towards that goal (?) (tatsaṅcāraguṇānilaḥ),⁸²³ he will, [by moving] from [one] 'place' [to another] by excelling other [lower] 'places', attain a superlative reward (utkṛṣṭaṃ phalam).⁸²⁴ (83)

By [the yogāṅga of] discrimination (tarkeṇa) [the yogin] should discern (ālocya) all this [lower universe] to possess the property of transience (vināśaguṇasaṃyutam); he should [then] first abandon [this lower] path that is divided into parts (sāṃśaṃ... mārgam) and he should resort to the partless tattva (niraṃśaṃ tattvam). (84)

When that is supportless (nirālambaṃ yadā tat syāt),⁸²⁵ then that state of meditative awareness (samādhiḥ saḥ) is the highest possible

Parā devī or Highest Śakti who is of the nature of visarga goes on (ceaselessly) expressing herself upward (ūrdhve) (from the centre of the body to dvādaśānta or a distance of twelve fingers) in the form of exhalation (prāṇa) and downward (adhaḥ) (from dvādaśānta to the centre of the body) in the form of inhalation (jīva or apāna).

In his annotation he remarks (1979:20):

In Sanskrit, visarga is represented by two points or dots one above the other. One point in this case is dvādaśānta where prāṇa ends and the other is the hṛt or centre of the body where apāna ends. It is because of these two points also that Parāśakti is known as visargātmā.

⁸²²It may seem odd that the practitioner is not made the subject; but cf. Śrīkaṇṭhīya 4-5b, (HANNER 1998:240):

*jantūnāṃ hṛdayābjastho vadate nādarūpakāḥ
āgopālāṅganābālā mleccāḥ prākṛtabhāṣiṇaḥ jalecarāś ca ye sattvās te 'pi nityaṃ bruvanti tam nādarūpaṃ hakāraṃ tu haṃsa haṃseti suvrate.*

The second and third half-lines, which may appear to confirm the choice of the verb here, are actually drawn from the Kālottara text-tradition (≈ Sārdhatrīśatikālottara 1:6c-7b); and one might consider the possibility that bruvan could be a corruption of sphuran, for cf. Tantrāloka 4:136cd: tat punaḥ pibati prītyā haṃso haṃsa iti sphuran.

⁸²³One could consider emendation to tatsaṅcāragatānilaḥ.

⁸²⁴Observe that this echoes 5:158cd (for which see fn. 635 on p. 318 above). The syntax here is awkward and the text may be corrupt.

⁸²⁵The referent of the tat is not made immediately clear; one might expect it to refer to the yogin's ability to remain 'in' the partless tattva, but then its gender would need to be accounted for. It probably refers after all to the ultimate tattva, since Pratoda's question below (14:86) implies that he understood it in that way.

(paraḥ). In [that] state of meditative awareness (samādhau) he is not aware of all external objects (vetti no vedyam sarvam) that belong to the sphere of sound and the rest [of the sensations] (śābdādigocaram). When he accomplishes this (tanniṣpattau) that knower of yoga attains whatever fruit he desires. (85)

Pratoda spoke:

That [supreme tattva] is by nature supportless (svarūpanirāmbam), beyond the forms of all external objects (arthākārabahiṣkṛtam). How then (katham evam) can the yogic meditator attain the śivatattva? (86)

Prakāśa spoke:

If that nature is formless, [you say,] how then can it be known? [But] do we not experience knowledge of happiness, unhappiness and such like [feelings that are] similarly [devoid of form] (tadvat)?⁸²⁶ (87)

Knowledge of such [a feeling] (tajjñānam) we know (gamyam) from its effect, because we can determine the nature of that [feeling] (tatsvarūpāva-dhāraṇāt). Now (atha) a cognition of [His] nature (svarūpavijñānam) does arise through which [He, although formless,] is known (lakṣyate): the cognition [of the form] 'the nature of brahman is bliss' (ānandaṁ brahmaṇo rūpam)⁸²⁷ has that [nature of His] as its object. (88–89b)

For something that is [supposed to be] 'knowable' that is supportless could not then generate [knowledge]. That by which that [knowledge] is generated is a knowable object, because one has a synthetic awareness of knowledge [of it].⁸²⁸ The blissful form [of God], which is devoid of bonds

⁸²⁶This translation assumes that the suffix -ka in sukhaduḥkhādikaṁ is intended to convey what would normally have been expressed by a genitive. The assumption is perhaps unnecessary, but see p. lxxxi.

⁸²⁷This pāda is perhaps a Vedic quotation. Note that it appears quoted thus (in a similar context) in Bhāsarvajña's Nyāyasāra (3.65, p. 144): ānandaṁ brahmaṇo rūpaṁ tac ca mokṣe 'bhilakṣyate/ vijñānam ānandaṁ brahmeti The third pāda is probably an independent quotation (of the end of Bṛhadāraṇyakopaniṣat 3.9.28) and we should probably correct 'bhilakṣyate to 'bhivyaajyate, since that is what the editor prints when he quotes the same unit in his introduction (p. 12) and since that is what is printed when the half-line is quoted by Kumāradeva in his Tattvaparakāśatātparyadīpikā ad verse 3 (p. 9). Rāmakaṇṭha quotes the single quarter-verse ānandaṁ brahmaṇo rūpam in his Paramokṣanirāśakārikāvṛtti when introducing verse 50. Cf. the verse that appears in Taittirīyopaniṣat 2.4 and 2.9:

yato vāco nivartante aprāpya manasā saha ānandaṁ brahmaṇo vidvān na bibheti kadācana

(In the second instance the verse ends with kutaścana.)

⁸²⁸*ex conj.* The interpretation and constitution of the text are uncertain here. If I

(pāśariktam)⁸²⁹ and utterly pure, can be known. (90)

In him [viz. in the soul who has attained that state] (tasmin)⁸³⁰ there arise (bhavanti) the eight [yogic powers] beginning with miniaturisation (aṇimādyāḥ); in order they are (kramāt sthitāḥ): miniaturisation (aṇimā), weightlessness (laghimā), massiveness (mahimā), attainment (prāptiḥ), wish-fulfillment (prākāmyam), power (īśitā), control (vaśitā), and dwelling wherever one wishes [i.e.] being linked to [whatever] place [one wishes] (yatrakāmaṃ ca vaśitā padayogitā).⁸³¹ (91–92b)

Miniaturisation [is so called] because of having minuteness (aṇutva-sambandhāt); weightlessness because of the state of being light (laghu- have understood what is intended, we infer from our experience of them the existence of things that have no form, such as happiness, and therefore our knowledge of them is not strictly speaking supportless: happiness exists.

The form anusandhitaḥ could perhaps instead be an aiśa past participle of the verb anusan√dhā (rather than the noun anusandhi with the suffix tasil): such a form is used in 14:12d above, and may have been intended in 2:29d (where, however, another reading was preferred), and such a past participle appears in Mālinīvijayottara 19:65, perhaps in the sense of 'meditated upon'.

⁸³⁰ ex conj. But palaeographically closer to what is transmitted would be tasmād, which could be rendered with 'From that [knowledge]...'.

⁸³¹ Observe that the interpretation of individual terms in this list (which is common to a large range of texts, including Vyāsa's Yogasūtrabhāṣya ad Yogasūtra 3:45) is not everywhere identical. The account in Kiraṇa 58:48–55, for instance, differs in its interpretation of mahiman (which it understands as receiving great honour, which is admittedly also a just conceivable interpretation of Parākhyā 14:93a). In the Mataṅga's account of these powers (vidyāpāda 17:108c–125), mahiman includes both honour and huge body-size. Cf. also Svacchanda 10:1072c–1073 and Kṣemarāja's Svacchandatantrōddyota thereon, and Yājñavalkyasmṛti 3.4:302–3, referred to by VASUDEVA (*2000:280). Some texts omit the last member and include instead gariman in fourth place: e.g. Aṃśumat 53:25c–26b and 70:22 (IFP MS T. 3, pp. 233 and 333). BRUNNER has referred to this alternative list (1977:506, fn. 7), but was unaware that it appeared in Śaiva literature.

The last member of the list is indeed the most problematic, for not only its interpretation but also its names are variable. BRUNNER (1977:507) accepts into her text kāmāvasāyitā te bhavatu, which, extrapolating from the gloss satyasaṅkalpatā given in the Yogasūtrabhāṣya, she analyses as follows (1977:508, fn. 14): 'fait, pour les désirs (kāma) relatifs à telle ou telle chose (yatra) d'avoir une fin (avasāya)—c'est à dire d'être exaucés.' But she also comments (ibid.): 'Certains dictionnaires, prenant avasāya dans le sens de "demeurer", en donnent la traduction suivante: "pouvoir de se transporter là où on le désire"... Mais nous n'avons jamais trouvé une interprétation semblable dans les Āgama, ni dans les textes du Yoga'. It seems possible, but far from certain, that the Parākhyā intends this sense, and so I have retained M^y's vaśitā in the text. Unfortunately what appears to be the gloss given below (14:94b) on the last member of the list is unclear and may be corrupt.

bhāvataḥ); massiveness because of great size (mahato mānāt); attainment because of attaining everything (akhilāptitaḥ); wish-fulfillment is the procuring of one's desires (kāmyasamprāptiḥ); and power because it is the state of being a lord (īśabhāvataḥ). (92c–93)

Control [means] total control (vaśitā sarvā);⁸³² [the power of being] wherever one wishes (yatrakāmam)⁸³³ [is so called because this is dictated] exactly according to one's desire (yatheccchayā). Thus the radiant (samujjvalam) sovereignty that consists in these eight powers (aṣṭa-guṇaiśvaryam),⁸³⁴ and which is one's own nature (nijadharmam),⁸³⁵ becomes gradually revealed for the yogin by the practice of yoga (yoga-sevanāt). (94)

Pratoda spoke:

Yoga has been defined as contact. That [contact] of the soul (asya) is taught to be with what, according to this system? It cannot be union of the soul with a tattva, because [the soul is] all-pervading.⁸³⁶ (95)

⁸³²Or perhaps the sense is rather 'Control [means that] every woman is under one's control'.

⁸³³*ex conj.* As we have seen above (in fn. 831 on p. 379), the name and interpretation of this last member of the list are problematic.

⁸³⁴*ex conj.* ISAACSON. The transmitted īśaguṇaiśvaryam could be retained and rendered with 'sovereignty over these powers of the Lord'.

⁸³⁵Since this is in apposition to the subject, we expect the nominative nijadharmāḥ, but this form has been retained on the assumption that it might be an instance of aiśa usage, the neuter ending being perhaps the result of attraction, or of the expression being treated as an adjective to aiśvaryam.

⁸³⁶VASUDEVA (*2000:176) holds this to be an allusion to the Vaiśeṣika conception of yoga given in Vaiśeṣikasūtra 5.2.16–17 but as formulated by Candrānanda in his commentary (the earliest surviving) thereon. VASUDEVA refers to WEZLER's article on the interpolation of the definition of yoga into the Vaiśeṣikasūtra (1982), in the course of which WEZLER defends (1982:650–1) Muni JAMBŪVIJAYA's constitution of Vaiśeṣikasūtra 5.2.17 (ending with ...sa yogaḥ) with Candrānanda's commentary (containing the phrase saṃyogo yogaḥ). Thus it may have been Candrānanda who was the first Vaiśeṣika to use the expression saṃyogo yogaḥ in the context of defining yoga. If this is so, and if Pratoda means here to allude to a Vaiśeṣika, then this might be an allusion to Candrānanda's commentary, which might one day help us further to pin down the date of the Parākhya (see introduction p. li). But, although the earliest surviving commentary, that of Candrānanda, commented on a text of Vaiśeṣikasūtra 5.2.17 that did not contain the phrase saṃyogo yogaḥ, it is also possible that a contemporaneous or earlier version of that interpolated sūtra did, or that another Vaiśeṣika used the expression before Candrānanda.

It seems to me also possible that it was not a Vaiśeṣika position to which Pratoda was alluding, for cf. Kaṇḍīnya's bhāṣya ad Pāśupatasūtra 1.1 (p. 6): atrātmeśvarasaṃyogo

Prakāśa spoke:

It is connection with [the eight supernatural accomplishments of self-miniaturisation and so forth. Or yoga [comes about] because of the union with [Śiva's] power (śaktiyogataḥ), or yoga is something that is in the intensive practice of yoga and that [arises] from the attainment of samādhi (samādhiyogataḥ).⁸³⁷ Or yoga is immersion into Him (tatsamāveśaḥ) arising from the contemplation of His nature (tatsvarūpabhāvanāt). [In fact] union with the Lord is impossible, because He is all-pervading. [When] it is spoken of [in scripture], then [it is spoken of] in a figurative sense (tad upacārataḥ). (96–7)

Success in yoga (yogaṛddhiḥ), accompanied by the eight [supernatural] properties,⁸³⁸ [is achieved] by the intensive practice of that [viz. yoga] (tadabhyāsāt). By the means taught above for achieving this (taduk-topāyataḥ) yogins become possessed of supernatural powers (siddhāḥ), supreme because of yoga (yogato varāḥ).⁸³⁹ (98)

And they can demonstrate their power in special circumstances (kvacit) before certain special persons (kasyacid agrataḥ) when it is demanded by those persons (tatprṣtām).⁸⁴⁰ [Such power] must be accepted [to have existed too] at other times and places and in other men (deśa- yogaḥ... The idea is frequently repeated later in the text by Kauṇḍinya (see HARA 1992:221, fn. 16) and is briefly discussed by HARA (1992:212–14). And cf. also Ahīrbudhnyasaṃhitā 31:15ab: saṃyogo yoga ity ukto jīvātmaparamātmanoḥ. (My attention was drawn to the latter by COLAS 1988:246.)

To avoid potential confusion, I should add that I do not suppose that the Ahīrbudhnyasaṃhitā could have been the Parākhya's source. MATSUBARA's dating (1994:22–7) of the Ahīrbudhnyasaṃhitā to c. 600 AD—on the strength of his perceptions of the date of certain usages in the text and of the unattributed 'quotation' by Utpala Vaiṣṇava of a single verse found in it but also in many other works of different disciplines is unconvincing. SANDERSON (2002:35–8) has since convincingly demonstrated that the text postdates Kṣemarāja (fl. c. 1000–1500 AD).

⁸³⁷VASUDEVA (*2000:176) translates this half-line as containing two possibilities: 'Or, yoga [arises] from the attainment of samādhi- or resides in the practice of yoga.'

⁸³⁸The above-mentioned properties of self-miniaturization, etc. The compound yogaṛddhiḥ illustrates that for the redactor of the Parākhya vocalic ṛ was pronounced as an initial consonant r followed by the vowel i or u (see p. lxxxiii and fn. 403 on p. 262 above). The same compound occurs in Sarvajñānottara yogaprakaraṇa 25ab in the text of the old Nepalese MS: yogaṛddhir iti jñeyā śivena paramātmanā. (South Indian sources read yogasiddhir iti, e.g. IFP MS 47818 p. 11. The sloppy Adyar edition here omits 7 verses.)

Now you may say (cet), '[But] this is just popular belief (prasiddhi-mātram evedam), [for] why is it not directly observed (kasmāt... tan na dṛśyate)?'⁸⁴² [To this we reply:] Does everything you have not yourself seen not exist on the surface of the earth? (100)

The circle of the earth is a repository of manifold variety (prakārāṇām vicitrāṇām ālayam): no person can see or hear everywhere. The non-existence (abhāvaḥ) decided upon by such [a person] (tadvinīścayaḥ)⁸⁴³ of wondrous things (citrāṇām) on earth cannot be proved. (101–102b)

We know about (pratīyate) the consciousness (cit) that yogins have because of the power [they have] that exceeds [our] knowledge (viññānottarasāmarthyāt). Through scripture too (āgamenāpi) we know of (mitam) the state of being a yogin (yogitvam), together with its limitless powers (aparyantaḡaṇaiḥ). Such a yogin (sa yogī) should play about with his powers for the sake of inspiring faith (pratyaayahetutaḥ). (102c–103)

Because of faith (pratyaayena)⁸⁴⁴ other seekers after liberation will get initiation. Such a yogin engaged in yoga (tasya yogayuktasya yoginaḥ) will also [himself] have faith (pratyaayo 'pi).⁸⁴⁵ (104)

And he should perform yogic suicide (utkrāntim) by means of yoga (yogataḥ) when his [bodily] powers fail (gataśaktikaḥ).⁸⁴⁶ By enunci-

⁸⁴¹ Compare this usage with those in 3:31a and 3:46a. It appears to be characteristic of Buddhist pramāṇaśāstra (it occurs, e.g., in Tattvasaṅgraha 2806, 2876, 3022, 3086, 3117, and in Nyāyamañjarī, vol. 1, p. 438 and p. 606, verse 58).

⁸⁴² Or 'Now you may say, "[But] this is just popular belief. Why? This [supernatural power] is not directly observed." ' Or perhaps emend to kasmāc caitan na dṛśyate: '[You may say, "But] this is just popular belief; and why is it not directly observed".' For such a use of prasiddhimātra, see Nyāyamañjarī, vol. 1, p. 491, verse 157.

⁸⁴³ This could belong instead to the last half-line as an otiose asseveration: 'this is certain'. But if that is what is intended then it is awkward that tad and vinīścayaḥ do not agree in gender. If such a sense is to be preferred, then perhaps an emendation should be considered, for example to tad dhi niścitam? The present interpretation is also not without awkwardness because of the enjambement and because of the positioning of the ca in 14:102a.

⁸⁴⁴ Or perhaps again 'because of [inspiring with] faith'. A pratyaaya in Sārdhatrīṣatikālottara 21 (which is devoted to the subject of pratyaayas) is something that inspires faith. The epithet mokṣakāñkṣiṇām is perhaps used proleptically: 'others [once they have thereby become] seekers after liberation'.

⁸⁴⁶ ex conj. This is no more than a guess because I cannot see an obvious sense in the transmitted gataśaktitaḥ. But perhaps the yogin's bodily powers are supposed never ation of the mantra SADYOJĀTA ending with HUMPHAT for as many as eight thousand times he certainly achieves yogic suicide (utkramate dhruvam).⁸⁴⁷ By performing [this] (karaṇāt) he splits (sphoṭayet) †...†. (105– to fail. According the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha's account of utkrānti (22:1–8), the motivation for yogic suicide is supposed to be either that the yogin feels weariness for the world or that he has enjoyed the pleasures that he wished to enjoy; he should not kill himself to obtain things or because he is in trouble (Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 22:1–2):

athātmano vadhaṃ mantrī na kuryāt phalavāñchayā na ca duḥkhasamutpattau kāmato deham utsṛjet yadā nirvedam āpannaḥ prāptabhogo 'thavā punaḥ dhyānadhāraṇayogena śivalīnamanās tyajet.

Disaffection is also the motivation in Mataṅgayogapāda 7:41a (virakto vā tyajed deham) and in Mālinīvijayottara 17:25:

sarvam apy athavā bhogaṃ manyamāno virūpakam svaśarīraṃ parityajya śāśvataṃ padam ṛcchati.

But the account of Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 9 seems to contradict that of the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha, for it prescribes yogic suicide precisely when the yogin is troubled by bad omens, protracted disease, imprisonment (9:1c–3). In the Kiraṇa it is a yogic awareness of time (described at length in the verses preceding the treatment of yogic suicide) and of how to cheat his future death that appears to motivate the yogin (59:27):

kālaḥ yo bhaved yogī jñātvā mṛtyum anāgatam vañcanaṃ śāstradr̥ṣṭena tanmārgenābhyaset punaḥ

• kālaḥ yo] D¹M^Y; kālakṣepo E_D • anāgatam] D¹M^Y; anāmayaṃ E_D • vañcanaṃ] D¹; pacanaṃ M^Y; pañcanaṃ E_D

'The yogin who gains an understanding of time, having known his future death then practises the cheating [of death] by [following] the path for doing so that is known through scripture.' (Observe that E_D's text is once again unintelligible.)

For certain non-dualist Śaivas yogic suicide is not as obviously desirable as for Saiddhāntikas; for a discussion of Abhinavagupta's views of utkrānti, see VASUDEVA *2000:344–8.

⁸⁴⁷The mantras and methods prescribed by the various scriptural accounts of utkrānti referred to above appear to be more various than the reasons for undertaking it. No other account involves SADYOJĀTA with HUMPHAT. The Mālinīvijayottara prescribes, among other things, repeated enunciation of the mantra SKRK, but repetition in huge numbers of mantras seems not to be enjoined in the other accounts. To those accounts we may add that of Sārdhatrīśatikālottara 11:15c–19b, which says nothing about the yogin's motivation. Most similar to each other are perhaps the accounts of Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 9:8ff and Mataṅgayogapāda 7:41–8, in which the yogin begins with the visualisation of a lunar disc within a solar disc within his heart and then cuts his way upwards using the ASTRA mantra. (This is very roughly paraphrased in order to avoid a discussion of the corruptions and problems, particularly in the account of the Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha.) In the Kiraṇa's account, the yogin begins by venerating Sadāśiva with an aṣṭapūṣpikā rite, then proceeds to perform pūraka and kumbhaka, bursting through the granthis along the central channel. Corruption masks a number of details, including which mantras are to be used. Bursting through granthis, often explicitly as the culmination of some sort of prāṇāyāma, is the common factor in the Saiddhāntika accounts, and it is probably what is intended to be alluded to in our text in the corrupt half-line 14:106cd. Compare Sārdhatrīśatikālottara 11:15c-19b:

I have taught you the supreme yoga (yogeśvaraḥ),⁸⁵⁰ the most impor-

yat tad dhṛdi sadā padmaṃ adhomukhaṃ avasthitam 15
vikasaty etad ūrdhvaṃ tu pūrakeṇa tu pūritam ūrdhvasroto bhavet padmaṃ kumbhakena nirodhitam 16 recakena tathā kṣiptaṃ sadyaḥprāṇahareṇa tu muktṛvā hṛdayapadmaṃ tu ūrdhvasroto vyavasthitam 17
recito gacchati hy ūrdhvaṃ granthiṃ bhittvā kṣaṇena tu bhittvā kapāladvāraṃ tu jīvo hy ūrdhvaṃ tu recitaḥ 18 sadāśivapadaṃ gatvā na bhūyo janma cāpnuyāt.

There are some ambiguities here, but I interpret this tentatively as follows:

The lotus in the heart that always remains downward-facing [and so closed] blossoms [and turns] upwards, filled out by [the performance of] pūraka. That upward-tending lotus is [next] fixed by [the performance of] kumbhaka and [then] it is thrown(?) by [the performance of a] recaka that instantaneously takes away life. Leaving the lotus of the heart that [now] remains upward-tending, [the soul,] voided [from the heart] goes upwards and straight away breaks through [each?] knot. Being voided upwards, the soul breaks through the gateway in the skull, and reaching the level of Sadāśiva he is never again reborn.

On the strength of this parallel, one could consider emending sphāraṃ to dvāraṃ, but the half-line remains problematic.

⁸⁴⁸The next phrase suggests that this is intended as a reference to ultimate liberation, even though the expression chosen might seem to suggest otherwise. I have taken sāyujya in its literal sense of 'union', but one could understand instead 'liberation as Brahmā/brahman', for see 15:39, fn. 889 on p. 397 below, and 15:71.

⁸⁴⁹What is presumably intended is the 'union' of the soul with his own innate powers. Cf. 14:95-7 above.

⁸⁵⁰The epithet of the first two pādas rather implies that this could refer to a person, but the epithet that follows suggests that it may not. I suppose it to be a karmadhāraya (or tatpuruṣa) comparable to tantrarāja.

tant among all teachings of yoga (sakalayogavidhānamukhyaḥ),⁸⁵¹ ripe (-pragalbhaḥ) with the power (-prabhava-) of the wealth (-vibhava-) of happiness attained from [the realisation of]⁸⁵² those innate qualities (-dharma), which are distinct from (-bhaktaviśeṣa-) the qualities well known as [the first four of the eight dispositional qualities] of the buddhi (buddhi-prasiddhagūṇa-).⁸⁵³ now [will be] determined (niyatam) that which is the means to the attainment of the fruit [of liberation] (phalasādhanaṃ yat).⁸⁵⁴ (108)

Thus the fourteenth chapter, an exposition of yoga,⁸⁵⁵ belonging to the topic of liberation, in the great tantra called the Supreme.

⁸⁵²One could consider emending to -samprāpti-: '... the happiness resulting from the attainment of...'

⁸⁵³These are the eight qualities (of jñāna, vairāgya, dharma, aiśvarya and their opposites) referred to above in 4:90 that reside in the buddhi and determine the disposition of the bound soul. But note that in 15:63-8 the yogin attains perfect qualities with the names of the first four (prefixed by sat-) when he attains Śiva-hood. Thus buddhi-prasiddhagūṇabhakta- (assuming that bhakta is not a corruption) may be intended to have been interpreted 'distinct from [though correlated with, the first four of] the gūṇas famous as belonging to the buddhi'.

⁸⁵⁴This leads into the next chapter, which is largely taken up with a discussion of the function of initiation and the four *sādhana*s of kriyā, caryā, yoga, and jñāna.

PARĀKHYATANTRA CHAPTER XV

Prakāśa spoke:

In the [treatment of the topic] of means [to liberation] (sādhane), the naming of [each of the particular] means,⁸⁵⁶ the settled view of [the function of] the means, the rejection of the liberation taught [by us] being the same as those [notions of liberation] well-known [as those] of opponents.⁸⁵⁷ (1)

A group of means has been taught that is preceded by initiation as their basis.⁸⁵⁸ [There are: the group of means] called knowledge (vijñānākhyāḥ), that called action (kriyākhyāḥ), that called caryā, and that called yoga. (2)

Pratoda spoke:

Each of the means [to liberation] has been presented as the principal ⁸⁵⁶In this chapter sādhana is the term used for the four means of jñāna, kriyā, caryā, and yoga. For the Mṛgendra and Mataṅga, and possibly also for this text, these are also the titles of sections of text, but they need not be (see introduction, p. lxiii).

As in the preceding chapters, the opening verse is a list of the topics that are to be treated. The first is dealt with in 15:2; the discussion of the rôle of the four *sādhana*s (or pādas) vis à vis dīkṣā covers 15:3–45; opponents' views of the nature of liberation are discussed in 15:46–60; and the Siddhānta's view of liberation as a condition of being equal to Śiva is treated in 15:61–73.

⁸⁵⁷Perhaps one could consider emending to prativādiprasiddhoktā muktiḥ sāmyaparigrahaḥ: '... [the views of] liberation taught as well-known (?) by [various] opponents [and] the attainment of the condition of being identical to [Śiva].'

⁸⁵⁸As we shall see below, the Parākhyā teaches that there is an obligation to follow the samaya (i.e. the *sādhana*s) after an initiation that is sāpekṣā (see 15:23–6), and in teaching this it is in line with the Kiraṇa (6:5–12 and GOODALL 1998:360–75). But the Parākhyā also teaches that the *sādhana*s are necessary to prepare people for salvific initiation (15:4–10) and so can actually precede it. In this the Parākhyā is not in line with the Kiraṇa, whose position is that it is dīkṣā that provides the adhikāra for their practice (Kiraṇa 6:8cd). The problem of attaining the adhikāra to perform the *sādhana*s is solved in the Parākhyā by allowing that this is attained just by samayadīkṣā (15:12). The Parākhyā allows the *sādhana*s to have a very little force even when no salvific initiation is bestowed (15:38c–39b), and it allows dīkṣā followed by the pursuit of just one of the *sādhana*s to be salvific (15:39c–41), but it is clear that the ideal route to liberation, according to the Parākhyā, is that of dīkṣā followed by all four of the *sādhana*s (15:43–4).

one. [But] which among the [four] means of knowledge, [action, caryā,] and [yoga] (bodhādīnām upāyānām) is the means to liberation (mukti-sāadhanam)? (3)

Prakāśa spoke:

Now it is this initiation which is primary, since it is taught to be the 'root' of those (tanmūlacoditam).⁸⁵⁹ The four [means] are taught to be necessary auxiliaries [that contribute to it], since it is for it that they are useful (tasyām evopayogataḥ).⁸⁶⁰ (4)

Now (tāvat) knowledge (jñānam) is [knowledge] of the topics, distinguishing their respective natures (tatsvarūpavibhāgataḥ). Until there is understanding of it (yāvan na tadgato bhāvaḥ), there can be no performance of ritual action (kriyākramaḥ). (5)

Ritual action [in the course of initiation] has to be performed in each tattva (tattve tattve), beginning with [bringing about] birth [in each tattva] and ending with [bringing about] the union [of the soul with the divine state (?) or with the next tattva up] (yogapaścimā), and so ritual action too (kriyāpi), that is to say worship, oblations and so forth (pūjāhomādilakṣaṇā), is a necessary auxiliary to that [dīkṣā] (tasyāṅgam)⁸⁶¹. (6)

And caryā too, which consists of such observances as lying on ash, also serves as a necessary auxiliary [to initiation]. And yoga [too], which consists of pratyāhāra and such, and is held [to include also] dhāraṇās and meditation: when the physical body (prākṛte dehe) has been burnt, and a 'mantra-body' has been created (vidyādehe kṛte sati),⁸⁶² then [the ⁸⁵⁹I suppose this to be an awkward syntactic compound intended to be interpreted as if it were tanmūlatvena uktam.

⁸⁶⁰In line with my understanding of Kiraṇa 6 and Rāmakaṇṭha's interpretation of that chapter, I previously translated the second half of this verse 'The four are taught to be auxiliaries because they are used only when that [initiation has been performed].' (GOODALL, 1998:362, fn. 558). But after further wrestling with the corrupt text of the remainder of the discussion, it now seems to me that this cannot be the point. See fn. 858 on p. 387 above.

⁸⁶¹I am assuming that the pronoun is intended to be a feminine (referring to dīkṣā) and that the feminine genitive ending has been swallowed up in a double sandhi. This may seem circular, for, since I am supposing that the text is referring to the ritual linking in initiation of the soul of the initiand with each tattva in which he might be reborn in order to cause him to experience all that would accrue to him, ritual and initiation are here effectively identified. But there is presumably held to be more to dīkṣā than pūjā and homa.

⁸⁶²Mr. SUBRAMANIAM of the IFP observed to me that this term was typical of late soul], filled with the nature of Śiva (śivabhāvopabṛṃhitaḥ) becomes ready for the ritual [of initiation]; therefore (tena) this [yoga too] is a necessary auxiliary [of initiation]. And thus (tena) initiation is the whole to which subsidiary parts belong (aṅginī). (7–9b)

†...†.⁸⁶³ Therefore the fruit arises from that which is the principal factor (pradhānottham);⁸⁶⁴ [and] it is initiation which is the principal factor. (9c–10b)

Because (yat...tena) of [its] bestowing (pradānam) Śiva-hood [and] destroying (kṣapaṇam) of all the [soul's] bonds (pāśasantateḥ) it is called dī-kṣā—so established because of its giving and destroying (taddānāt kṣapaṇāt).⁸⁶⁵ (10c–f)

South Indian Siddhāntas, which seems indeed to be true (it seems to be particularly common in the Sahasratāntra, IFP MS T. 33), but we do find it in some early works too. See Siddhayaogeśvarīmatatantra 19:3cd: tato nirdāgdhakāyas tu vidyādehaṃ prakalpayet, and Vīṇāśikhātantra 72–3. The term is also in nirvāṇadīkṣavidhi 14 and antyeṣṭividhi 24 of the Somaśambhupaddhati (BRUNNER 1977:183 and 597) and in the quotation attributed to the Raurava in the Mṛgendravṛtti ad kriyāpāda 7:14. This expression is used of Śiva in Mataṅgavidyāpāda 3:31cd. If the argumentation has been rightly understood here, we must assume that the 'burning' of the physical body and the creation of a mantra-body are regarded as achieved by yoga.

⁸⁶³ Could this perhaps mean: 'A statement about the whole to which subsidiary parts belong is one in which we are taught about the fruit; that [whole to which subsidiary parts belong] is taught to be what accomplishes [the fruit].'? Emendation might be considered to yatra śrutiḥ phalasyāṅgajātaṃ tatsādhakam smṛtam: 'The group of parts brings about that [whole] which is taught [to give] the fruit'. (Loosely paraphrasing the yatra clause, the structure would be yena sādhanena phalaṃ bhaviṣyatīti śrūyate, tatsādhakam āṅgajātaṃ smṛtam.)

⁸⁶⁵ This nirvacana is to be found throughout Śaiva literature: e.g. Mataṅgakriyāpāda 2:2–3b:

dānaṃ nāma parā kāṣṭhā mantrapradhvastakarmanāṃ paśor yā vyaktim āyāti prakṣīṇakaluṣasya ca anayoḥ śāsane siddhā dīkṣā kṣapaṇadānayoḥ.

It is referred to again in Mataṅgakriyāpāda 5:99c–101. Cf. also the verse quoted in the Śātaratnollekhinī ad 69ab: dīyate jñānasadbhāvaḥ kṣīyate ca malatrayam/ dīyate kṣīyate ceti dīkṣāśabdo dvidhocyate. The first line of this verse appears as Cintyaśāstra 32:1cd (IFP T. 13, p. 177). Cf. also the similar verse quoted in the Tantrāloka-viveka ad 1:43: dīyate jñānasadbhāvaḥ kṣīyante paśuvāsanāḥ/ dānakṣapaṇasaṃyuktā dīkṣā teneha kīrtitā. Dr. Judit TÖRZSÖK has pointed out to me that it is also quoted (with small variations) in the Svacchandatantrōddyota ad 5:88 and by Yogarāja ad Paramārthasāra 3 (a version of the first half-line only). And cf. the verse quoted in the Mṛgendravṛtti ad kriyāpāda 8:1 (and in the Mṛgendrapaddhatiṭīkā, IFP MS T. 1021, pp. 186–7):

Pratoda spoke:

[Surely] liberation may arise through knowledge (jñānena), through kriyā or through caryā; or liberation might come about through yoga. [In any case] initiation [surely only] creates the eligibility for these [means] (*tad-adhikārikā*⁸⁶⁶)? (11)

Prakāśa spoke:

dīyate jñānasadbhāvaḥ kṣīyate karmavāsanaḥ dānakṣapaṇayogyā hi dīkṣā śuddhiḥ kṛtātmanām.

Cf. also the following verse from Bhaṭṭa Bhāskara's commentary on Śivasūtra 3.28:

taddānāt kṣapaṇaṃ samyak pāśānāṃ syāt paśos tataḥ dīkṣāśabda iha prokto dānakṣapaṇalakṣaṇaḥ.

Yet further instances are quoted by BRUNNER (1977:3–4), and the nirvacana is discussed, together with Kṣemendra's irreverent parody in Deśopadeśa 8:3 (dīnāra-kṣaya-kāraṇād dīkṣety uktā...), by KAHRS 1998:93–5.

In the garbled passage quoted in the apparatus from the appendix to the Sarva-matopanyāsa it seems likely that the string of gibberish following the quotation of Parākhya 15:14 consists of the first words of three quotations: anayośśāsane is from Mataṅgakriyāpāda 2:3a (= Śataratnaśaṅgraha 69a); sā śaktis tasya is from Śataratnaśaṅgraha 70a; and dīkṣānalapluṣṭam is from Mataṅgakriyāpāda 7:40a (= Śataratnaśaṅgraha 72a). The last two verses of the passage (from dharmādharma-kṣayakārī to sarvatra siddhyati) are cited, prefaced by tad uktaṃ parākhye, in Jñānaprakāśa's Śivāgamādimāhātmyaśaṅgraha, as well as in the Dīkṣādarśa (see Appendix I, C:54–5). They may therefore have belonged to the Parākhya, perhaps even to this chapter. If they did belong to this chapter, the most likely place to insert them might be here, just before Pratoda's question of 15:11. They might be interpreted thus:

This dīkṣā of the supreme Lord destroys the [accumulated rewards of] good and bad action. Liberation is not attained through knowledge (jñānataḥ), through yoga, or through caryā; it is through dīkṣā, according to this system (atra), that liberation [is to be attained] for all living beings in this universe (iha). By that power of Śiva, liberation is [something that can be] achieved (?) for all souls (sarvatra).

Pratoda's question in 15:11 would be a plausible rejoinder to this. Three considerations could be said to speak against its inclusion into the text: its overuse of otiose particles is an awkwardness that is not characteristic of our author; the text makes sense without it; and there are no obvious triggers (such as homoioteleuton) that could have caused its omission. Of course there are responses to these considerations: no trigger is required for omission; the text can often be construed even when it is wrong; and poor transmission in the testimonia might account for what may be judged to be uncharacteristic particle usage. But the first consideration has persuaded me to leave this unit out of the text.

⁸⁶⁶This is an odd expression if it is intended as I have translated, and one could consider emending 11d to dīkṣā tadadhikārakṛt, but I prefer to accept the transmitted text and regard it as aīśa usage.

Before that [salvific initiation] there is [already] eligibility (adhikārah)—[bestowed] in the form of rite of induction into the cult as a neophyte (saṃayīkaraṇātmaḥ),—which is taught to be for the regular recitation of scripture relating to that [salvific initiation(?)] (tajjñānādhyayane), and for the being taught and for the memorising [of scripture].⁸⁶⁷ (12)

In that [rite of induction] there is no cleaning out of [all that a soul has to experience in] the tattvas. It concludes with the laying on of the [śiva]-hasta (saṃāptir hastadānataḥ).⁸⁶⁸ When this [initiator rite] goes only that far (tāvanmātrā yadā sā syāt), then the initiation is not salvific. (13)

Therefore the means is supreme initiation, together with knowledge or with action and the others [of the means]. Knowledge by itself is not seen to produce results, since, when [objects of desire such as] women or food are cognised, enjoyment of them is not possible without action. So too action depends on knowledge, for action is necessarily preceded by knowledge. (14–15)

Therefore both (dve 'pi⁸⁶⁹) knowledge and action come together as ⁸⁶⁷*ex conj.* Here I have emended the final tataḥ to a connective tathā on the grounds that neither a sequential 'then' nor another ablative 'from that' seems appropriate. This half-line is unclear, not just because it is not obvious what the intended referent of the initial tat is (perhaps we should rather interpret 'belonging to Him'), but also because the intended sense of the three terms is not certain. Where just the terms śravaṇa and adhyayana are juxtaposed (e.g. in Tantrāloka 2:46), they may be assumed to refer to being taught and to svādhyāya respectively. Svacchanda 4:79 also gives three terms:

saṃayī saṃskṛto hy evaṃ; vācane 'syārhatā bhavet śravaṇe 'dhyayane home pūjanādaḥ tathaiva ca.

Kṣemarāja's Svacchandatantrodyota thereon explains these three as follows: vācanaṃ buddhyāroḥāyāvartanaṃ; śravaṇam arthabodhaḥ; adhyayanaṃ vedavat satatā-pāṭha āgamagranthasya; ādiśabdena japadhyānādayaḥ. The Parākhya's smaraṇa may then correspond to the Svacchanda's vācana and the other two terms be understood as Kṣemarāja interprets them.

⁸⁶⁸It is exactly at this point that saṃayadīkṣā is concluded in the Somaśambhupaddhati (saṃayadīkṣāvidhi 115, BRUNNER 1977:109). Cf. also Rāmanātha's Siddhāntadīpikā 136cd (IFP MS T.914, p.9) śivahastapradānena saṃskṛtaḥ saṃayī kṛtaḥ. The interpretation I previously offered of Parākhya 15:13 (GOODALL 1998:362, fn. 588), in which I had assumed that hastadānataḥ referred to salvific initiation and that the text was contrasting gnosis with ritual, now seems quite impossible. This mistake seems especially foolish, but less foolish misunderstandings of the same kind are inevitable when we examine passages from poorly transmitted unedited texts, since it is often impossible to understand enough of their context.

⁸⁶⁹Note that this is an aśa usage, since dve should be pragṛhya. The same usage the means to attain the fruit (phalopāyasamāgate). And caryā and yoga too are taught to be subsidiary to knowledge and action (citkriyānugatāv api).⁸⁷⁰ (16)

All caryā, which consists of observances (caraṇalakṣaṇā), depends on (?) the performance of kriyā (kriyācāragrahā). Yoga, which consists of pratyāhāra and other [constituents] is dependent on the knowledge of meditation (samādhijñānasamśritaḥ). (17)

†Therefore, since one who is endowed with knowledge about doctrine and about ritual action (jñānavān yaḥ kriyāvān) is taught to be a guru (deśikaḥ),⁸⁷¹ [the obligation to perform] homa and worship is slight (svalpam) for one who enjoys the assistance of that kriyā which (yā kriyā... tatparigrahagasya) is accompanied by caryā and equipped with knowledge of doctrine†.⁸⁷² (18–19b) appears again below in 15:20c, as well as in Appendix I.A:2c–3a.

⁸⁷⁰Both ideas seem oddly expressed, and it is possible that the verse has been wrongly constituted and interpreted.

⁸⁷¹Cf., e.g., Mataṅgakriyāpāda 5:3–4c (in place of 4cd BHATT has marked a lacuna, but 4c can be supplied from the quotation of these pādas ad Mataṅgavidyāpāda 26:63, p. 567):

vidyāpadārthakuśalaḥ kriyāpādagatakramaḥ yogapādakṛtābhyāsaś caryāpādānuvartakaḥ gurur dīkṣaṁ prakurvīta.

Cf. also the verse Kṣemarāja quotes in his Netroddyota ad 16:77c–78b(?):

na kriyārahitaṁ jñānaṁ na jñānarahitā kriyā kriyājñānaviniṣpannaḥ ācāryaḥ paśupāśahā.

Cf. also the following verse cited (as a pūrvapakṣa) by Śivāgrayogin in the 5th pariccheda of the Śaivaparibhāṣā (Madras edition, p. 311 and by Umāpati in Pauṣkarabhāṣya 4 on p. 229):

jñānaṁ pradhānaṁ na tu karmahīnaṁ karma pradhānaṁ na tu buddhihīnaṁ
tasmāt tayoṛ eva bhavet prasiddhir na hy ekapakṣo vihaḡaḥ prayāti.

⁸⁷²The rhetorical structure and so also the sense of this entire unit are uncertain to me. One might also attempt it thus:

Therefore [since they are all thus interlinked,] that kriyā that is qualified by jñāna is [also inevitably] accompanied by caryā. He who [truly] has knowledge is taught to be [inevitably at the same time] a disciplined (yataḥ) teacher endowed with kriyā. And one who has that [teacher] to help him has [relatively] little homa and worship to perform.

Such a one has the authority [to initiate] (adhikāro 'sya); he is taught to be the cause of grace for bound souls (*paśvanugrahaḥkāraṇaḥ*⁸⁷³). (19cd)

For him ritual action (kṛtam) is not salvific (muktidam), since it is through initiation that [he receives] liberation. Both (*dve 'pi*⁸⁷⁴) knowledge and action for initiates are [only] to keep them mindful [of the Lord].⁸⁷⁵ (20)

Through these [viz. knowledge and action] they remain mindful of that supreme Lord over all (tasya parasya parameṣṭhinaḥ). For (yataḥ) from Him [come] all fruits, [that is to say both] supernatural pleasures and liberation (bhuktimuktiphalam), for the bound soul. (21)

Pratoda spoke:

If that is so, then all fruits can be accomplished through being mindful of Him, for bathing [in the manner enjoined for initiates] and other such [post-initiatory practices]⁸⁷⁶ would not be established to be means towards those [fruits]. (22)

Prakāśa spoke:

If, however, the accomplishment of the goal (sādhyaṇiṣpattiḥ) comes about [entirely] through [the one] means [that is initiation] (sādhanāt), then use of ritual action subsequent to that (taduttarakriyāyogaḥ) would not serve any purpose (nopāyatvaṃ prapadyate). (23)

Or [a goal is accomplished not by one means but] because (yataḥ) the totality of necessary factors (sāmagrī) is complete. That in turn (sāpi) is established to be of two kinds: that which is independent (nirapekṣā)

⁸⁷³Some might prefer to emend to °kāraḥ. I have chosen not to do so because it appears to be a common feature of the style of the Parākhya that certain nouns at the end of tatpuruṣa compounds are treated adjectivally (see p. lxxxii). The half-line could perhaps be interpreted: 'He has the adhikāra which is the cause of grace [in the form of dīkṣā bestowed] upon bound souls.' But cf. the verse quoted in the Netroddyota in fn. 871 on p. 392.

⁸⁷⁵As we shall see below, the Parākhya does not leave this radical stance unqualified, for Prakāśa proceeds to distinguish two varieties of initiation: one which is by itself salvific and one which is salvific only when the post-initiatory rules of the cult (i.e. the four pādas) are followed. Cf., e.g., Kiraṇa 6:7-9.

⁸⁷⁶It is possible that snānādīnām is a corruption of jñānādīnām, which would then refer to the four pādas. But it is not impossible for snāna to stand at the head of a list of duties enjoined for followers of the cult, for it is usually treated first, e.g. in the Somaśambhupaddhati and in Kiraṇa 13, the first chapter after the so-called 'vidyā-pāda' (see BRUNNER 1992a:265 but also GOODALL 1998:182-4 for the secondariness of the pāda divisions in that text).

and that which is dependent [on other factors] (sāpekṣā). That which is dependent [on other factors] is held to be for the wise (jñāninām), and that which is independent is taught to be for the ignorant, as [easy as] getting pleasure with a lover (kāminīsukhayogavat).⁸⁷⁷ (24–25b)

So too initiation as well is dependent [on post-initiatory observances] (sāpekṣā), [or] independent (nirapekṣā). [It may be] cleansed of the [obligation to follow the] rules (samayaiḥ), [i.e.] the following of observances (samayācāraiḥ) that consist in worship and so forth (arcanādyaiḥ) that have been taught above.⁸⁷⁸ The other [dependent type functions] together with these [observances] not having been cleansed away. Therefore [initiation is] of two kinds [which are distinguished] in accordance with what precedes the fruit [of liberation].⁸⁷⁹ (25c–26)

Pratoda spoke:

If initiation is established to be of two kinds, dependent and not [dependent], then when the independent kind [is employed], celibacy and such [like observances] must be pointless. (27)

Prakāśa spoke:

Celibacy [and other observances] are (sthitam) for the sake of the [continued] functioning of social institutions and practices (āśramācāra-vṛttyartham). Otherwise Śaivas would be reviled as being without correct practices (nirācārāḥ) and without social groupings (nirāśramāḥ). (28)

There are no particular benefits of those [practices and so forth to be derived] from the variety of practices that can be chosen (vikalpitaḥ); but still this variety of practices (vṛttibhedah) must be protected (paripālyah), just as [the caste hierarchy of] brahmins and the other castes [must be respected] (dvijādivat).⁸⁸⁰ (29)

So too, even though there is a variety of āśramas, no [corresponding]

⁸⁷⁷From the following sentence it becomes clear that the text is making a general statement. The idea appears to be that simple means and instructions are usually given to fools, more complex ones to the intelligent ⁸⁷⁸Presumably they were taught in one of the missing chapters 7–13.

⁸⁷⁹If the text is correct here, then Prakāśa's speech concludes with what is perhaps a deliberately obscure statement of the doctrine that there is no difference in the fruit attained by salvific initiation, thus providing a natural context for Pratoda's question on this point.

⁸⁸⁰*ex conj.* ISAACSON (letter of 22.vi.2001). The transmitted dvijādivat is also interpretable: 'just as brahmins [must]'; but with this conjecture the verse is more pointed, since it now offers another instance of variety, that of caste groupings, which has no ultimate soteriological value.

variety of results is taught. «Therefore,» as a means to accomplishing the fruit [of liberation] the supreme Soul has taught knowledge and action (prokte dṛkkriye). (30)

And for children and others [incapable of following the post-initiatory observances of the cult] He has taught the cleansing of the post-initiatory observances and such⁸⁸¹ (samayādiviśodhanam), by which the activities referred to as knowledge and action (vyāpāro dṛkkriyākhyāḥ) are therefore (ataḥ) excluded (vyāvṛttaḥ) for them (teṣu). (31abcd).

And the others⁸⁸² [viz. those capable of following post-initiatory observances] cannot have liberation without [recourse] to means that are subsequent [to initiation]. (31ef)

Pratoda spoke:

Children are not entitled [to receive initiation] (adhikāro na bālānām), because they are without divine grace (śaktipātavarjanāt).⁸⁸³ By this ⁸⁸¹It is not clear to me what else might be included by the ādi, for I would expect the term samaya to cover the pādas, but perhaps yoga is meant to be excluded, as in Rāmakaṇṭha's gloss when explaining Kiraṇa 6:11ab (samayāṁś cāṅganādīnām aśaktatvād viśodhayet): ...ye samayaśabdenoktāḥ kriyājñānacaryātmakā upāyās tān viśodhayet (Kiraṇavṛtti 6:11.3-4). Commenting on Svacchanda 4:87c-88b, bālabālīśavṛddhastrībhogabhugvyādhitātmanām

eṣāṁ nirbījīkā dīkṣā samayādivivarjitā,

Kṣemarāja's Svacchandatantrōddyota offers the explanation: ādiśabdāt pavitrakādividhiḥ.

Note that a natural interpretation of the above quoted verse of the Svacchanda allows for the eligibility for initiation of idiots, the aged, women, hedonists and the sick. For Rāmakaṇṭha's rejection of such a literal understanding, see fn. 883 below.

⁸⁸²This translates the conjecture na cānyeṣām. If one eschews such a conjecture, then it would be necessary to suppose the loss of some text between 15:31d and 15:31e.

⁸⁸³The guru should only perform initiation when he can infer that Śiva has bestowed grace on the initiand in a śaktipāta. He infers this by such signs as devotion to Śiva and dispassion in the face of setbacks or successes. The problem with initiating children, therefore, is not really that they could not have received śaktipāta but that it cannot be inferred even if they should have received it. When śaktipāta takes place is discussed at length in Kiraṇa 5 and in Rāmakaṇṭha's Kiraṇavṛtti thereon (the Kiraṇa's teaching that it takes place when there is a blockage in a person's experience known as karmasāmya is distorted by Rāmakaṇṭha, for whom malaparipāka is the essential prerequisite—see GOODALL, 1998:xxxii-xxxvi, 215-20 and chapter 5). What initiation effects for different kinds of initiates is the subject of Kiraṇa 6, and here Rāmakaṇṭha attempts to show that each term in the well-known lists of relatively incompetent initiands who are to be given nirapekṣā initiation actually refers to a class of persons sufficiently mature and sane that it would be possible for the guru to observe in them the signs from which he could infer that they had received a salvific śaktipāta; thus bāla he reinterprets to reasoning how can children be recipients of initiation? (32)

Prakāśa spoke:

One kind of grace is direct, the other is through an intermediary chain (pāraṃparyakramāt paraḥ). The grace that is direct, according to this system,⁸⁸⁴ is that which comes from sitting down at the guru's feet (gurūpasadanāt).⁸⁸⁵ (33)

The other [kind] that is through an intermediary chain is the grace that is bestowed on children and such [others as are incapable]. As their being invited depends on others, so the fruit is brought about through those [others]. (34)

Since they are drawn towards (samākṛṣṭāḥ) that fruit by a rite [of initiation] (karmanā) that is caused by those [others] (taddhetunā), accordingly (tathā) these souls too (cetanāḥ) are in the end (ante) happy (hrṣṭāḥ) by attaining the fruit of that [initiation] (tatphalayogataḥ). (35)

Pratoda spoke:

Is it the case that once eligibility (adhikāre)⁸⁸⁶ has been attained one cannot become reborn in this world? Or can he have some further rebirth? Tell me plainly. (36)

Prakāśa spoke:

It is proven through scripture (āgamataḥ) that there is [ultimate] bliss for the person for whom that means [of initiation] has been correctly (samyak) performed (vyāpṛtam), since it connects with what reveals [the true nature of] souls (nṛṇāṃ vyañjakayogataḥ). (37)

[When] initiation, which is that which reveals (vyañjikā), occurs, then liberation, which is that which is revealed, comes about (vyaṅgyo mokṣas tadā bhavet).⁸⁸⁷ When [in spite of a candidate's being eligible to receive it] mean a juvenile (see Kiraṇavṛtti ad 6:5-6 and GOODALL 1998:360-5).

⁸⁸⁵What is meant is that the aspirant himself turns to a guru and receives instruction from him and then initiation. The word anugraha can be used to refer to initiation or to the śaktipāta that precedes it, but here it seems to refer to the whole process (including both of these) that brings about the soul's liberation by Śiva. Turning to a guru is presented as the natural reaction to receiving Śiva's salvific śaktipāta in Kiraṇa 5:5-6 and as the next step thereafter in Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 1:17-18 (both of which are quoted in fn. 196 on p. 198 above).

⁸⁸⁶Pratoda's question is ambiguous, for he might mean the eligibility to receive salvific initiation or the eligibility for liberation that initiation confers. Prakāśa's reply gives answers to both possibilities.

⁸⁸⁷Cf. the rhetorically similar half-line 4:163cd.

there is no initiation, then [that candidate] becomes a Rudra (rudratvaṃ prāpnuyāt) [after death].⁸⁸⁸ (38)

Then (tat), when liberation as a Rudra (*rudrasāyujye*⁸⁸⁹) has come about, he will again be liberated [but this time ultimately]. (39ab)

And he who, though he has eligibility [for the practice of all four pādas attained through initiation], cultivates (abhyaset) [only] that knowledge (taj jñānam)⁸⁹⁰ in accordance with [Śaiva] teaching (upadeśena) even-

⁸⁸⁸ Cf. Mālinīvijayottara 12:41-2:

yo yatra yojitas tattve sa tasmān na nivartate tatphalaṃ sarvaṃ āsādyā śivayukto 'pavṛjyate ayukto 'py adhvaśaṃśuddhiṃ samprāpya bhuvaneśataḥ śuddhaḥ śivatvaṃ āyāti dagdhasaṃsārabandhanaḥ.

⁸⁸⁹ Properly sāyujya should mean 'union'; but I assume that it is here loosely used as a synonym for mokṣa even though the conception of liberation is not one of union with a deity. The same usage is to be found, e.g. in Svāyambhuvāsūtrasaṅgraha 1:18 and 9:14, even though it is clear, for instance from 4:1, that the Svāyambhuvāsūtrasaṅgraha's conception of liberation is of release from bonds and revelation of the soul's innate Śiva-hood. It is common in other early Saiddhāntika sources too, e.g., Kiraṇa 61:34; Sārdhatriśatikālottara 8:29, 22:4; Rauravasūtrasaṅgraha 10:84 and in the quotation ascribed thereto in the Mṛgendravṛtti ad kriyāpāda 7:64; Mokṣakārikā 89. Cf. also Parākhya 14:107a, where it may, however, be used in its literal sense.

⁸⁹⁰ I had earlier interpreted: 'He who, though he has eligibility [for initiation is not initiated, but] cultivates that knowledge...' The immediately preceding sentence and the api suggested this interpretation to me. But if we were really to understand this and the following verse to be talking about cases of grace attained through practice of the four pādas by those who have not had initiation in spite of being eligible for it, then the Parākhya's position would be unusual for the early Śaiva Siddhānta. For the Kiraṇa (and the Kiraṇavṛtti) and the Svāyambhuvāsūtrasaṅgraha (2:24), for example, (both of which express their position on this issue clearly), initiation is vital. In some later South Indian texts the importance of initiation is diminished and greater stress is placed on relying on knowledge and/or devotion. See, for example, Ajita 18:2-5:

dikkālādyanavacchinno vāñmano'tītagocaraḥ niṣkalo 'niṣkalaś caiva sarvagaḥ sarvadṛk sadā tajjñānād eva muktiḥ syād bhaktānāṃ ca janārdana tatpūjāpi dadāty eva phalaṃ indrapadādikam pūjito devadeveśo bhaktiṃ jñānaṃ prayacchati jñānena bhaktiyogena vinānyaḥ karmakoṭibhiḥ prāpyate na kvacin muktis tasmāl līngārcanaṃ param.*

Cf. also Suprabhedāgama IV, 1:2-5b, quoted in BHATT's apparatus thereto:

jñānaṃ pravartate vatsa bhrāntinirnāśanāya ca adhvaśreṇivināśāya śivavyaktikarāya ca

tually attains liberation (kramān nirvṛtim ṛcchati) by the power of his cultivation [of knowledge] (bhāvanābalataḥ), according to this system (as-min). (39c–40b)

So too when past actions are cut off by means of ritual action [alone] (kriyātaḥ), he does not remain bound. Because of Śiva's will to bestow grace «he will rest in the pure body, free of mala».⁸⁹¹ In the same way too he may receive grace through caryā or also by means of yoga. (40c–41)

Pratoda spoke:

Must it not be initiation, together with the group of four [pādas] headed by knowledge, that is the means to accomplish liberation? How can the goal be accomplished by using only one among the auxiliary parts [of this composite cause]? (42)

Prakāśa spoke:

andhakāravat ajñānaṃ jñānaṃ dīpavad ucyate jñeyam bhāskaravat proktaṃ paścāj jñānaṃ vinaśyati pāśajālāni vicchedya dikṣādi jñānaṃ ucyate paśupāśapatitvaṃ ca jñānenāśrayate budhaḥ jñānenaiva tu kaivalyaprāptis tatra na saṃśayaḥ.

Also Devikālottara 79ab: jñānenaiva yathā mokṣas tathā siddhir nirarthikā.

It might be supposed that the lessening in importance of salvific initiation was an inevitable corollary of the non-dualism adopted by the authors of these texts; and indeed the two phenomena are almost certainly not unrelated at this later period. But, as I have attempted to demonstrate (GOODALL, forthcoming B), the one indisputably early Siddhāntatantra that is trenchantly non-dualist, the Sarvajñānottara, still insists upon the centrality of salvific initiation. As I have demonstrated in the same article, two of the partial editions that have been published of this work (that of Devakoṭṭai, 1923 and that of the Adyar Library Bulletin of 1998) are fundamentally unreliable and completely mislead the reader on this point. The hard-to-come-by edition of BRAHMĀNANDASVĀMIN (Tanjore, 1933) is in every respect more reliable. For a further example of the Devakoṭṭai and Adyar editions deviating from all the MSS available to me as well as from the Tanjore edition see footnotes 332 and 348 on pp. 238 and 245.

The one early Siddhāntatantra which famously does allow the observance of one or other of the pādas independent of initiation to lead to liberation is plainly dualist: the Mataṅga (see vidyāpāda 26:63 and kriyāpāda 1:1–2, for a discussion of which see GOODALL [drawing also on SANDERSON *1996a] 1998:371–3, fn. 607 and 366–7, fn. 596).

The point that the Parākhyā is making, as becomes clearer in 15:42–4 below, is rather that initiation followed by the application of all four pādas together is a relatively effortless route to liberation, but if someone takes initiation and then follows only one of the pādas, that person will still eventually, and with effort, attain liberation.

⁸⁹¹ ex conj. Cf. 3:58 and 68 for liberation being expressed by the notion of entering Śiva's body.

The accomplishment of a goal can be achieved by an undivided [composite cause] (abhinnena); [but] it can also sometimes come about by a divided [part of that composite cause] (bhinnena). Now undivided it requires no effort (abhinno 'pi nirārambhaḥ); divided can it not accomplish the same [goal] (bhinnas tatsādhako na kim)? (43)

By a single [divided part] the fruit [can be attained] with trouble; [it is attained] without trouble by the combination [of all the parts] (samudāyataḥ). With this [combination] (tena) this root cause, called initiation, is complete.⁸⁹² (44)

Its fruit arises through maturation, just as [fruit arises] from sowing seeds in the ground. That fruit is Śiva-hood, which releases [from the bonds] (muktidam), [and] which is of the nature of bliss. (45)

Pratoda spoke:

Some hold that this liberation is empty of the existence of all things (sarvārthabhāvaśūnyā), since it is when the existence of those has reality (tadbhāvasadbhāve)⁸⁹³ that the soul is involved in what characterises saṃsāra (saṃsāradharmagaḥ).⁸⁹⁴ (46)

Prakāśa spoke:

If liberation were not real (abhāvarūpayā muktyā), a means [to accomplish it] could not reach it (sādhanaṃ na tadāśritam),⁸⁹⁵ since its nature should be to accomplish a [really existing] goal (sādhyasādhanarūpatvāt). [And] who would use a means [to such a goal] (prayoktā sādhanasya kaḥ)? (47)

Everybody requires motivation (sarvaḥ prayojanāpekṣī).⁸⁹⁶ If the motivating goal were empty (śūnyam), then how would they practise caryā

⁸⁹² One might instead interpret 'Therefore it is this whole that is the root cause called initiation.'

⁸⁹⁴ For the expression saṃsāradharma, cf. Mṛgendravṛtti ad 2:12 (p. 63): manasāṃ hi saṃsāradharmaiḥ sukhaduḥkhādibhir yogaḥ... (Cf. also Bhāgavatapurāṇa 11.2:49.)

It is not clear to me whether or not a particular rival's conception of liberation is intended here. I am inclined to think not, because in the discussion that follows, only the notions of the nature and attainment of liberation of close rivals, various groups of Pāśupatas, are recognisably discussed.

⁸⁹⁵ Perhaps this is too awkward and one should consider emendation to sādhanaṃ na tadā sthitam: 'By liberation not being real, a means [to accomplish it] could not then be established, since...'

⁸⁹⁶ This recalls Kumāṛila's famous maxim prayojanam anuddiśya na mando 'pi pravartate (Ślokavārttika, sambandhākṣepaparihāra 55ab); but the formulation is not particularly close and there is no strong reason to suppose dependence on the Ślokavārttika here.

and so forth for its sake? (48)

Or if observances, caryā and so forth were not established to be ultimately real (sthitā na paramārthena), then tell [me] what thing would be established to be ultimately real? (49)

If you declare [that liberation must be] 'empty' (śūnyabhāṣaṇe) on the grounds that all the sufferings of the cycle of rebirth do not exist [in it] (sarvasaṃsāraduḥkhānām abhāvāt), then this 'liberation' that you claim [is a label that you use] with the intention of speaking about something else (iṣṭā sānyavivakṣāto muktiḥ),⁸⁹⁷ since [real liberation is not empty, for in it] there exist His qualities (tadguṇabhāvataḥ).⁸⁹⁸ (50)

Pratoda spoke:

Other disputants, who wish to attain His qualities, claim [that liberation is when there is] a transference of [God's] qualities [into the soul]. † ... †.⁸⁹⁹ (51)

Prakāśa spoke:

⁸⁹⁷ ex conj. ISAACSON. The wording of this awkward conjectured line is suggested by the parallel below in 15:55. To paraphrase: 'You use the word 'liberation' to refer to something else that is not true liberation, since true liberation means having God's qualities.'

⁸⁹⁸ This has to be construed as though -taḥ had the same force as -tvāt (see p. lxxxii).

⁸⁹⁹ This is the viewpoint ascribed to Pāñcārthika Pāśupatas. See Mokṣakārikā 129c-131b, Paramokṣanirāsakārikā 6-41, Mataṅgavṛtti ad kriyāpāda 8:10c-12b, p. 162, and see Umāpati's Paṇḍikābhāṣya ad 4:48, pp. 231-4, and the partly identical discussion in the fifth pariccheda of Śivāgrayogin's Śaivaparibhāṣā, p. 156. Umāpati (pp. 231-2) quotes a group of verses that neatly summarise what are well-known as the three Pāśupata views:

*tad uktam abhiyuktaiḥ
yathā kastūrikāmodaḥ paṭādiṣu tathātmani śivasya tadguṇā muktau saṅkrāṃanti tathā svayam iti pāśupatā muktīm svakīyāṃ paramāṃ viduḥ nijāśrayasthitair eva tadānīm aiśvarair guṇaiḥ svayam āviśyate siddhaḥ puruṣas tu grahair iva itthaṃ caiva tu kāpālās tatsāmyaṃ muktīm ūcire śivatulyaṃ pūrvam eva samutpadyata ity ataḥ utpattisamatāpakṣo mahāvratibhir ucyaṭe.*

The damaged second half of our verse could perhaps be restored as follows: tasmāt tadgatarūpaḥ syāt saṅkrāntīyā guṇasādhakaḥ. 'Therefore he who aspires to attain the qualities [of the Lord] becomes endowed with the form that is in Him by transference.' But the transmitted aṣṭaras suggest a reference to observances, and so perhaps one might consider tasmāt tadvrataacaryādir bhaved yo guṇasādhakaḥ: 'And so the performance of observances and so forth would be the factor that brings about [the attainment of the Lord's] qualities.' Neither suggestion is satisfying to me.

Is this transfer of qualities which they desire to attain total or partial? If [you say that it is] partial (ekadeśe), then attainment of those [qualities] would not [fully] take place (na tatsiddhiḥ syāt); [if you say that it is] total, [then] the supreme [Lord would end up being] devoid of [all] qualities.⁹⁰⁰ (52)

[You might, however, argue that] the attainment of [His] qualities [takes place while those qualities remain] situated still in Him (tatsthasyaiva guṇasyāptiḥ). Now this [attainment] (sāpi), do you hold it to be established as real or not real (sadasatsthītā)? You require (iṣyate) [that] this form of His (tadrūpam), which is real, because it exists, does not exist, being unreal.⁹⁰¹ (53)

How can what exists not exist? If something does not exist, how can it exist? This position is self-contradictory (parasparaviruddho 'yaṁ pakṣaḥ), and it is therefore not conclusive (na niścitaḥ), because [these qualities] are really existent in as much as they are His nature or they are not, being non-existent. This ['liberation'] that you claim [is a label that you use] with the intention of speaking about something else (iṣṭā sānyavivakṣātaḥ), since you hold it to be both real and not real.⁹⁰² (54–5)

His form, which is supreme bliss, you have spoken of as though it were non-existent (asadrūpam ivākhyātam). Thereby (anena) you have [effectively] asserted (coditā) that this liberated state of His (tanmuktau) is both existent and non-existent (sadasadrūpatā). (56)

Pratoda spoke:

It is clearly established that souls experience happiness as a result of dharma and unhappiness as a result of adharma. Some people in this world wish to attain⁹⁰³ liberation by abandoning happiness and unhap-

⁹⁰⁰ ex conj. The last pāda must be intended to advance the second alternative, that transference is total, since the subsequent discussion appears to be assuming it. Cf. Umāpati's Pauṣkarabhāṣya ad 4:48cd (p. 233): īśvarajñānasya muktau jīve saṅkramaṇa-svīkāre, īśvare jñānaṁ na syāt, tadīyajñānasyānyatra saṅkrāntatvāt. niraṁśasya jñānasyāṁśena saṅkramaṇāyogāc ca. Cf. also p. 157 of the Śaivaparibhāṣā (§ 35 on p. 343 of the Madras edition). In what follows, Prakāśa has the opponent attempt to side-step this problem by suggesting that the qualities are wholly transferred while somehow remaining also in God. Prakāśa cannot accept that they could really exist in two places, both in the liberated soul and in God.

⁹⁰¹ This sentence could no doubt be otherwise interpreted.

⁹⁰³ īpsitā might also have been used as an equivalent of iṣṭā: 'some people in this world hold'. Again it is not clear whether this is intended to be the view of a particular identifiable group. The view is not particularly distinctive. Cf. Mahābhārata 12.212:45–9. And Dr. BISSCHOP (letter of 7.xi.2001) has drawn my attention to the parallel in piness. (57)

Prakāśa spoke:

If liberation came about [simply] as a result of abandoning happiness and unhappiness, then (tena) that liberation would be pointless. From where does that other supreme bliss come [that is supposed to characterise the liberated state]? (58)

One happiness is produced (janyam) from [this or] that [particular thing]; another is said to arise of itself (anyat proktaṃ svabhāvataḥ). One [piece of] gold is [produced as result of copper or the like being] touched by [alchemical] liquid (rasasprṣtam); another occurs naturally in the earth (anyad bhūmau nisargajam).⁹⁰⁴ (59)

the Buddhacarita (12:57):

sukhaduḥkharaparityāgād avyāpārāc ca cetasaḥ.*

The final pāda of 15:60 might be considered to be evidence for the view being understood to be that of a group whose scriptures were held to be authored by Śiva.

⁹⁰⁴These are the last two of the eight types of gold listed in Arthaśāstra 2.13.3: jāmbūnadaṃ śātakumbhaṃ hāṭakaṃ vaiṇavaṃ śṛṅgaśuktijaṃ jātarūpaṃ rasavidham ākarodgataṃ ca suvarṇam. The conception that gold can be created out of copper with an alchemical preparation is, as Dr. ISAACSON has pointed out to me, commonly used in tantras as an image for the irreversible transformation that takes place in dīkṣā. See, e.g., Kiraṇa 59:36c-38b (incomprehensible, as often, in E_D):

*rasavidham yathā tāmraṃ tāmraḥbhāvād vimucyate suvarṇena sahaikatvaṃ gataṃ tad yāti hematām jñānaviddham tathā tattvaṃ paśubhāvād vimucyate

• rasavidham] $N_1D^1M^Y$; rasasiktaṃ E_D • sahaikatvaṃ] $N_1D^1M^Y$; tu hematvaṃ E_D • tad yāti hematām] $N_1D^1M^Y$; tajjātihemavat E_D • °vidham tathā tattvaṃ] conj.; °vidham yathā tattvaṃ N_1D^1 ; °vidham tathā siddham M^Y ; °vidham sa tad-vac $ca E_D$ • śivenaiva sahaikatvaṃ gataṃ tattvaṃ tu tatsamam] M^YE_D ; śivena tat sahaikatvaṃ gataṃ tatsamayaṃ bhavet N_1D^1

And cf. Sarvajñānottara 1:5-6 (in the numeration of the Devakoṭṭai edition):

tāmraśyaiva tu hematvaṃ antarlīnaṃ yathā sthitam antarlīnaṃ tathā jñeyaṃ śivatvaṃ pudgalasya tu rasavidham yathā tāmraṃ hematvaṃ pratipadyate tathātmā jñānasambandhāt śivatvaṃ pratipadyate.

Cf. also Haravijaya 6:137:

parimṛṣṭakālikam avāpya hematām na yathaiti tāmraṃ iha tāmratām punaḥ

This is visible; that is invisible. †That visible one is produced by visible means (dṛṣṭam tad dṛṣṭasādhanaṃ). And so accordingly (tad evaṃ), taking common features into consideration (cintya sāmānyam), an inference is drawn up (vyavasthitam)†.⁹⁰⁵ Alternatively (vā) this is established by scripture taught by an authoritative person [viz. Śiva] (tad āptāgama-siddham). And this [scripture taught by Śiva is something that] is firmly established for you (so 'pi saṁsthita eva te). (60)

Pratoda spoke:

Once the destruction of the retributive force of all bad deeds has come about (sarvapāpakṣaye jāte), supernatural power (siddhiḥ) comes about through liberation. †Is not everything through which this⁹⁰⁶ arising

vimalikṛtaṃ sad anutattvam icchayā tava nātha narcchati tathā svavāsanām.

In his commentary thereon Alaka cites the following verse:

rasaghṛṣṭam yathā tāmraṃ na bhūyas tāmratām vrajet evaṃ yuktaḥ śivatvena na bhūyaḥ paśutām vrajet.

Dr. ISAACSON has drawn my attention to two examples in Buddhist tantric texts: verse 51 of the Cittaviśuddhiprakaraṇa attributed to Āryadeva, rasaghṛṣṭam yathā tāmraṃ nirdoṣaṃ kāñcanaṃ bhavet jñānaśuddhyā tathā kleśāḥ samyak kalyāṇakārakāḥ, and a verse cited in Vajragarbha's commentary on the Hevajratantra (NGMPP Reel No. C 14/6, f. 50^r):

rasavidham yathā tāmraṃ na punas tāmratām vrajet jñānaviddhas (conj. ISAACSON; °bindus MS) tathā kāyo na punaḥ paśutām vrajet.

With this last verse cf. Kubjikāmatatantra 3:104 and Sekoddeśa 134.

In the transmission of these various works we find the compounds rasasiddha, rasavidha, rasasikta, and rasaghṛṣṭa. Our reading, rasasprṣṭam, is not paralleled, and it is curious that our verse contains no mention of copper. To obviate this oddity, emendation could be considered, e.g. to rasāt sṛṣṭam, 'created from an alchemical preparation', or to rasaghṛṣṭam, 'rubbed with an alchemical preparation'.

⁹⁰⁵The passage is uncertain. The use of lyap for ktvā does not occur elsewhere in these chapters and it is conceivable that we should read cintyasāmānyam as a compound and interpret 'an inference is drawn up in which common features are taken into consideration'. Dr. ACHARYA has suggested to me that what might be meant by this expression is an inference of the type more usually called sāmānyato dṛṣṭam; but is it one that allows us to determine what is the sādhana in the case of the supreme happiness of the liberated state?

⁹⁰⁶It is just conceivable that the yo in 15:61c is an unpaired relative pronoun agreeing with siddhagunodayaḥ (see introduction, p. lxxx). But this would be especially clumsy here and seems therefore unlikely. Perhaps emendation to no is possible: 'All means of [God's] qualities in the adept comes about (siddhaguṇodayaḥ) a means?^{†907} (61)

Prakāśa spoke:

The liberated soul who becomes an overlord of pure Rudras and such like [souls] can be said to be 'Siddha' for the reason that (tasmād yataḥ) everything that is to be accomplished (sādhyaṃ) has been accomplished (sādhitaṃ) by him.⁹⁰⁸ (62)

[You might object as follows: the soul] is linked with (yutaḥ) the Lord's (tad-) qualities of [true] dharma, [true] knowledge, [true] dispassion, and true power (-sadaīśvarya-),⁹⁰⁹ and so if indeed [the soul] is changed [as he passes into the liberated state] (yadi nāmānyathāsthitaḥ), [then] let [us admit] there [to] be a joining (yogaḥ) [of the soul] with [these] qualities. (63)

[We reply:] This true dharma (yo dharmāḥ ... saddharmasya)⁹¹⁰ of

are [of] no [use], since the qualities [simply] arise in the adept.' Or perhaps it is a corruption of 'sau? But no emendation has been attempted because the intention of the verse is so unclear.

⁹⁰⁷The connection of Pratoda's question with the previous does not seem to me smooth. He seems on the one hand to be suggesting that the term upāya could apply to any factor that leads to liberation (and not just to initiation or the pādas)—and to this Prakāśa apparently makes no response beyond the pointed use of the expression śivopāyāt in 15:64c—and on the other to be advancing another old Māheśvara notion of liberation: that ascribed (e.g. by Rāmakaṇṭha ad Mataṅgakriyāpāda 8:10c–12b) to the Kālāmukhas (also called Kālamukhas). This is the view that the qualities of God arise (samutpatti) in the soul at liberation (they are not transferred, as for the Pāśu-patas, or 'revealed', as the Saiddhāntikas maintain). As I have observed (GOODALL 1998:220, fn. 186), the non-Saiddhāntika term siddha tends to be used in discussions of these Māheśvara views of liberation. Prakāśa's response deals both with what is implied by the term siddha and, by asserting the Saiddhāntika abhivyaaktivāda, with the view that qualities arise in liberation that were not previously in the soul.

⁹⁰⁸In other words the term Siddha is not used for a soul who has achieved or perfected supernatural qualities that were not in him before, as the Kālāmukhas are supposed to maintain.

⁹⁰⁹This is evidently a list of the four bhāvas or positive buddhiguṇas (for the eight buddhidharmas see 4:74–90) but transformed into perfect qualities of the liberated soul (and not of the buddhi, since those must cease in liberation, as is mentioned in Bhoga-kārikā 56). (This half-line unit need not of course be taken as part of the objection given in 15:63cd, and the tad- could be interpreted differently, for instance to refer to the soul, or perhaps emended to sad-, as suggested by 15:64–7.)

⁹¹⁰It seems possible that Prakāśa in this verse intends inventively to interpret the dharma in the above list of divine qualities in the here unexpected sense of '[innate] property [which is Śiva-hood]'.

that 'Siddha' which is called Śiva-hood (śivatvākhyāḥ) [and which is] because of his very nature [present in the soul] (svabhāvataḥ)⁹¹¹ is revealed [in liberation] (abhivyaṅktiḥ) for the soul who is [a] śiva (śivātmanaḥ)⁹¹² by Śiva's means⁹¹³ (śivopāyāt). (64)

He has (tasya) that true knowledge (sajjñānam) which is left, all bonds [having] fallen away from it (sarvapāśaparicyutam).⁹¹⁴ It is pure (śuddham tat), has everything as its object (sarvaviṣayam) and is devoid of all limitations (sarvopādhībahīṣṭam). (65)

He has true dispassion (sadvairāgyam) † asatvortham †.⁹¹⁵ It relates to all desires (sārvakāmikam), because the root of [attraction towards all] objects is utterly cut off [in it]. (66)

And true power (sadaiśvaryam) with respect to everything, which consists in omniscience and omnipotence (mahājñānakriyātmakam), which is beyond all obstacle (pratighātabahirbhūtam, eternally alight (nityam udyotitam), supreme (param). (67)

Eternally linked with these qualities he becomes a 'Siddha' devoid of all defilements (amalātmakāḥ). He becomes disengaged from acting (apra-vṛttaḥ), utterly complete (susampūrṇaḥ), all-knowing, omnipotent. (68)

He is established to be an agent like Śiva; [but] in the liberated state there is no partiality [and therefore no rivalry] (na mokṣe pakṣapātītā): since he has completely performed [all] that he had to perform (sarvataḥ kṛtakṛtyatvāt), there can be no change in him.⁹¹⁶ (69)

⁹¹¹I am aware that this looks a forced interpretation, but I can just imagine that something of the kind might have been intended.

⁹¹²It might seem smoother to understand this as śivatvātmanaḥ and to take it to agree with saddharmasya, but I have not done so, for dharma has already been qualified as śivatvākhyāḥ.

⁹¹³Other analyses of this compound are probably possible here. Cf. Rāmakaṇṭha's analyses of śivajñānam in Kiraṇavṛtti 1:10.7-8, 2:33.4-8, and 3:14.1

⁹¹⁴Or perhaps 'It is taught (śiṣṭam) that he has that true knowledge from which all bonds have fallen away'. But cf. 15:73d.

⁹¹⁵Dr. ACHARYA has suggested that one could consider emendation to asattve 'rthe, 'with respect to all objects that are not of [ultimately] real'?

⁹¹⁶This verse is justifying the attribute apra-vṛttaḥ used in the previous verse. Cf. Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 2:25-6:

śivadhāmārpitasyaśya bhogabhoktur na jātucit bhokṛtvam adhikāritvaṃ patikṛtyānukāritā bhavodbhavadādātīto niṣkampārcir iva sthitaḥ mukto vyaktaśivatvo 'sau kṛtakṛtyo yatas tataḥ.

For this agent of experience who has been raised to Śiva-glory [there] never [recur] the condition of being an experiencer, the condition of being

[His] fullness [means that] all [these above mentioned] qualities are forever awakened [in him] (sarveṣāṃ guṇānāṃ sarvadodayaḥ).⁹¹⁷ [He has all] this (idam) because he is empty [of duties? of partiality?] (śūnyatā yena tena . . .).⁹¹⁸ (70abc)

And because one who is in this state of peace (śāntabhāvasthitasya ca) is conjoined with the quality of bliss (ānandaguṇasaṃyogāt), he is steeped in bliss alone (ānandenaiva bhāvitaḥ). He is established (sthitaḥ) in this system (asmin) to be like Śiva: a 'Brahmā' who has attained the enjoyment of bliss.⁹¹⁹ (70d–71)

Thus this supreme/'Para' tantra (evam etat paraṃ tantram), which reached (prāptam) Pārvatīpati from Dīpteśa, [and then reached]⁹²⁰ me. Having summarised the śāstra, I have taught it to you. (72)

May that state of the [highest] good of yours be praised (śreyaḥpadaṃ te stutam)⁹²¹ which is brahman, which is beyond all the waves of the invested with office, [nor] the obedient performance of duties [assigned] by the Lord. That liberated soul, his Śiva-hood revealed, rests like an unwavering flame, beyond the realms of Bhava and Udbhava, because he has performed [all] that he had to perform.

I have not quoted either of FILLIOZAT's unexceptionable translations (1991:67–8 and 1994:61 and 63) because they have been made to fit Sadyojyotis's Svāyambhuvavṛtti, the interpretation of which is slightly different, for instance in that it takes the first word as an inverted bahuvrīhi. Sadyojyotis there tells us that Bhava and Udbhava are names respectively for all that is below and all that is above suddhavidyā.

⁹¹⁷This half-line, and perhaps the whole verse, is a commentary on the attribute susampūrṇa in 15:68c.

⁹¹⁸If the text is correct here, then there is perhaps an ellipsis, and it is not clear to me what is to be supplied. Furthermore I am not certain that there should be the division in sense that I have understood after idam, although it is suggested by the ca. Perhaps we can interpret śūnyatā as meaning śāntatā or consider emending it to śāntatā.

⁹²⁰We have to read prāptam twice (kākāḥṣinyāyena). The text first reached Umāpati from Dīpteśa and then reached Prakāśa, who summarised and taught it to Pratoda. In the apparatus here I have drawn attention to the fact that early accounts are discrepant here. According to the Kiraṇa (10:8ab) Dīptarudra teaches the Acintya (not the Parākhyā) to Gopati, who teaches it to Ambikā. The Parākhyā is there taught by Śivākhyā-[rudra] to Mahākāla (Kiraṇa 10:27cd). According to the [Pauṣkara] Pārameśvara, however, it is the Tantra which Śivākhyā taught to Mahākāla, and the Parākhyā was taught by Devapati to Dharma (GOODALL 1998:410, verses 21 and 22).

⁹²¹This does not seem to me particularly smooth, but I hesitate to emend further. The first two of the last three syllables could be interpreted as te 'stu, 'may there be for you', but this would leave the final syllable (taḥ in M^y) unconstrued. A corruption of tat is unlikely, since that would unnecessarily duplicate the tat at the beginning of deceptive defilements [that are born of] the network of the bonds, which is taught to be the great union (bṛhadyogoktam), which is supreme because it consists in the [divine] properties left behind [when all else that is adventitious has fallen away],⁹²² —that eternal state which those too, skilled in discerning, daily meditate upon who by yoga have cast off all the defilements of their faults and who are men of illustrious names.⁹²³ (73)

Thus the fifteenth chapter, expounding what is accomplished in liberation, in the great tantra called the Supreme.

15:73c. A corruption of the plural vaḥ (referring to future recipients of the text) is possible, but that would render the te (referring, presumably, to Pratoda) superfluous. Perhaps one could consider correcting the last syllable to the indeclinable particle śam. Cf. the final half-line of the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha, 23:16: svāyambhuvam idaṃ viprāḥ samāptam; svastir astu vaḥ. One more possibility, suggested to me by Dr. ISAACSON (letter of 25.vi.2001), is to emend the final syllable to tat and the tad at the beginning of 15:73c to yad.

⁹²²I am aware that this must seem very bold, not only because this is a very free and interpretative rendering of parīṣiṣṭadharmaparamam, but also because the expression itself has been introduced by conjectural emendation. It may well be wrong; but I consider it just conceivable that it was intended, for note that it may echo 15:65ab. Dr. ACHARYA has suggested to me ca viśiṣṭadharmaparamam as a possible emendation, which might be interpreted 'which is supreme because of the special properties [of the Lord that characterise it]'.

This iti must mark the end of the quotation from the Parākhya, but it is worth recording the next three lines in M and T. 231: itthaṃ dvidhā samācamya kṛta-nyāsaḥ prasannadhīḥ/ gṛhastho brahmacārī ca pūrvaṃ vandeta vaidikīm (em.; vaidikaṃ MSS)/ punaḥ śaivīm yatī yad vā sandhyām eva śivātmikām/ uktaṃ śrīmatśvāyambhuvādaḥ—snānam ā śīrasaḥ kṛtvā samācamyodagānanaḥ...etc. [This last line is in fact Mṛgendrakriyāpāda 2:9ab.] T. 106 does not appear to have this; it continues instead with a mantra: oṃ haḥ astrāya huṃ phaḥ/ vāma-karaṃ vāradvayaṃ...

In the Sakalāgamasāṅgraha the quotation of 16c–17 is immediately followed (without intervening iti) by these verses:

Since these lines overlap in content with 14 and 15 (and since the Jñānaratnāvalī* transmits other verses following 17) I have assumed that they do not belong to the Parākhya.

Varṇāśramacandrikā, p. 31 and Śaivasannyāsapaddhati, p. 19:

C. ON CASTE AND ON DĪKṢĀ

Of the following, verses 41–44b appear in Vedajñāna's Dikṣādarśa* (IFP MSS T. 76, pp. 25–6, T. 153, pp. 41–2, and T. 279, pp. 22–3) and also a Pratiṣṭhāvidhi* of a Candrasekharabhaṭṭa (IFP MS T. 370, pp. 249–50). Verses 41–2 appear (with the attribution parākhye) in Jñānaprakāśa's Śivāgamādimāhātmyasaṅgraha* (IFP MS T. 372, p. 1249 and T. 281, p. 164) and (with the attribution tathā parākhye) on p. 60 of the Varṇāśramacandrikā. The first verse only (prefaced by yad uktam śrīmatparākhye) is quoted in the Mṛgendrapaddhatiṭikā* (IFP MS T. 1021, p. 223). Verses 43c–44b are quoted on p. 76 of the Śivāgrabhāṣya (with the attribution tathā hi śrīmatparākhye). The units 43c–44b and 44c–44f (with an intervening line of prose) are quoted without attribution on p. 134 of the Mysore edition of Śivāgra's Śaivaparibhāṣā. Verses 43c–44f are quoted consecutively in Trilocanaśiva's Siddhāntasamuccaya* (IFP MS T. 284, p. 141 and IFP MS T. 206, pp. 71–2). The unit 44c–44f appears (prefaced by the attribution tathā śrīmatparākhye) in Nirmalamāṇi's Kriyākramadyotikāprabhāvvyākhyā (p. 268, lines 24–5):

This quotation is preceded by śivatvavyaktisampūrṇaḥ saṃsārī na punas tadā/ kirāṇe/ atha dīkṣādhvaśuddhātmasāṅgasabrahmapaṇcakam/ sūkṣmasvāyambhuve [sic.] and it is followed by parākhye/ dīkṣayā maṇḍale pūjā tatpraveśavidhiḥ kramah/ tatvaśuddhir anutkarṣo muktir ekena janmanā [sic.] Thus the labels in this portion of the text, as is clear from the Kiraṇa quotation (Kiraṇa 1:22ab), probably usually follow the quotations to which they belong.

Kriyākramadyotikā of Aghoraśiva, p. 365:

तदुक्तं पराख्ये

The same unit is quoted in the Dikṣādarśa* (IFP MSS T. 76, p. 3, T. 153, p. 4, and T. 279, p. 2), where it is prefaced by parākhya and followed immediately (without an intervening iti) by the much cited verse beginning asmāt pravitatād bandhāt, which is Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha 2:24. Note also that it appears in a larger block of verses quoted (without attribution) from the Parākhya in the appendix to the Sarvamatopanyāsa* (IFP MS T. 284, p. 26 and IFP MS T. 801, p. 20), for which see the apparatus to 15:9ff. It is possible that this unit should be incorporated into the text before Pratoda's question in 15:11.

I have not found this in the other transcript of the Śivāgamādimāhātmyasaṅgraha* of Jñānaprakāśa (IFP MS T. 1059), but that transcript does contain the following passage of unattributed quotations (IFP T. 1059, pp. 27–8):

vyaṃ ca. dikṣāvihīne tu jñānādikaṃ sarvaṃ vyarthaṃ syāt. jñānāder asvā-

54ab. यदुक्तं 'धर्माधर्मक्षयकरी दीक्षा' इति । Mrgendravṛttidīpikā ad vidyāpāda 3:5c–6b (p. 30). But note that Aghoraśiva quotes the same unit ad Ratnatrayaparīkṣā 165c–166b attributing it to the Svāyambhuva (in which it seems not to occur).

Though no attribution is given here, the first of these half-lines is Parākhyā 15:9ab, and the third occurs in the passage just cited above. But observe that this same third half-line elsewhere belongs closely to the half-lines that follow it: see the two-verse fragment of the Ur-Pauṣkara cited in Goodall 1998:361, fn. 588 as constituted by Sanderson (*1996a:43).

This group of verses is indeed much cited in the Ñānāvaraṇaviḷakkattarumpata-vivekam, for, aside from the instances cited above, the first 5 half-lines only are quoted in Vol. 2, p. 1104; the last 4 half-lines only are quoted in Vol. 2, p. 1065; the first 4 half-lines only are quoted in Vol. 2, pp. 1088–9; the passage is quoted missing out the half-line beginning śāntyādi in Vol. 2, p. 1069; the last 6 half-lines only are quoted in Vol. 2, pp. 647 and 668; the fifth and sixth half-lines are quoted in Vol. 2, p. 625 and again on p. 1063; and the third, fourth, fifth, seventh and eighth half-lines are quoted in Vol. 2, p. 675.

The final word is treated as a vocative in the edition, but since we have only one other in the entire text (4:166b), it seems more probable, if this is indeed a verse from the Parākhyā, that it should have been a nominative.

In IFP MS T. 170 this is preceded by atra and followed by iti ca śrīmatparākhye/ śrutibalāt "vahnikuṇḍārcitaṁ devaṁ maṇḍalābhyarcite śive/ nāḍīsandhānarūpeṇa vidhinā yojayet tataḥ". (This latter verse belongs to Somaśambhupaddhati, pavitrārohaṇa 78c-79b (Brunner 1968:129).) In GOML MS R 14735, however, the quotation is followed immediately by iti śrīmatpauskarabalād, and then by the verse of the Somaśambhupaddhati. The ascription to a Pauskara is almost certainly secondary and an accident, since this prescription is again referred to in what follows (IFP MS T. 170, p. 112 and GOML MS R 14735, p. 77) as being a teaching of the Parākhya. In the anonymous Śivapūjāvidhivyākhyā* the unit is preceded by: yāgaśabdena maṇḍalam ucyate. kumbhasthaṇḍilavahniṣu pūjitaiḥ śivaiḥ ātmanā svena saha nāḍīsandhānaṁ kāryan tad uktaṁ parākhye.

Śivapūjāstavyākhyā p. 48 and IFP MS T. 962, p. 307 [3rd pagination] (where the quotation is prefaced by (tad uktaṁ parākhye) and Prabhāvyākhyā on the Kriyākramadyotikā p. 100 (where it is prefaced by tathā śrīmatparākhye):

उत्तमादित्रयाणां च दण्डः स्याद्विंशदङ्गुलः ॥ १०४ ॥

The last half-verse (104) is also quoted, with the same label, in Anantaśambhu's commentary on Siddhāntasārāvalī 67-8 (BGOML 18.2, p. 14).

Contrast this with Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha's quotation ad Mṛgendrakriyāpāda 6:40c-41b (p. 68):

तदुक्तं श्रीमत्पराख्ये
पञ्चाङ्गुलपरीणाहो दण्डः स्याद्विंशदङ्गुलः ॥ १०५ ॥ इति ।

And note that on the previous page ad kriyāpāda 6:38-40b what may be the second pāda of this same unit appears differently:

यथोक्तं श्रीमत्पराख्ये — दण्डस्य द्विदशाङ्गुल इति ।

Nārāyaṇakaṇṭha ad Mṛgendrakriyāpāda 4:5 (p. 42):

तथा चोक्तं श्रीमत्पराख्ये

उपांशुर्मध्यसिद्ध्यादौ स्वसंवेद्यलघुध्वनिः ।

(The first three pādas of the above are also cited ad caryāpāda 1:75-7 (p. 232.)

In IFP MSS T. 323 and 795 this is preceded by

And it is followed svatantrē 'pi vajrīkaraṇam astreṇa rekhās tisras tu pūrvagāḥ yāmyāt saumyamukhā tv eketi.

In IFP MSS T. 321 and T. 371 it is preceded by the verse attributed to the Sarvajñānottara, then tathā kālottare—astreṇollekhanam kuṇḍe varmaṇābhyukṣaṇam matam. It is there followed by tathā somaśambhuśivācāryair apy uktam (T321; °cāryair uttara T371) rekhātrayam udak kuryād ekām pūrvānanām atha kuśena śivamantreṇa yadvā tāsām viparyayaḥ.

The latter is verse 6 of Somaśambhu's agnikāryavidhi (Brunner 1963:235).

This is followed by āropitaśivādvaita ity uktaḥ paddhatāv api. But the quotation from the Parākhyā may have ended already with paramām gatim. The first verse cited is Śrutisūktimālā 135. The name Caturvedārthatātparyasaṅgraha, although used in the edition only of a commentary thereon, is evidently also a title of the Śrutisūktimālā of Haradatta, which is transmitted with the title Caturvedārthatātparyasaṅgraha, e.g., in IFP MS T. 374, pp. 2168–96 (where the verse quoted is numbered 133).

Somaśambhupaddhatiṭīkā GOML R 14735, p. 38 (prefaced by śrīmatparākhye), and Nirmalamāṇi's Kriyākramadyotikāprabhāvyākhyā (prefaced by tathā copadeśaḥ), p. 96:

This is followed in both sources by the following unattributed quotation icchāśaktimayīm mūrṭim kalpayet kāraṇasya tu. iti.

M. MISATTRIBUTIONS

There follows a short list of quotations attributed to the Parākhya that seem to me very unlikely to have belonged to it.

- 1.) prayoktryādi mahīprāntam etad aṇvarthasādhakam pratyātmanīyatam bhogabhedato 'py avasiyate/

This appears in the Śataratnasaṅgraha labelled as belonging to the Parākhya. It does not appear in Avalon's edition, but is one of the thirteen sūtras (No. 40e) missing from his manuscripts of which P. Thirugnanasambandhan provided a list in the appendix to his translation (1973:114). Thirugnanasambandhan based his text of these missing verses on a 17th-century Tamil translation of the text by Turaimangalam Śivaprakāśa-Svāmikaḥ (which he supplies in an appendix) and on a manuscript of the Tiruvāṇṭūrai Maṭha. Other MSS of the Śataratnasaṅgraha (e.g. IFP MS T. 112, pp. 558–576) also have these verses. Both Thirugnanasambandhan's MS and IFP MS T. 112 (p. 565) label this verse as belonging to the Parākhya, but it is in fact Mṛgendravidyāpāda 12:32b–33b.

- 2) yathā parākhye—

kaṇṭhodvalitacaitanyo vidyādarśitagocaraḥ rāgeṇa rañjitaś cāpi buddhyādikaraṇair yutaḥ māyādyavaniparyante tattvabhūtātma-vartmani bhunkte tatra sthitān bhogān bhogaikarasikaḥ pumān

Thus Siddhāntasūtravṛtti ad sūtra 5, pp. 33–4. But these verses are famously from the Svāyambhuvasūtrasaṅgraha (1:10–11). We must of course correct the first word to kalodbalitacaitanyo.

- 3) tathā śrīmatparākhye

śuddhayonimayaṁ tasya vapur uktam akarmajam

Thus the Prabhāvyākhyā on the Kriyākramadyotikā, p. 3. This is probably just a confusion of sources, for this half-verse is Kiraṇa 4:7cd. Exactly the same misattribution occurs in Trilocanaśiva's Somaśambhupaddhatiṭīkā* (IFP MS T. 170, p. 44) and in an anonymous Śivapūjāvidhivyākhyāna* (IFP MS T. 962, p. 58 [1st pagination], where the same unit is quoted prefaced by tad uktam śrīmatparākhye). It is not unlikely that the mistake is originally Trilocana's and that the other sources have followed him (as they appear to have followed him in other cases, e.g. fragment L:130 above).

This commentary on sūtra 18 of the Śātaratnasāṅgraha (= Parākhya 1:15) follows in most respects the text of the Calcutta edition (E_C). I have reported the variants given in that edition, as well as the two editions of the Mrgendravṛtti for the passages that the commentator has drawn from chapter 6 of that work, and also the 'readings' and conjectures of the Tanjore edition (E_T), whose Sanskrit preface (p. 3) tells us that, for its text of the Śātaratnollekhinī, it was based exclusively upon the Calcutta edition. The readings marked E_T^i are either variants recorded in footnotes or those incorporated into the text of E_T but followed by corrections in brackets. A number are simply mistakes in the copying of E_C .

4-15. अथ परार्थाश्चक्षुरादयः... देहव्यतिरिक्त आत्मा उपलक्ष्यते] Note that this entire passage (as Brunner has remarked, 1981, p. 122, fn. 107) is cribbed from the Mrgendravṛtti ad 6:4ab.

This is of course not intended as a comprehensive comparative account of measurements of length in tantric sources. I have gathered together and tabulated the accounts of units of measurement found in the early Siddhāntas, all of which are given in the context of cosmography with the exception of the account of the Kiraṇa (which gives units of measurement for its prescriptions on the making of images and accordingly stops with the vitasti). To these I have added the account from the beginning of the Svacchanda's cosmographical chapter, which may well have been based on Saiddhāntika accounts, and two Purāṇic accounts (see KIRFEL 1920:331ff for a fuller treatment of this topic in non-tantric sources). I have not quoted and tabulated the accounts of units of measure for building and making images that are to be found in what I believe to be relatively late South Indian Saiddhāntika works (Pūrva-Kāmika 16, Dīpta 6, Ajita-kriyā-pāda 12, Pūrva-Kāraṇa 7, Mayamata 5, etc.). Nor have I tabulated the measurements of other early sources such as the Arthaśāstra (2.20) and the Bakhsali MS (for which see HAYASHI 1995:114–6). A number of these passages can be compared in the apparatus to Ajita-kriyā-pāda 12 and in DAGENS' annotation to Mayamata 5 (1970:56–60). My reason for not incorporating these sources is that they introduce irrelevant classifications (such as that of the three types of aṅgula), my purpose here being to set the brief account of the Parākhya (5:2–4) in context.

A number of these passages quoted include variations upon the formula jālāntaragate bhānau..., which may derive from Manusmṛti 8:132 (\approx Vāyu U 39:118, for which see below). In the Manusmṛti the verse marks the beginning of an account of units of volume rather than of length. Since the passages below contain such verbal echoes of each other, and since the names of the stages are almost everywhere taken from the same objects and it is the degrees of multiplication in which we see the most variation, we may assume that the deviations are unlikely to have arisen from independent empirical attempts to establish units of measurement. They are likely rather to have arisen from redactors reading and then recasting passages of text describing the units with slightly differing misunderstandings. An account such as that of the Parākhya allows a rich variety of such misunderstandings, since most of its numbers are not named but expressed through riddling bhūtasamkhyā, the conventions of which vary.

As I have observed above (see fn. 479 on p. 279 above), the accounts presented below evidently do not assume a Vaiśeṣika ontology, in which atoms are the basic building blocks of the cosmos, and, as Kṣemarāja has observed (quoted in the same footnote), the atoms spoken of are not Vaiśeṣika atoms.

Mṛgendravidyāpāda 13:6–8.

The account that appears to be closest to Parākhya 5:2–4 is that of the Mṛgendra.

 dvikrośam āhur gavyūtiṃ dvigavyūtiṃ ca yojanam 8

Mataṅgavidyāpāda 24:1c–6b.

The Mataṅga's account diverges at the beginning, but from the likṣā onwards it agrees in essentials with the Parākhya and the Mṛgendra.

Kiraṇa 52:9–11.

The Kiraṇa's account of measurements is to be found in the context of its discussion of iconography rather than that of cosmography, and so its scale goes up only as far as a vitasti. The text of E_D by itself is, as for many parts of the work, incomprehensible.

¹ HULIN's translation (1980:290) suggests that he understood tantrisamṅgaṇaiḥ.

Svacchanda 10:13c–21b.

The opening of the Svacchanda's account is closest to that of the two Purāṇic sources cited below. The Svacchanda's account is in turn a modified version of Niśvāsa guhyasūtra 4:15ff (f. 51^v), which is so damaged and corrupt that it would be hard to interpret with the Svacchanda to lay beside it. The modifications that are to be found in (at least the printed version of) the Svacchanda consist in clarificatory rephrasing that avoids aśa usages.

GENERAL INDEX

No manner of indexing seems quite without flaws. I have opted here to give a pāda- or quarter-verse- index to the tantra, and a general index (ordered by the Roman alphabet) to the translations, annotations and introductory material. Liberties have been taken, in some places in an effort to get single concepts indexed under one term, in other places in an effort to break up large entries (typically those for much quoted works and authors).

It will be noticed that in some cases I have chosen to index under a Sanskrit term (e.g. buddhi) and in others under an English one (e.g. water). The former proceeding makes better sense when no English translation is quite adequate or when more than one has been used. The latter proceeding makes better sense when the same thing may be referred to by many words in Sanskrit (jala, ap, salila, udaka, vāri, toya, ka, etc.). The principal disadvantage of such an approach is a rather high degree of arbitrariness.

RÉSUMÉ FRANÇAIS

Le lecteur trouvera dans le présent ouvrage l'édition critique et la traduction annotée du Parākhya, précédées d'une introduction de 120 pages et suivies de quatre appendices, d'une bibliographie et de deux index. L'introduction vise à situer le Parākhya au sein du canon d'écritures révélées (tantra) du Śaiva Siddhānta et tente de dater le texte, concluant qu'il a probablement été rédigé au huitième ou au neuvième siècle. Elle examine brièvement la question du commentaire perdu du Parākhya, donne ensuite un résumé du contenu des huit chapitres du texte qui nous sont parvenus dans leur intégralité, fait quelques remarques à propos de l'usage particulier de la langue sanskrite dans ce texte et dans d'autres textes tantriques, souligne la rareté de l'œuvre et donc son importance, et s'achève sur une discussion détaillée des sources et de la méthodologie employées pour la constitution du texte.

L'édition critique se base sur le codex unicus de l'Oriental Research Institute de Mysore (M^Y), qui transmet les chapitres 1-6 et 14-15, ainsi que sur deux apographes partiels du vingtième siècle—provenant également de Mysore—qui conservent parfois des leçons récemment perdues du manuscrit ancien. Elle présente aussi les citations du Parākhya disséminées dans nombre d'ouvrages śivaïtes : un cinquième du texte transmis dans M^Y se trouve en effet cité dans divers commentaires, manuels de rituels, recueils et traités théologiques indépendants. L'auteur en présente à la fin de l'introduction une liste annotée qui tente de caractériser brièvement les ouvrages inédits ou peu connus.

Les notes substantielles qui accompagnent la traduction du texte justifient le choix des leçons transmises et le cas échéant celui des nombreuses corrections conjecturales proposées, et discutent des problèmes d'interprétation. Chaque hypothèse, qu'elle soit admise ou rejetée, y fait l'objet d'une présentation et d'un examen exhaustifs : le lecteur est ainsi mieux à même d'évaluer la portée des arguments et de formuler d'éventuelles critiques constructives.

L'appendice I rassemble les citations recueillies dans d'autres textes qui sont attribuées au Parākhya mais ne figurent pas dans le manuscrit de Mysore. Elles sont présentées avec leurs variantes et avec diverses propositions de corrections. L'appendice II offre une transcription diplomatique du manuscrit ; les divergences des deux apographes sont présentées en bas de page. L'appendice III contient le texte du commentaire anonyme (Śataratnollekhinī) au verset 18 du Śataratnasāṅgraha (= Parākhya 1.15), une anthologie de passages tantriques. L'appendice IV compare le système d'unités de mesure du Parākhya avec ceux que l'on trouve dans d'autres tantra et purana.

La teneur du texte—ou plutôt des parties du texte que transmet le manuscrit de Mysore—est principalement théologique. Si le chapitre 14 concerne la pratique du yoga, tous les autres traitent de questions théoriques telles que celle de la nature de l'âme et du Seigneur, de leur relation, de l'origine et de la nature du langage et des mantras, de la composition matérielle de l'univers, de la cosmographie ou encore du but des rites qu'enseigne Śiva. La description pratique de ces rites fait entièrement défaut. Les chapitres 7 à 13—qui constituent la partie perdue la plus importante de l'ouvrage—devaient décrire, entre autres, les rites quotidiens, les rites d'expiation, les initiations et les règles de comportement que les initiés doivent respecter.

Au début du premier chapitre (« L'âme »), Pratoda aperçoit Prakāśa dans un āśrama sur le Gange et lui demande de lui dispenser un enseignement. Cet enseignement, qui prend la forme du Parākhya, est défini, et les cinq sujets (padārtha) du tantra sont énumérés et décrits (1-10). Faisant suite à une évocation des techniques d'exégèse (11-14), le vers 15 donne une liste des attributs de l'âme qui tient lieu de programme au reste du chapitre.

Pratoda avance la réfutation de l'existence de l'âme formulée par les Cārvāka ; Prakāśa la rejette (16-27). Pratoda attaque la notion de l'âme depuis la perspective bouddhique selon laquelle toute chose est momentanée. Prakāśa rejette cette position en arguant du phénomène de la mémoire (28-35). L'omniprésence de l'âme est mise en question puis justifiée (36-9). Une sorte de monisme védantique est alors proposée puis rejetée (40-50). Pratoda suggère que l'âme doit être dépourvue de toute sorte de souillure. Prakāśa répond en démontrant la nécessité de postuler l'existence d'une souillure innée qu'on appelle mala et qu'il convient de distinguer d'autres souillures comme la passion (rāga) ou le karman (51-60). Pratoda propose de considérer que l'âme est par nature dépourvue de connaissance, mais qu'elle l'acquiert quand elle est liée au corps et aux organes des sens. En réponse, Prakāśa explique que c'est grâce à la connaissance innée de l'âme que celle-ci répond au stimulus du corps et des facultés (61-71). Pratoda met alors en question la position selon laquelle le karman est la racine de la diversité de l'univers ; Prakāśa la réaffirme (72-80). Pratoda demande si ce n'est pas le corps qui est responsable de ses actions plutôt que l'âme ; Prakāśa explique que l'âme est bel et bien responsable de ses actes et que le Seigneur fait en sorte que chaque âme obtienne les fruits de son propre karman (81-94), puis conclut (95).

Le deuxième chapitre (« Le Seigneur ») s'ouvre sur la liste des attributs du Seigneur (1). L'univers est-il un effet ? Prakāśa affirme que oui (2-11). Pratoda mentionne la position des Mīmāṃsaka selon laquelle l'univers n'a jamais changé, ainsi que la possibilité que le karman puisse être la cause de l'univers ; Prakāśa rejette les deux positions en insistant sur le fait qu'une cause sensible est requise et que le karman n'est pas sensible (12-19). Pratoda présente un dilemme formulé par les bouddhistes : l'activité de création n'a pu avoir lieu ni tout à la fois ni de façon graduelle ; Prakāśa réitère l'affirmation selon laquelle chaque effet est précédé par une cause, affirme que la création du Seigneur est à la fois simultanée et graduelle et enseigne que les effets sont produits par une combinaison de trois types de causes : la cause efficiente, la cause matérielle et les causes auxiliaires (20-30). La possibilité de produire des effets sans instrument externe est mise en évidence par les activités de la lune et du soleil ; l'« instrument » du Seigneur n'est autre que son pouvoir d'action ; bien que ce pouvoir (śakti) soit singulier, il est connu sous de très nombreux noms selon ses nombreuses fonctions (31-42). Neuf puissances (dont les noms dérivent du mantra VĀMADEVA) sont énumérées, ainsi que les Rudra qui les possèdent, et leurs noms sont « expliqués » par des étymologies affectives (nirvacana) (43-61). Le Seigneur est omniscient puisqu'il crée tout. Que son pouvoir de connaissance n'ait pas de support corporel n'empêche pas son exercice effectif : de même, le vent, pourtant sans support, secoue des branches (62-67b). L'âme libérée accède au même état de connaissance pure, autrement dit à l'omniscience et à l'omnipotence (67c-71b). C'est le Seigneur qui dispense l'enseignement grâce auquel on Le connaît, mais Prakāśa insiste sur le fait qu'il n'y a aucun problème logique de circularité. Selon lui, ce qu'on apprend à partir d'un moyen valide de connaissance (pramāṇa) n'a plus besoin d'être démontré par un autre pramāṇa. Si nous ne connaissons pas quelque chose par la perception directe, cela ne veut pas dire que cette chose n'existe pas : l'existence du Seigneur est donc établie ; on Le désigne par convention sous le nom Īśvara (71c-82). Son corps est constitué par les cinq brahma-mantra ; la forme qu'il adopte nous permet de l'adorer (83-88). Les noms des brahmantra sont expliqués par des étymologies affectives (89-95). Les distinctions entre le Dieu sans et avec forme (niṣkala/sakala) et entre le Seigneur engagé dans ses fonctions (adhikārin), engagé dans l'expérience (bhogin) ou au repos (layin) ne sont pas réelles au niveau de la réalité ultime (96-99b). La libération par le Seigneur dépend de la transmission continue de ses enseignements ; une « chute » de grâce divine descend sur une personne qui en est digne (et non pas parce que Śiva se montrerait partial à son égard) et celle-ci se met en quête un maître initiateur (99c-113). Śiva met en branle la création de l'univers pour pouvoir faire bénéficier de sa grâce les âmes liées : il « réveille » les mantra, ainsi que huit officiants nommés Vidyēśvara ; par leur pouvoir d'agir, ces êtres purs sont égaux au Seigneur, mais ils Lui sont assujettis et c'est en suivant Ses ordres qu'ils créent et maintiennent l'univers impur (114-28), Prakāśa conclut (129).

Le troisième chapitre (« Les textes révélés et l'univers pur ») s'ouvre sur une liste des sujets qui y sont abordés (1). Śiva « réveille » les huit Vidyēśvara au début de la création ; ceux-ci, à leur tour, « réveillent » le groupe des âmes dont la première s'appelle Gautā ; ce groupe « réveille » un groupe dont la première est nommé Bhava ; le savoir passe ainsi jusqu'aux dieux et aux hommes (2-6). Le Seigneur peut produire un enseignement bien qu'Il soit essentiellement dépourvu de forme ; les agents de la transmission de ce savoir en abrègent le contenu afin qu'il devienne compréhensible aux êtres humains (7-21). Pratoda évoque la position de la Mīmāṃsā selon laquelle le Veda fait autorité puisqu'il existe depuis toujours et n'a donc pas d'auteur (22). Prakāśa montre qu'aucun des six moyens de connaissance reconnus par les Mīmāṃsaka ne prouve que le Veda soit sans auteur (23-37). En revanche, l'un des trois critères qui permettent d'invalider l'autorité de quelque chose, à savoir le doute, s'applique au Veda (38-45). La littérature śivaïte fait autorité et dérive tout entière de la révélation de Śiva (46-56). Prakāśa raconte l'histoire de la genèse des sept myriades de mantra, leur répugnance devant l'univers et leur division par Ananta en deux groupes, dont l'un s'occupe de la gestion de l'univers tandis que l'autre atteint la libération absolue (57-72). Prakāśa explique quels mantras viennent de telle partie du corps du Seigneur (73-8) puis conclut (79).

Le quatrième chapitre (« La matière primaire et ce qui évolue à partir d'elle ») énumère d'abord les attributs de la matière primaire (māyā) (1-2). Celle-ci, extrêmement subtile, ne peut être perçue directement, mais les textes révélés et la raison nous permettent de la connaître : elle est la cause matérielle des tattva (3-20b). Au début d'une phase de création, le Seigneur la secoue pour qu'elle produise ses effets (20c-23). Le premier de ces effets est le pouvoir limité d'agir (kalā), qui ne permet qu'une révélation partielle du pouvoir inné de l'âme (24-9) ; à partir de cet effet évolue à son tour le pouvoir limité de savoir (vidyā) (30-6). Le troisième effet est la passion (rāga), qu'il faut distinguer de la qualité de l'intellect nommée avairāgya (37-44). Le quatrième et le cinquième effets sont le temps (kāla) et la nécessité morale (niyati) ; cette dernière fait en sorte que chaque âme éprouve les conséquences de ses propres actions (45-54). Cette nécessité agit sur l'âme liée, qui constitue la catégorie suivante (en tant que puruṣa-tattva) dans cette série de tattva (55-7). Du pouvoir limité d'action (kalā) procède une matière secondaire (prakṛti) (58-66). Le Seigneur joint les âmes avec ces effets (67-8). La catégorie guṇa (constituée par rajas, sattva et tamas) est le tattva qui procède de prakṛti (69-73). De ce dernier naît l'intelligence (buddhi), dans laquelle résident les huit dispositions morales que sont la rectitude, le savoir, l'absence de passion, la maîtrise et leurs contraires (74-93). L'« orgueil » (ahaṅkāra) dérive de l'intelligence ; il est divisé en trois types nommés Taijasa, Vaikṛta et Bhūtādi, dont le premier est la source des facultés des sens, le deuxième, la source des facultés d'action et le dernier, la source des cinq éléments subtils, d'où procèdent les cinq éléments grossiers (94-128). Pratoda évoque la possibilité que l'univers soit une transformation des éléments grossiers et non pas de māyā ; Prakāśa répond en réaffirmant la position śivaïte (129-38). Une objection bouddhiste consistant à affirmer que l'existence d'un objet externe ne peut être connue indépendamment de la connaissance de l'existence de l'objet externe et qu'il n'est donc pas nécessaire de postuler l'existence d'une réalité au-delà de la connaissance est évoquée puis rejetée (139-48). Les effets de māyā constituent un corps subtil qui permet la transmigration (149-51). Quand māyā est secouée, elle ne se transforme que partiellement (152-3). En elle réside un grand nombre d'âmes (154-7). Prakāśa expose la différence entre la souillure innée (mala) et māyā ainsi que leur relation (158-70) puis conclut (171-2).

Le cinquième chapitre s'attache à décrire le cosmos. L'épaisseur de la coquille de l'œuf cosmique qui contient tous les mondes—y compris le nôtre—dans le tattva de la terre est de dix mille yojana. Les mesures de longueur sont définies jusqu'au yojana (1-4). Le monde de Kālāgnirudra est situé un milliard de yojana au-dessus du fond de la coquille de l'œuf cosmique (5-10). Au-dessus de ce monde se trouvent les trente-trois groupes d'enfers (il y en a 140 au total) (11-34b). A leur tête, neuf millions de yojana au-dessus des enfers, règne Kūṣmāṇḍa (34c-40b). Les sept paradis souterraines (pātāla) se trouvent neuf cent mille yojana au-dessus du monde de Kūṣmāṇḍa et au-delà s'étend le monde de leur seigneur, Hāṭaka (40c-60). Au-dessus de celui-ci se trouve notre monde (bhūḥ), divisé en sept continents séparés par des océans concentriques, dont le dernier s'étend jusqu'à la frontière que forme le Lokāloka, la montagne circulaire au-delà de laquelle la lumière du soleil ne passe pas (61-109b). Cette montagne est elle-même entourée par l'océan du blanc de l'œuf (Garbhoda) borné par la coquille (109c-111b). Les dimensions de notre monde—seul endroit de l'univers où il soit possible d'accumuler les fruits de ses actions, tandis qu'ailleurs, on ne peut qu'éprouver ces fruits—sont spécifiées (111c-113). Le Bhuvārloka s'étend au-dessus de notre monde ; le soleil, la lune et les autres planètes s'y trouvent, jusqu'à l'Etoile polaire (114-29). Au-dessus se trouvent les mondes de Svar, Mahar, Jana, Tāpas et Satya, où règne Brahmā (130-138b). Quarante millions de yojana au-dessus de Brahmā se trouve Viṣṇu ; soixante millions au-dessus de ce dernier réside Śaṅkara ; vient ensuite le sommet de la coquille de l'œuf (138c-140). Les dix Rudras qui portent l'œuf sont nommés (141-4). Prakāśa donne une liste des Rudra qui règnent sur chacun des tattvas à partir de celui de l'eau jusqu'au tattva de māyā (145-155b). Après māyā, dans l'univers pur, Śaṃbara préside au tattva de la connaissance pure, Ananta à l'īśvara-tattva, Brahmā à celui de sadāśiva et au-delà de ce dernier règne Śiva (155c-161). Prakāśa conclut (162).

Le sixième chapitre est consacré aux mantra. Après une évocation du contenu du chapitre (1), Prakāśa explique qu'au moment de la création, le Seigneur secoue la « goutte » (bindu), une matière subtile sonique qui produit le syllabaire ; avec celui-ci—divisé en voyelles et en consonnes—le langage, base de communication, devient possible (2-8). Pratoda présente la position selon laquelle les sons de la parole produisent une puissance nommée sphoṭa qui est le véritable agent de la transmission du sens (9). Prakāśa rejette l'existence de ce sphoṭa : selon lui, le dernier son, accompagné des traces des sons précédents, révèle le sens ; ainsi, ce sont les sons mêmes de la parole qui permettent la communication mondaine (10-16). En réponse aux questions de Pratoda, Prakāśa précise que la relation entre la parole et le sens est sui generis, qu'une convention artificielle les lie et que Śiva a créé cette convention, non seulement pour le langage quotidien, mais aussi pour lier les mantra avec ce qu'ils « signifient » (17-28). Recourant à une terminologie calquée sur celle de la grammaire, Prakāśa explique la morphologie des mantra et donne les formes des mantra principaux du culte, ainsi que les inflexions (jāti) (29-39). Nous ne saurions qualifier la forme d'un mantra de « correcte » ou d'« incorrecte » : de même qu'il est possible dans l'usage mondain de créer de nouvelles conventions, de même Śiva a créé les conventions qui concernent les mantra (40-58). Pratoda introduit la thèse des Mīmāṃsaka selon laquelle les divinités ne sont que des mots ; Prakāśa la rejette (59-64). Pratoda présente un dilemme : si la divinité possède un corps, elle ne peut pas assister simultanément à plusieurs sacrifices ; mais si elle n'a pas de forme, comment peut-elle assurer le résultat d'un sacrifice (65-6) ? Prakāśa répond en affirmant que le Dieu peut prendre corps selon Son désir et que c'est bien Lui qui assure l'efficacité des rites (67-75). Quant à l'objection selon laquelle la divinité est invisible et donc inconnue, Prakāśa l'écarte en répondant que le paradis des Mīmāṃsaka l'est tout autant. Il conclut que le rite sacrificiel appartient au Seigneur (ity aiśvarī kriyā) et requiert l'utilisation des mantra (76-9). Après la conclusion de ce chapitre et du vidyāpāda, Prakāśa annonce qu'il entend traiter des rites (80-2).

Le quatorzième chapitre traite du yoga. A la liste des sujets du chapitre (1) succède l'évocation des lieux appropriés à la pratique du yoga, de l'état d'esprit requis, des positions possibles des jambes et de la posture de la partie supérieure du corps (2-9). Six auxiliaires nécessaires au yoga (yogāṅga) sont nommés (pratyāhāra, dhyāna, prāṇāyāma, dhāraṇā, tarka et samādhi) et caractérisés (10-17), après quoi la discipline des souffles est décrite (18-31). Ayant conquis les souffles, le yogin doit pratiquer les fixations (dhāraṇā), c'est-à-dire des méditations sur chacun des cinq éléments accompagnées par de rétentions mesurées du souffle (udghāta) (32-50). Ayant maîtrisé les souffles, le yogin doit pratiquer le yoga (51-2).

La variété des tubes du corps est évoquée et les tubes principaux situés autour du cœur sont nommés selon les protecteurs des directions correspondantes : quand l'âme se déplace du cœur dans l'un de ces tubes, elle prend la nature de la divinité de la direction dudit tube ; mais le « mouvement » de l'âme n'est pas un mouvement au sens propre du terme et c'est en fait le souffle (prāṇa) qui se déplace (53-70b). Les trois tubes principaux sont mentionnés (sans les termes techniques bien connus : iḍā, piṅgalā et suṣumnā) et associés respectivement à la lune, au soleil et aux deux planètes (70c-71). Suit la description de l'énonciation d'un mantra : le souffle part du cœur (siège de Brahmā), passe ensuite par la gorge (siège de Viṣṇu), par le palais (siège de Rudra), par l'espace entre les sourcils (siège de Īśvara), et parvient jusqu'au bout du nez, siège de Sadāśiva (72-82). Sont ensuite décrits les deux auxiliaires (yogāṅga) de la discrimination (tarka) et de la concentration mentale (samādhi) (83-85). Quand le yogin atteint au tattva suprême, il maîtrise huit pouvoirs surnaturels yogiques, dont il peut se servir pour inspirer la foi (86-104). A la description du suicide yogique (utkrānti) (105-7) succède la conclusion du chapitre (108).

Le quinzième chapitre, consacré à la délivrance et au moyen de l'obtenir débute par une annonce de son contenu (1). Les quatre moyens post-initiatiques pour obtenir la délivrance—le savoir (jñāna), les rites (kriyā), les observances religieuses (caryā) et le yoga—sont énumérés (2-10). Pratoda demande lequel est salvateur (11). Prakāśa explique d'abord qu'une première initiation introductrice (samayadīkṣā) autorise un néophyte à suivre ces moyens, mais que cette première initiation n'a pas le pouvoir de libérer l'âme. On comprend par conséquent que l'initiation [principale] ([nirvāṇa-]dīkṣā) soit le véritable moyen d'obtenir la délivrance : elle peut soit l'assurer seule (nirapekṣā) soit être secondée par des moyens post-initiatiques (sāpekṣā) (12-26). Si elle peut opérer seule, les autres moyens ne sont-ils pas inutiles (27) ? Prakāśa répond que ces moyens protègent l'image des śivaïtes dans la société : seuls les initiés qui sont incapables de suivre ces moyens, tels que les enfants, sont libérés de l'obligation de les observer (28-31). En réponse à une question de Pratoda, Prakāśa explique que les enfants, même s'ils ne manifestent pas eux-mêmes les signes d'avoir reçu une chute de grâce divine, peuvent bénéficier de l'initiation si d'autres personnes les font initier (32-5). Une initiation, correctement accomplie, mène toujours à la délivrance ; celui qui ne la reçoit pas mais en est digne obtient la délivrance après être rené sous la forme d'un Ru-dra (36-39b). Chacun des moyens post-initiatiques peut mener à terme à la délivrance, mais les suivre tous les quatre est une voie facile (39c-45). L'état de libération n'est pas une simple absence, puisqu'on y obtient les qualités du Seigneur (46-50). Celles-ci ne sont pas transférées dans l'âme au moment de la libération (51-6). L'absence du karman n'est pas suffisante pour donner lieu à l'état de libération, lequel doit être caractérisé de surcroît par un bonheur suprême (57-60). Les qualités du Seigneur ne surgissent pas non plus dans l'âme : innées, elles s'y trouvent déjà et y sont seulement révélées au moment de la libération (61-7). L'âme libérée est pure, complète, sans parti pris, sans rivalités, pleine de paix et de bonheur (68-71). Prakāśa raconte qu'il a reçu ce tantra, le Suprême, de Pārvatīpati, qui lui l'avait reçu de Dīpteśa (72) puis conclut (73).

The Parākhyatantra

A Scripture of the Śaiva Siddhānta

The rediscovery of a large part of the Parākhyatantra made possible by this edition furnishes one more document of the pre-tenth-century thought-world of the Śaiva Siddhānta, a religion that was spread across and beyond the Indian subcontinent at the probable time of this work's composition. For our text dates from the period before the appearance of the most significant body of theological exegesis in the history of the school, namely the writings of the tenth-century Kashmirian lineage of Bhatta Rāmakantha II. The addition of the Parākhyā to the still small corpus of published early Saiddhāntika writings should be a welcome event to the student of classical Indian religions.

What is presented here, however, is not the whole text but only those chapters of it that deal with doctrine and yoga. Those on ritual and other aspects of religious practice were left aside by the unknown compiler responsible for the selection of materials found in the unique codex – a beautiful palm-leaf manuscript in minute Nandināgarī script – and are therefore lost. Many quotations from the text have been located in later literature, and a fully positive apparatus reports the readings of all sources. A diplomatic transcription records features of the manuscript that the apparatus cannot contain (its orthographies, page- and line-breaks, etc.).

A complete English translation – the first to appear of an early siddhāntatantra – accompanies the Sanskrit text. Copious notes discuss textual difficulties and problems of interpretation. In doing so, they draw on parallels with other Saiddhāntika writings, both published and unpublished. The introduction places the Parākhyā in its context, gives a résumé of the work, characterises its language and concludes with a detailed discussion of the sources and of how they have been used.
